TANGLED CORD SENDS COOLEY'S AIRSHIP MODEL INTO CRASH AT DEMONSTRATION

The demonstration of a model of the super-safety airship invented by John F. Cooley of this city, which was proceeding very successfully in the state armory at Hartford Thursday afternoon, ran into misfortune when the pull-cord used to start the ship became twisted around one of the wings, bringing on a crash to the floor of the armory that broke two of the right hand spars.

The ship was not badly damaged, but the demonstration had to stop there and Mr. Cooley promises that when repairs are made and he is ready again the next demonstration will be an open-air test given on Chelsea Parade in this city.

Norwich men going to Hartford for the test and demonstration with Mr. Cooley were Howard L. Stanton, former fire chief, E. A. Rich, Archie R. Spalding, Henry S. Lyon, Arnold Smith, and John Richardson, secretary of the chamber of commerce. Two army men and a Hartford man were also present at the demonstration.

Mr. Cooley's invention is an absolutely new type self-correcting airplane of which he had constructed a model six and a half feet long to use in the demonstration. His claim for it is that it has a super-safety factor in its ability to level out from all positions, as its design is such that it will automatically bring itself to a level position in the air and cannot go into a nose dive or tailspin.

The model airship, or plane, was launched into the air by the pull of a shot-cord and allowed to show what it would do. It showed its ability in several straightaway flights, its well adjusted balance, lightness on the wing and ability to hover and glide. The operation of the self-correcting principle was demonstrated when the ship was shot into the air nose up, stalled and slid back until it was tail up, and then curved out to a level and came gently to the floor.

Demonstrations of taking off were also given with much success. At the first attempt the ship took off with a run of about nine feet, and in two other attempts with runs of seven feet, which was practically a take-off within its own length.

The mishap which ended the demonstration came when about to show the operation of the self-correcting principle with the ship flying upside down. The propulsion cord caught and twisted around a wing so that the ship was brought to the floor in a crash.

Mr. Cooley said Thursday night that the full-size ship of his design will be 200 feet long and will be of the fast express class. He has been instrumental in forming the Triumvirate Super-Safety Aircraft, Inc., an all-Norwich enterprise, with authorized capital of $50,000, consisting of 500 shares of 8 per cent cumulative preferred stock, par $100, with special protective conditions, and 2,000 shares no par common stock with voting power. The incorporators are E. A. Rich, H. S. Lyon, Howard L. Stanton, Frank Hempstead, Thomas Savard and Charles W. Taggart, all of this city.

SLEEPERS AT WHEEL MAY NEVER WAKE UP

Several drivers were killed and more than 50 were in serious accidents last year because they fell asleep at the wheel while driving motor vehicles in Connecticut, according to the records of the Connecticut department of motor vehicles. Inspectors of the department also report that at this time of the year many fences along the highway show marks of collision. While there are many reasons why cars run into fences, it is a fact that some fences are ruined because drivers go to sleep.

Comment on this danger was made by Commissioner Robbins B. Stoeckel in an article read Thursday afternoon from WTIC at Hartford, as part of a program being conducted in the interest of highway safety.

"The movement of an automobile is inducive to slumber with some people," the commissioner said. "It has happened frequently that persons otherwise alert will drop off an instant after driving a car too long. Each operator ought to consider this particular danger, and remember that he has a limit of endurance, even if the machine has not. Watch yourself, and also watch for those people for whom you are responsible and see that nobody who is tired is allowed to drive. Remember that if you fall asleep at the wheel you may never wake up."

MIDDLE WEST HEAT WAVE CAUSES NEARLY 80 DEATHS

Grim Reaper Sweeps Mississippi Valley, As Mercury Climbs As High As 112 Degrees—Twenty-Four Deaths In Missouri, Ten In Minnesota and Dakotas and Half Dozen Others In Illinois—More Than 1,000 Horses Killed By Heat—Two Men Committed Suicide In Omaha—Little Liklihood of Relief Before Tonight.

CHICAGO, July 11—(AP)—Almost four score persons have died in the middle west in the past three days as a result of the extremely hot weather.

The heat was blamed tonight for 25 deaths in the last three days in Iowa; 24 in Missouri, at least eight in Illinois, ten in Minnesota and the Dakotas, three in Nebraska and two in Kansas.

Temperatures over the area remained around 100 degrees and there was little likelihood of relief before tomorrow night.

Two deaths attributed to the heat in Omaha were suicides of men who killed themselves rather than undergo another day of torturous temperatures.

The hottest unofficial temperature reported was in Sikeston, Mo., where readings were as high as 112. Other parts of Missouri reported 102 and thereabouts. In Omaha the reading was 100. Iowa farmers were experiencing a heavy loss in livestock, more than 1,000 horses having been claimed by rendering plants.

Parts of Illinois had temperatures ranging up to 105 but in Chicago a lake breeze kept the mercury down to below 80 and in Milwaukee it was only 79.

ST. LOUIS DEATH TOLL REACHES 17

ST. LOUIS, July 11—(AP)—A torrid heat wave continued is siege on St. Louis today and the death toll in the metropolitan area for the last two days reached 17 as the mercury soared above the 100 mark. Twenty-three have died in the last week.

Roscoe Nunn, government weather forecaster, said no relief was in sight for the next 48 hours.

Yesterday's maximum temperature in St. Louis was 103 degrees at 3:45 p. m. and the temperature had reached 104 at 3 p. m. Today the heat is the worst on record here for 30 years.

KELLOGG NAMED FOR WORLD COURT JUDGE

GENEVA, July 11.—(AP)—The name of Frank B. Kellogg, former American secretary of state and co-author of the Kellogg-Briand peace pact, and of several other Americans are included in nominations lately sent here for the new panel of world court judges.

Nominations recently have grown more abundant, for the new panel is to be elected by the league council in September. In accordance with the world court statutes they are made by "national groups" generally composed of representatives of those groups at The Hague court of arbitration.

Mr. Kellogg was named by the Danish National group and it is expected that as a tribute to one of the authors of the Paris pact other groups also will name him.

James Brown Scott, lawyer, educator and international jurist, of Washington, D. C., has been nominated by the Cubans. He was delegate to the sixth Pan-American congress in Havana in 1928.

Charles Cheney Hyde, professor of international law and diplomacy at Columbia university, New York, was nominated by the Dutch.

Mr Scott and Prof. Hyde were nominated to fill the vacancy on the court bench caused by the resignation of Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes. This runs only until the new year, when the entire new panel elected in September will take their seats for the nine year terms.

The American group, composed of Newton D. Baker, Roland Boyden, John Basset Moore and Elihu Root, have not sent their nominations, from which the other countries will take their cue as to the American favorite.

All the nominations are due to be in before August 12.

CHAPLAIN OF THE 101ST INFANTRY DIED YESTERDAY

LEBANON, N. H., July 11.—(AP)—To the World war list of "died of wounds" add the name of Rev. Lyman Rollins. He died here today, a hero for whom there had been no armistice.

As a chaplain who followed his charges of the 101st infantry, 26th division, wherever they went, Rev. Mr. Rollins had returned home with three medals for distinguished service. But his adherence to the call of duty had brought him three gassings, two wounds and a nervous system permanently damaged by shock. But it was the gas which took its toll today.

He was born in Concord, N. H., in 1861 and was graduated from Bates college, Newton Theological seminary and Cambridge Episcopal seminary.

As chaplain of the 101st, he spent 21 months in the front line trenches of France with the "Yankee division." France was the first to reward him.

Mr. Rollins tried hard to resume his ministerial duties but after a short time at Marblehead, he was forced to resign and came to Canaan, N. H., to regain his health. A short time later he accepted the pastorate of St. Paul's Episcopal church at White River Junction, making his home here.

HAWKS ESCAPED INJURY WHEN HIS MYSTERY PLANE FELL

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—Immediately after he crashed in his mystery plane at Wichita, Kas., today, Frank M. Hawks telephoned to the Texas company here, sponsors of his projected round trip speed flight across the country.

He said he was "all right," not even mentioning cuts he was reported from Wichita to have suffered in the crash. He said he engine cut out while he was up and that he tried to come down to a dead stick landing. This would probably have been successful but his landing gear caught on some electric wires, plunging the plane to earth.

The company said Hawks was authorized to begin repairs to the plane at once and carry through his cross country program as soon as possible.

MAN'S BODY FOUND IN BRIDGEPORT HARBOR

BRIDGEPORT, July 11—(AP)—The body of an unidentified man was found floating in Berkshire pond section of the local harbor this afternoon. He was 48 to 50 years of age, dressed in working clothes and Medical Examiner H. B. DeLuca said the man had been dead about a week.

LIGHTNING STARTED OVER SIXTY FOREST FIRES

MISSOULA, Mont., July 11—(AP)—Forests of Montana, northern Idaho and Wyoming today were spotted with burned areas a sthe result of a terrific lightning storm which started more than 60 fires yesterday.

District forestry officials said scouts and rangers had been able to control all of the blazes so far.

National Guard troops sent to the Laramie peak country succeeded in bringing under control two fires in that region which had burned over 1,000 acres of timber land. One hundred and twenty men fought the flames throughout the night.

Rains around Great Falls, Mont., extinguished all blazes in that vicinity.

Fear of further outbreaks at the scene of the French Creek fire in the Medicine Bow National forest was materially lessened when a shower drenched the area. The blaze, which started June 30, destroyed 3,500 acres of timber.

In Wyoming several fires kept fighters busy before they were brought under control.

Fire Chief Howard Flint reported no fires of consequence after an air patrol over the Missoula forest and the Blackfeet Protective association area.

Lightning caused 41 fires in the Bitter Root valley, but the situation was reported under control.

An observer on Mount Jumbo, east of here, reported counting 238 lightning bolts yesterday, 188 of which struck the ground.

ARCHDUKE LEOPOLD IN TOMBS ON FRAUD CHARGE

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—An archduke, scion of one of the oldest royal houses in Europe, went to jail today voluntarily, because he is in a hurry to get back to Vienna where, he said, there is a movement to replace his family on the Austrian throne.

As plain Leopold Hapsburg—a name that emperors bore—he was held in the Tombs, charged with taking part in the fraudulent sale to a New York jeweler of a historic diamond necklace that belonged to his aunt, the Archduchess Maria Theresa of Austria.

Napoleon gave the necklace to his empress, the Hapsburg Maria Louisa on the birth of their only son, the little Duke of Reichstagt, and, although it is said to be worth nearly $500,000, it was sold here last winter for $60,000.

The Archduke Leopold, indicted with Col. and Mrs. Charles L. Townsend, who are charged with actually having sold the necklace, was at liberty until today under $7,500 bail. His trial was set for October.

But today he asked a general sessions court judge to set his bail aside. Being in prison, he may be tried this summer because prison cases are given the preference here during the hot months.

After he had explained his reasons to Judge Rosalsky, he was told he must take his turn with the rest.

DEPOSITIONS READ AT STEEL MERGER HEARING

YOUNGSTOWN, O., July 11—(AP)—Trial of the injunction suit to halt merger of the Youngstown Sheet and Tube company with Bethlehem Steel corporation settled to the dullness of deposition today before adjourning over the week end.

Most of the depositions—read into the record by anti-merger attorneys representing the Cyrus S. Eaton interests, concerned the stock transactions which took place during the spring proxy battle over the merger and were presented in an effort to show much of the stock was illegally voted at the stockholders' meeting April 8, this year.

CHILD SHOT BROTHER WHILE PLAYING "COPS"

THOMPSONVILLE, July 11—(AP)—Arthur Cote, six, shot his brother, Matthew, nine, in the hip today with a .22 calibre rifle while the boys were playing "cops and robbers" in their yard. Matthew was taken to a Springfield hospital.

Arthur obtained the rifle at his home to lend realism to the game. Following the shooting, which police held was accidental, he threw the weapon in a nearby pond.

WOMAN ATTACKED AND KILLED BY NEGRO

SHAMROCK, Tex., July 11—(AP)—Mrs. Henry Vaughan, 27, was criminally attacked and killed by a Negro near here today. The Negro, Jesse Lee, said to have been employed on the farm, was arrested and taken to Granite, Okla., for safe keeping.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

BERLIN, July 11—(AP)—Rumors originating in Rome that Italy had unofficially approached Germany for pledges of neutrality in case of a Franco-Italian war tonight, were officially denied in government circles.

SIMLA, India, July 1—(AP)—A move by the Indian government to enlist the cooperation of Mahatma Gandhi and other nationalist leaders in the London round table conference on India next October was deduced by many observers today from a speech in the legislative assembly by Sir Hugh Cocke, leader of the European group.

Sir Hugh said that if possible, members of the all-India congress would be brought into the conference.

POLICE CAPTAIN DESCRIBES "VANITIES" FAN DANCE

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—A gray haired police officer of dignified mien took off his horn-rimmed glasses in old Jefferson Market court today and offered to perform a fan dance if Earl Carroll would furnish the fans.

The officer was acting Captain James J. Coy, theatrical critic of the police department, and he was testifying against Carroll, a stage comedian and eight comely show girls whom he had charged with staging an indecent performance.

He told of buying an $11 ticket to the Carroll "Vanities" and watching four scenes which he considered entirely inoffensive. But then came the fifth scene, a daisy field in which there lay numerous young ladies waving fans.

"Into this scene," Coy continued, "danced Faith Bacon, waving before her two large ostrich feather fans."

"Do you identify this defendant as Faith Bacon?" the prosecutor asked, motioning to Miss Bacon, where she sat with the other show folk inside the rail, to rise.

Miss Bacon, a blonde in summer furs and a wide brimmed lavender hat, took a bow.

"That's her," said Coy. "She danced with these two fans waving in front of her and when she turned to leave the stage I saw that she was nude from the nape of her neck to the soles of her feet."

Under cross examination Coy insisted that he was positive Miss Bacon was not wearing flesh colored tights, although he acknowledged that the lights were dimmed during the scene and that a gauze curtain hung between the dancer and the audience.

"But while she was facing the audience you had no idea that she was undraped?" defense counsel asked.

"She kept herself covered with the fans," Coy replied, "passing first one and then the other in front of her. If the fans are here I'll show you how it was done."

Miss Bacon smiled and a titter ran through the crowded courtroom. Magistrate Maurice Gotlieb banged for order and threatened to clear the court.

Captain Coy, not pressing his offer to give a terpsichorean performance, continued to tell of the other act to which he objected. In that act the stage was set to resemble a show window in which five wax models were impersonated by showgirls. An actress was teaching Jimmy Savo, comedian, how to dress a window, and at her directions he removed stockings and otherwise altered the raiment of the living models.

The hearing was adjourned until next Tuesday, with Capt. Coy the only witness called so far.

ULRICH TO BRING HIS WIFE FROM GERMANY

WASHINGTON, July 11—(AP)—John Munsill Ulrich, World war veteran of New Haven, Conn., who married a German girl barred from this country on charges involving moral turpitude, is going to bring his wife home.

A special act of congress signed by President Hoover will permit the veteran to bring his wife from Berlin to this country. During the starvation days of the World war in Germany, Mrs. Ulrich, then a school girl, was found guilty of taking a loaf of bread from her schoolmates.

Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the republican leader, who sponsored the legislation to permit the young woman's entry, received a cablegram today from the husband saying:

"My heartfelt thanks to you who introduced the bill and championed its cause. We will not forget it. John Ulrich."

It was understood at Mr. Tilson's office that Ulrich would bring his wife home soon. They were married in December, 1927, and waged a three year contest for the bride's admission into the United States.

Convicted "Attic Lover" Is Freed

Court Grants Defense Motion That Statute of Limitations Nullified Jury's Verdict.

LOS ANGELES, July 11—(AP)—Otto Sanhuber, who as the "attic lover" of Mrs. Walburga Oesterreich, was convicted of the manslaughter eight years ago of her husband, Fred, wealthy manufacturer, was freed today when the state concurred in a defense motion that the statute of limitations had nullified the jury's verdict, returned a week ago.

The motion was presented as Sanhuber appeared in superior court for sentence.

Defense said the statute of limitations outlawed manslaughter if no prosecution is made within three years. The state admitted this, and Judge Hardy freed Sanhuber.

Sanhuber was tried for murder but the jury's verdict was manslaughter. Mrs. Oesterreich is awaiting trial for murder. The slaying occurred in August, 1922, during a quarrel between the Oesterreichs. Sanhuber intervened and shot the husband.

At the trial he testified he lived for many years in secret garret nooks of Oesterreich homes here and in Milwaukee as the widow's clandestine lover.

SCORES INJURED IN CLASHES AT BOMBAY

BOMBAY, July 11—(AP)—Four attempts by civil disobedience volunteers to form a procession forbidden by the police resulted in clashes today between the authorities and the volunteers, in the course of which nearly 100 nationalists were injured.

Most were only slightly hurt, but the free hospital, operated by the congress party, reported a number seriously wounded.

The procession was intended as sympathetic demonstration for the 18 Gharwali soldiers court martialed at Peshawar when they disobeyed orders during the recent troubles. Each attempt to form in line was broken up by the police, who charged the volunteers with staves.

The troubles began when some 50 volunteers attempted to form a procession in a twelve acre square in front of the municipal building. Police sergeants ordered their leader to disperse the crowd, but when he refused, the sergeants charged, using canes and rubber whips resembling black snakes.

A few minutes later, 70 or 80 Sikhs marched into the center of the square. They, too, were charged by the sergeants and followed up by native police.

Some 36 Sikhs were injured. The rest squatted in the pavement and had to be carried bodily to the sidewalk, where they continued sitting far more than three hours.

At intervals of an hour further attempts were made to form a line, but all were broken up by the police. Though the military force was held in reserve, it was not called into service

MEAKLE DEAD FROM SELF-INFLICTED WOUND

PATERSON, N. J., July 11—(AP)—Roderic Meakle, 28-year-old violinist, whom prosecutor's detectives charged with the murder of Jennie Brauer, 22, in a death pact, died this afternoon at St. Joseph's hospital.

Meakle had been in the hospital, a bullet hole in his head, since early last Sunday, when he was found staggering through the underbrush near Echo lake close by the car where the girl's body was found.

Police alleged Meakle killed the girl and then shot himself. An investigation revealed that Meakle was married and that his wife had refused to give him up for Miss Brauer. Miss Brauer won honors in Germany, her native country, as a swimmer.

Meakle has spoken only twice at the hospital since he was brought there. He became conscious for a moment yesterday, opened his eyes and said "Tomorrow, I am going to see my father and mother." A few days ago, while semi-conscious, he muttered, "She made me do it."

Locomotive Exploded Scalding Three Men

One Trainman Killed, Two Injured When Engine Blew Up Near Petersburg, Va.

PETERSBURG, Va. July 11—(AP)—One trainman is dead and two others are seriously injured in a Petersburg hospital as the result of an explosion of a seaboard air line express freight locomotive near here late today.

The dead: Fred D. Drewry, Raleigh, N. C.

The injured, Fireman S. S. Taylor, Middletown, N. C., both legs broken, body burns and scalded; and Brakeman S. S. Wiggins, address unknown, seriously burned and scalded. Hospital attaches held hope for their recovery.

Drewry died two hours after the engine exploded and ten cars of the northbound freight piled up at a crossing a mile south of here on the main line.

Drewry, Wiggins and Taylor were in the engine cab and were hurled clear of the wreckage

Sparks set fire to the derailed cars and flames enveloped several cars. Petersburg firemen were forced to resort to dynamite to scatter the burning mass, when it was found no water connections were available.

Two other members of the train crew, Conductor S. S. Wheeler and Trainman E. P. Logan, both of Petersburg, in the caboose of the 50 car train, escaped injury.

The blast shattered the engine and tender, and hurled wreckage hundreds of feet.

Logan said he heard two explosions before the ten derailed cars plowed along the track for several hundred yards.

An official investigation was planned to determine the cause of the explosion.

MacDonald was one of the principal state witnesses at the trial at which Mooney and Warren K. Billings were convicted of the bombing that cost ten lives, and were sentence dto life imprisonment. MacDonald testified he had seen the two men place a suitcase near the scene of the explosion.

Five years later while working at Trenton, N. J., MacDonald signed a statement indicating that he was not positive of his identification of Mooney and Billings.

"A Straight Line Is the Shortest Distance . . ."

You need a flash light or an alarm clock. That's one point in a common geometrical problem. Somewhere a manufacturer is making, a store is offering for sale, exactly the flash light or alarm clock you should have. That's the second point in your private problem .... And advertising is the straight line that shows the shortest distance between the two!

Day after day, in the advertising pages of The Bulletin, you will find straight lines drawn direct to the products you need. Look for them. Follow them. They may save you hours of searching.

And more than time, they'll save you money. Advertised products are those whose honest worth has made them popular. Merchants and manufacturers who advertise regularly have passed the public's test of fair dealing and reliability. JOHNSON SCORES HOOVER MESSAGE DENYING PAPERS

Californian Demanded That the Senate Take Action Against Chief Executive's Message Refusing to Submit Secret Documents Exchanged Prior to Negotiation of the London Naval Treaty—Pres. Hoover Reiterated That There Were No Secret Or Concealed Understandings In London Negotiations — Senator Norris Offers First Reservation to the Pact.

WASHINGTON, July 11 — (AP)— President Hoover's refusal today to give the senate all the notes leading up to the London naval conference provoked the introduction of the first reservation to the treaty and drew a spirited denunciation.

Around the reservation—offered by Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska —there was gathering tonight considerable strength and upon this issue may be made either the big attempt to reject the treaty or to postpone its consideration until fall.

It was Senator Johnson, republican, California, leader of the treaty opposition, who assailed the presidential message and called upon the senate to take action against the "lashing." He did not mention what action and it was understood he meant rejection of the treaty.

Mr. Hoover invited the members of the senate to scrutinize for themselves the London documents under pledge of secrecy but he said their publication or use in debate would amount to a "breach of trust" by himself with the other nations.

He reiterated "with the utmost emphasis" that in the London negotiations "there were no secret or concealed understandings, promises or interpretations, nor any commitments whatever except as appear in the treaty itself."

The Norris resolution, which was offered immediately after the presidential message was read to the senate, called attention to the failure of the senate to get all the London data and concluded:

"Be it resolved by the senate that in ratifying the said treaty the senate does so with the distinct and explicit understanding that there are no secret files, documents, letters, understandings or agreements which in any way, directly or indirectly, modify, change, add to or take from any of the stipulations, agreements or statements in said treaty; and that the senate ratifies said treaty with the distinct and explicit understanding that there is no agreement, secret or otherwise, expressed or implied, between any of the parties to said treaty as to any construction that shall hereafter be given to any statement or provision contained therein."

While Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, one of the delegates to London, indicated his disaproval of the Norris resolution, Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee and other treaty proponents withheld judgment pending a study.

Before Mr. Hoover stirred the senate with his firm message of refusal, the debate on the treaty developed one of the sharpest exchanges of the week, with Senator Reed replying to a severe attack upon the pact made by Senator Hale, republican, Maine, chairman of the naval committee.

The Reed-Hale clash saw two administration republicans in action against each other and the engagement was marked by the use of numerous tables and figures relating to the technical side of the navy. Each is an expert on naval affairs.

It was Senator Johnson, however, who touched off the fireworks that held the weary senate membership to attention as he lashed out against Mr Hoover's message. He also called for an end of members of the senate participating hereafter in the negotiation of treaties, pointing to Senator Reed.

"This message," he thundered, referring to the Hoover refusal, "calls for more than denunciation. It calls for action. It calls for an assertion of a manhood by this senate that raises the head high. We ought not supinely to permit such a message to go by without action.

"It may be that the glory that was once that of a United States senator has faded into insignificance and that we shall submit to the lashing. But if there are men in this body with the spirit of those old patriots who wrote this country's history in the sky of everlasting fame, they will not take lying down the lashing that has been handed to them in asking for the documents which they have a right to see.

"Tell me, sir, that we shall not have those things before us that are going to destroy our navy. What is it that here we are met with? Secret diplomacy—the old world diplomacy. It is back again."

There was some division of opinion among the treaty advocates on the Norris resolution. Some indicated it would be acceptable if the preambles relating to the refusal of Mr. Hoover to transmit the papers were eliminated.

In the end, the senate recessed over the week-end, giving the debate weary senators their first let-up since the special session began.

PREMIER TARDIEU AGAIN ROUTS THE OPPOSITION

PARIS, July 11—(AP)—Premier Tardieu's foes returned to the attack tonight and once more the spirited Prime Minister triumphed, routing the opposition for the fourth time in three days on a vote of confidence that stood at 316 to 268. Having won the day, M. Tardieu adjourned parliament.

Veering from the subject of the penalties imposed upon striking post office workers which precipitated yesterday's crisis, the radicals today challenged the department of finance and other subordinate administrative divisions of the government.

The issue came after a long discussion of a radical interpallation on the manner in which the government proposed to lighten what the opposition alleged to be an excessive financial burden upon the departments, cities and communes, a part of which it was held by the opposition the state ought to shoulder.

M. Tardieu accepted the battle as offered by his political antagonists, posing a question of confidence on their resolution.

The resolution tersely invited the government to bring about the necessary reforms. The prime minister rejected it because it did not express confidence in the government.

The subject was cleverly chosen because it placed a large number of M. Tardieu's supporters in an embarrassing situation with reference to their rural constituencies, which might expect to benefit from a reform such as demanded by the radicals.

The attacks, however, lacked the vital element of confidence to carry them through, and the premier replied with his usual assurance which carried the day.

The premier repulsed one attack yesterday by 66 votes. He had as comfortable a margin in the others. Three different questions have been used for the purpose of unseating his cabinet since Tuesday.

The parliamentary session nomally would have ended Saturday.

FUNERAL RITES FOR SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE

WINDLESHAM, England, July 11—(AP)—A wife's tribute to her dead husband and an explanation of her family's attitude toward death constituted the funeral oration read today over the body of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle in the garden of his Sussex home, where many of his Sherlock Holmes tales were penned.

A blazing sun beat down upon the garden and on the deep red roses strewn over the coffin and pelted the little group of mourners who, in accordance with their spiritualistic belief, displayed no outward trappings of woe, while the Rev. Dr. C. Drayton Thomas stood by the grave and read Lady Doyle's testimony of affection and faith.

"Sir Arthur will continue his work for the spreading of the great cause which soothes the anguished heart and which is destined to change the whole outlook of human affairs," read the commitment. "God bless him for his beautiful and unselfish life, for his courage and fearlessness, for his never failing championship of those suffering under injustice and for the help he gave to those who were in sorrow.

"No thought of self touched his daily life. No man more truly and faithfully walked in his master's footsteps."

Dennis Conan Doyle, eldest son, was kept away from the funeral by illness but Lady Doyle, her two daughters and her son Adrian were present. The Rev. Dr. C. C. Angell, the novelist's brother-in-law, assisted Dr. Thomas. Sir Gilbert Parker, Author's club chairman, and several others, motored from London to honor their departed friend.

BROOKLYN MAN MAY BE BROUGHT BACK FOR TRIAL

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 11—With the finding of criminal negligence by Coroner J. Gilbert Calhoun of Hartford county, in the case of Edward W. Smith, Jr., of Brooklyn, N. Y., who was fined for reckless driving in the Andover town court some time ago the possibility now is that Smith may be extradited from New York state. If extradited, Smith will face a charge of criminal negligence in an accident at Andover, May 26, in which Vincent Ginkus, 18, of Worcester, Mass., who was riding with him, was fatally injured. Ginkus died June 2 in the Manchester Memorial hospital, placing the case within the jurisdiction of the Hartford county coroner.

On the night of the accident Smith was arrested on charges of reckless driving and driving drunk. June 15 he was presented before Justice of the Peace Ruth Benton of Andover, who nolled the drunken driving charge and imposed a fine of $50 and costs for reckless driving. Smith pleaded nolle contendre to the latter charge.

This disposition of the case by the justice court while a coroner's investigation was still in progress was characterized as 'unusual' by State Attorney Thomas F. Noone of Tolland county, to whom the matter was referred by Lieutenant Russell I. Harmon of the Stafford Springs state police barracks.

Grand Juror Clarence G. Ketchum of Andover states that Coroner Calhoun told him to proceed with the court trial without waiting for the result of the inquest, which result came as a complete surprise to the grand juror. Mr. Ketchum said that the hospital doctor and the Manchester police had told him that they were willing to testify that Smith was not under the influence of liquor and these statements led him to ask for a nolle of that charge.

HENRY STEINFIELD, N. Y., INJURED AS CAR LEAVES ROAD

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, July 11—Henry Steinfield of 114 E. 168th street, New York, is a patient at the Johnson Memorial hospital where he was taken Friday afternoon following an automobile accident on the Union road. It is thought that Steinfield's car was going at a fast rate of speed and left the highway at a bend in the road, overturning and causing serious injuries to the operator. The state police from the local barracks were unable to ascertain the identity of the man but the registration of the car and operator's license found on his person indicate that he is Steinfield.

Jack Scanlon, catcher of the Stafford baseball tam when it was a member of the old Bi-State Baseball league, called on friends in the borough Friday.

CORONER FIXES BLAME FOR DEATH OF GEO. AVERY

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, July 11—The finding of Coroner John H. Yeomans, filed Friday morning, shows that the death of George Avery, 18, of Rockville, killed in an automobile accident in Stafford on the night of June 29th, was caused solely by the negligence and carelessness of John Kashady, operator of the car in which Avery was riding. The coroner finds that Avery was riding in the rumble seat of a model A 1929 Ford coupe driven by John Kashady, of Rockville. The party was traveling from Manchester to Stafford, by way of Vernon Center and Crystal lake. Passing through the section of Stafford known as Forestville the highway curves slightly to the south, just west of the house of George Magura. When the car driven by Kashady came to this curve, it failed to make the turn but continued in a nearly straight course across the road, the left wheels leaving the surface of the highway at a point 40 feet west of pole No. J719 of the Rockville-Willimantic Lighting company. The car continued off the highway for about 100 feet then sideswiped a small apple tree about 10 feet from the edge of the highway. Twenty-two feet beyond the apple tree the car struck pole No. J718 which was about ten inches in diameter and snapped the pole off even with the ground. The car continued 60 feet beyond the pole coming to rest a few feet from the Magura house. Avery's head was apparently thrown against the metal in front of the rumble seat, which resulted in a stellate fracture of the right frontal bone of the skull and a fracture at the base of the skull.

He was removed to the Johnson Memorial hospital at Stafford where he died about six hours after. The explanation offered by the driver of the car for leaving the road was that he fell asleep. The other occupants of the car were not paying any attention to the operation of the car and did not know what caused the mishap.

There was evidence that some time before the accident occurred the car was traveling at a very high and dangerous rate of speed. The distance which the car travelled after leaving the road, and the damage which it did to the tree and pole indicate that this speed was maintained up to the time of the accident.

It is impossible to determine whether the speed of the car was so great that the driver could not keep it on the road, or whether his attention was diverted from the operation of the same by drowsiness or some other cause.

There is no evidence that any external force or object contributed to the accident.

I find that said death was caused solely by the negligence and carelessness of said John Kashady in the operation of the car.

JOHN H. YEOMANS, Coroner.

LITTLE STORIES OF FAST SUCCESSES (NUMBER FIVE) EARL SANDE

The first race horse he ever saw was hitched to the tailboard of a prairie schooner. Two years later, every track in America resounded to that famous cry, "C'm on Sande!" He always gave the public the best run for its money.

That's the reason, too, for OLD GOLD'S quick success. OLD GOLD gives the public a run for its money. Made of nature-blessed tobaccos, it offers you the taste-thrill you've always longed for . . . it eliminates the throat-hack you've always hated.

Explain Sande or OLD GOLD? Sandes and OLD GOLDS are born . . . not made.

IT WAS JUST TWO YEARS AFTER HE SAW HIS FIRST RACE HORSE THAT SANDE WAS CROWNED "EARL" OF AMERICAN JOCKEYS.

DANIELSON

ANOTHER RICH SEIZURE OF LIQUOR AT PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 11—Another pair of rum-runners fell into the hands of State Officers John Murphy and Henry Mayo of the Danielson barracks in Plainfield about 5.30 this morning and their sporty car yielded up $1600 worth of choice liquors. It is now reposing in a locked vault at the police barracks on North Main street beside another $1100 load captured in Plainfield earlier this week.

Edgar Money, 32, of 527 Turin street, Rome, N. Y., was the operator of the car, and riding with him was John Guntert, also of Rome. The nifty machine they had is a Hudson sport model roadster of unusual size. The "jump" seat had been removed, leaving a surprisingly large space for storing liquor, and they had plenty of it aboard. Extra leaves had been added to the rear springs of the car to keep them from sagging and betraying the presence of the heavy load perfectly concealed within, for with the back of the car closed there was nothing to suggest anything unusual about the car except its distinctive class. An Elks' emblem decorated the windshield.

The state officers were amazed at the quantity of liquor they found packed away in the machine. The load included sack after sack of rye whiskey, the bulk of it Lincoln Inn. There were 183 quarts and 19 pints of this brand in addition to 72 quarts of Golden Wedding rye and 24 quarts of champagne, real authentic imported French product. All the rye bore Canadian government labels. Much of the shipment was still wet and smelly of salt water, while there was sand on the bottoms and sides of some of the bottles, indicating it had had a recent sea bath somewhere or other.

This afternoon the men were before Judge George Torrey in the town court of Plainfield. Money was fined $200 on a count alleging transportation, an additional $200 on a count alleging keeping with intent to sell and costs, and Guntert was fined $100 and costs as an accessory to transportation. The value of the liquor added to the fines and costs imposed makes the loss to the pair in excess of $2,000, not forgetting the fact that the car, which Money said cost $2800 is held at the barracks for the purpose of confiscation. The men had the money to pay the fines and costs assessed against them.

A circus came to town today for the first time in two years, much to the delight of those who are still young and no less so to older people who feel that they are young again when such a show is about.

Downie's circus was the attraction that drew several thousand people to the lot off North Main street this afternoon and this evening. The parade at noon time was generally adjudged as very good for the smaller type circus and made such a favorable impression as to attract good attendance.

This impression proved correct, for the Downie show is good throughout and has a number of particularly interesting acts. The Hodgini troupe of riders was one of the outstanding acts of each presentation, as was also the Mureio troupe.

There was the usual galaxy of aerialists slide specialists and trained animal acts, in fact, all the things that go to make a circus so interesting. The side show attractions were well patronized.

The Downie circus is entirely motorized and travels over the state highways with its caravan of upwards of 80 trucks in addition to the pleasure cars in which some of the members of the show travel. The circus was in here early this morning from Rockville and got away tonight for Warren, R. I., where it will show on Saturday. The equipment includes a garage truck manned by highly trained motor mechanics. Another truck contains a power plant for electrically lighting the show grounds and the tents at night.

A car owned by Charles Judson of Washington, D. C., who is a guest here of Rev. Harding W. Gaylord got underway on its own account up on Hawkins street and started down the grade toward Broad street, and for a time promised to be a menace to workmen engaged in excavating a ditch where gas mains are being run.

Mr. Judson saw the car start, it is said to have been in second speed, and jumped on the running board in an attempt to stop it. He was unsuccessful in doing this before it headed for a tree, and a smash being imminent Mr. Judson jumped off. The smash against the tree materially damaged the car, driving one front wheel far out of position, damaging a headlight and also the top. A service car hauled the damaged machine to a garage for repairs.

A wealth of remarkable bargains are now offered you in our July co-operative clearing sale. Linens, towels, corsets, splendid lines of silk dresses, gloves, necklaces, toilet articles and many other things at prices that have been slashed to the limit for this sale, continuing until July 19. Trade benefited considerably in Danielson today, as the circus brought a very considerable number of people from out of town, and many of these improved the opportunity to make some purchases.

FUNERAL

Philip Vanasse

This morning the funeral of Philip Vanasse was held from the home in Moosup with services at All Hallows' church there at 9 o'clock. Rev. Philip Massicote was celebrant of the high mass of requiem. Burial was in All Hallows' cemetery. The bearers were Frederick Tavernier, Israel Frechette, Amadee Gaudreau, Joseph Gaudreau, George Roix and Amadee Brown. L. E. Kennedy was in charge of the arrangements.

A new device has been procured by the borough for use in clearing up accumulations in sewer manholes. It is a whirling nozzle type with knife attachment. Attached to regulation fire hose connected with a hydrant it is lowered into a manhole and put into action. It is said to work very efficiently.

Plans of the American Telephone and Telegraph company to erect a repeater station building on the West Side opposite Day street taken with the planned for increase in the cable facilities of the New York-Boston underground line running through here will eventually make Danielson one of the most important telephone centers in the eastern section of the state.

Construction work progresses on the long stretch of stone steps being built from opposite the main entrance of the School street school down toward the street. The work that is underway will be completed prior to the reopening of the school for another term and will greatly enhance the appearance of the property.

Special things that will interest Danielson visitors to the members of the Service battery at Niantic, Saturday, will be the horse show to be put on by the 122d cavalry, which is now in camp there, and also will supply teams for a polo game. The 115th observation squadron will put on an aerial circus and stunt flying and the 192d field artillery will have a field meet. This assures plenty of a special nature to interest the visitors, as well as the fascination of being in a military encampment for an afternoon.

END OF CHAUTAUQUA IS MATTER OF REGRET

With a feeling of regret, many learned that the Swarthmore Chautauqua is to discontinue its summer circuit in the future. Although the guarantors have been obliged to meet a deficit each year, they have had the satisfaction of standing back of a most worth-while enterprise, viewed from a moral, not financial, standpoint. The influence of such excellent programs of speakers and the best of music and plays is an asset to any town's civic pride and, moreover, no other such opportunity ever comes to this town. No other such helpful work has been done for children each year equal to the four or five days of Chautauqua Junior Towns, and the teaching of homecraft. For 13 years Chautauqua has come to Jewett City. The first list of guarantors numbered 30, and the first Chautauqua was held in August. Then the number went up to 60, 70 and latterly there have been over one hundred, so that the price of tickets was very low.

PUTNAM

ONE KILLED WHEN WORK CAR LANDS IN RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 11—The village of North Grosvenordale added another fatality to its growing 1930 list of accidental deaths at eight o'clock this morning when Frank Persichino, 43, of High street extension, Webster, Mass., member of a section crew of the New Haven railroad ,and father of seven children, was instantly killed when a motor car on which he was riding jumped the rails and was hurled into the French river, sinking to a depth of 30 feet. Persichino sustained internal injuries when his body struck the ground after being tossed several feet into the air.

Thomas Lynch, 50, of School street, Webster, is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, suffering from internal injuries, a fractured skull and a badly lacerated right leg. He also has severe lacerations of the face and body. At a late hour this afternoon his condition was reported as being extremely critical. Only slight hope is held out for his recovery, hospital officials said.

Another victim of the mishap who is a patient at the Day Kimball hospital, is Thomas O'Brien Jr., 22, of Harris street, Webster, who is suffering from lacerations of the face and body. His condition this afternoon was reported as fair.

Two other members of the crew, Stanley Kalwanzyk, 22, of 40 Chase street, Webster and Harold Chandler, 21, of Harris street, Webster, were severely shaken up and received slight injuries as they were thrown to the ground. They were taken to the office of Dr. Joseph O. Generiux in Webster and were given medical treatment.

The accident occurred at 8:10 a. m., today, about 20 minutes after the motor driven flat car, left the freight yards in Webster. The location of the fatality was about a half mile north of the station at North Grosvenordale on the tracks of the Norwich branch of the New Haven road. Lynch, foreman of the crew, was in charge of the car, which was heavily laden with tools. According to the members who were riding on the seats, an angle bar in the forepart of the track became dislodged from its position and dropped through the floor stabbing a tie in the tracks. This threw the car from the rails, hurled the passengers in all directions, and instantly went into a loop, cutting a path through the brush of the railroad embankment and sinking from sight when it plunged into the river.

Help was summoned through the depot at Grosvenordale, Agent John Reardon of the Grosvenordale company, Dr. Generiux, and Detective Satti of the railroad police responding. Satti and Assistant Superintendent William E. Sault of this city began an investigation to determine the exact cause of the unfortunate occurence.

Lynch, a man of sturdy physical build, although in agony, remained conscious until he was removed to the hospital, and before leaving the scene of the tragedy he smiled at Detective Satti and in a low tone of voice said, "It looks like curtains for me, Charlie, but tell the wife and kiddies not to worry, I'll make it."

Coroner Arthur G. Bill of Danielson viewed the body of Persichino and after a consultation with Dr. Generiux, asserted that death was caused from internal injuries. Coroner Bill said that he would conduct a formal inquest into the death at his offices in Danielson on Monday.

Although this morning's fatal accident occurred on railroad property, it is the second occurring in Grosvenordale within a month to result in the death of a party involved. On June 3, Rev. Adelard Landry of St. Thomas Acquinas church, Springfield, Mass., was killed in an auto accident on a curve in the highway in North Grosvenordale less than a mile south of the railroad depot.

LITTLE HOPE HELD FOR LYNCH'S RECOVERY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 11—The condition of Thomas Lynch, Webster, seriously injured this morning in the railroad motor car accident at North Grosvenordale, continued critical at the Day-Kimball hospital tonight. A late report said that Lynch's injuries consisted of a fracture of the skull, fracture of the left leg, compound fracture of the right leg and several abrasions about the body. The hospital officials said that his pulse beat is growing weaker hourly and that only slight hope for his recovery is held out. Lynch, who is foreman of the section crew, is a relative of Timothy J. Hannifan, of South Main street, also a railroad section foreman.

Captain of Police A. J. Dubreuil reported this morning that night patrolmen continue to find doors of stores in the business section unlatched after business hours, despite the warning which has been issued to all merchants. Last evening another door was found unsecured when Sergt. A. J. Sponcey latched doors of stores on Main street.

In the interests of public safety every taxi cab in the city was subjected to a rigid inspection yesterday afternoon, with the result that a favorable report was handed out in every case except one. The inspection was conducted by an inspector of the state public utilities commission, assisted by Police Captain Dubreuil.

Not only are taxi drivers in Putnam being checked up by state officials, but a similar examination of equipment of all automobiles was made this afternoon by officials of the state motor vehicle department who set up a testing station at the state police scale house on School street. The condition of brakes and other equipment of vital importance to the safe operation of the automobile was examined.

An Associated Press dispatch appearing in this morning's Bulletin under a Providence date line told of the death of a William Fischer, 52, said to have been a resident of this city. Fischer, according to the dispatch died at the Rhode Island hospital early yesterday afternoon from immersion and exposure, suffering when he fell into the Providence river Wednesday night. The man was pulled from the watery depths with a companion whose name was not mentioned.

Several attempts to glean information concerning Fischer were made locally today but all were in vain. There are several Fischer families residing in Putnam, but the members of every family denied, having any knowledge of the dead man.

Fire Chief Ralph E. Thurston dispatched the pumper at the central fire station to Oak hill last evening where it was pressed into service to pump water into the new million gallon steel tan kwhich received its initial supply of water yesterday morning, when a valve connecting the two standpipes was opened allowing water in the smaller one to rush into the adjoining tank. The flow continued until the water reached the half way level of the old tank. In order to force an additional quantity into the million gallon cylinder, a pressure supplied by the fire apparatus had to be used. The tank showed no leakage under the testing pressure. Water department officials are confident that the steel sheets will withstand any amount of pressure its capacity supply may have, but the testing is a requirement of law.

Business depression, lack of interest, trend of times and the advent of the talking motion picture, are among the various reasons advanced for the failure of a Chautauqua programme to be held in Putnam this season. This will be the first year, since the inauguration of this mode of entertainment several seasons ago, that a Chautauqua circuit has not played Putnam. The association until recent years enjoyed capacity crowds at its programmes staged under the brown top that covered a large portion of the high school athletic field. With the appearing of deficits, guarantors announced last season that they would not contract for a return of the bill in 1930.

Broadway Theatre

A cast of principals for whom potential stardom is just around the corner, adds luster to "The New Movietone Follies of 1930," spectacular musical production which opens at Warner's Broadway today for a four-day engagement.

Featured in this musical romance are El Brendel, Marjorie White, Frank Richardson, Noel Francis, William Collier, Jr., and Miriam Seegar, with a supporting cast that includes many other well known names.

Brendel's success in audible pictures has been little short of sensational. His first part, planned as just a "bit" in "The Cock Eyed World," developed into a featured role, due to his natural talent for building up situations. His next part was in "Frozen Justice," and then came his featured role in "Sunny Side Up," which established him as the comedy find of the year. He gave another excellent performance in "Hot For Paris."

Marjorie White's career has almost paralleled that of Brendel. Her first film appearance was in "Sunny Side Up," in which she and Brendel crowded the stars, Janet Gaynor and Charles Farrell, for the honors.

Recognition of this vivacious little blonde's talent brought her the leading feminine role in "Happy Days," and the way she romped through that great film made her a "natural" for featured honors in the present production directed by Benjamin Stoloff.

Palace Theatre

Come to the Palace and see Will Rogers. Hear the great American comedian as he should be heard; let the magnificent reproductive apparatus of this Warner Brothers theatre present the voice of Rogers to its full value. Will is here for four days, here in his latest and funniest comedy, "So This is London." Not long ago he was in Paris, but what he did in the French capital was nothing compared to what he does in merry old England. Will plays the part of Hiram Draper, a wealthy Texan, owner of a cotton mill, who has to go to England on business. He doesn't want to go very much, because, from what he has heard, the British aren't so hot. But his business associates persuade him that he had better go, and so he goes, taking with him his wife (Irene Rich) and his son, Hiram, Jr. (Frank Albertson). On the way over the parents have about all they can do keeping their legs under them. In fact they are seasick a large part of the time, but young Hiram feels different. Under ordinary conditions he too might have incurred a touch of the old seasickness, but on this trip he meets a girl who is some girl.

The young lady is named Elinor Worthing (Maureen O'Sullivan) and Hiram falls for her harder than a wagonload of brick off the top of Pike's Peak.

The big moment comes when the Drapers are introduced, without being warned in advance, to Lord Percy Worthing, Elinor's father, who is as violently anti-American as Draper is anti-English. Here is a real situation, and one can well imagine how the sparks might fly. In the meantime, the Drapers decide that the only way to break up the romance is for them to pretend that they are just a couple of coarse people and have no manners. This attitude, they think, will make Elinor decide to give young Hiram the air. She falls for the trick, and sure enough does try to give the lad the air, but wait and see how neatly Hiram plays a trick or two of his own!

SEEKS DIVORCE AFTER MARRIAGE IN PUTNAM

(Special to The Bulletin)

WORCESTER, Mass., July 11—A marriage contracted last month in Putnam, Conn., reached the divorce court yesterday when John V. Nelson of Worcester filed a libel in probate court here against Alice Nelson, also of Worcester.

They were married June 21, 1930, and the husband charges cruelty at Worcester five days later.

BLACK CURRANT DEADLY FOE OF WATERSHED PINE

The black currant plant, although unoffensive and innocent in appearance, is nevertheless one of the most dangerous and powerful enemies which the water supply utilities of the state have to deal with in protecting the welfare of their large acreage of pine timber growing on watershed land surrounding the reservoirs. The reason for this is that the black currant bust acts as a "carrier" for the pestiferous, tree destroying white pine blister rust, one of the most deadly of all tree diseases.

Unfortunately, the only successful method of combating the blister rust is to eliminate its carrier, since once the disease has attacked the tree it becomes practically impossible to cure. The blister rust originates in the form of a spore which in nearly all instances selects the black currant plant for its home. Later, when the spore is fully developed, the tiny germs are blown from the current bush by the wind. Whenever they happen to alight on a pine tree and particularly upon a young tree, they begin to attack its branches and upper limbs and then work downward toward the trunk until the tree is entirely destroyed.

Needless to say, every effort is made by the water utilities to cut and burn all black currant bushes, but the plant is a hardy growth and is apt to take root and grow anwyhere. Last year, the state legislature moved to aid its elimination by making the growing, planting, propagating cultivating, transporting, selling, or possessing of any plant, root or cutting of black currant an offense punishable by fine.

THE PAPERS WITHHELD

The senate has been spending much of this week discussing the matter of seeking all the papers from the president concerning the negotiations of the London pact. It has been a repetition of what went on in the foreign relations committee prior to the favorable report on the treaty, with the exception that Senator Robinson, one of the treaty negotiators, informed the senate that there was nothing in the papers that would aid the senate in coming to a decision. He, as others, looked upon it to a great extent as simply drawing a red herring across the path of treaty action. It was, in fact, his amendment to the McKellar resolution which hastened action, that amendment being to the effect that the papers be turned over if it was not incompatible with the public interest.

When presented to the president there was only one answer, as was to be expected. He has declined to hand the papers over to the committee and he took the same attitude toward the senate request, declaring that it would be a betrayal of trust on the part of this country to make public the papers.

But the president went further than that. Not only did he respond in the manner which the amended resolution contemplated, but he set forth that "in these negotiations there was no secret or concealed understanding, promises or interpretations, or any commitments whatever, except as appear in the treaty itself and in the interpretative exchange of notes recently suggested by your committee on foreign relations, all of which are now in the hands of the senate."

The whole discussion has indicated that the senate never believed that anything vital to the consideration of the treaty was being withheld. The plea for the papers has been made in an effort to direct attention away from early ratification, to try to create a wrong impression and to subject the administration to embarrassment. The withholding of papers under such conditions is not new. The senate has not the right to demand them and the explanation given by the president adequately covers the matter. The resolution, as amended, recognized the justice of the course that the president has taken.

THE P. U. COMMISSION

For a number of years past the public utilities commission has taken into consideration the financial condition of the railroads in Connecticut and has not forced them to carry on the work of removing grade crossings at the rate of one each year for every 30 miles of track. Grade crossing removals have been going on, but not at the stipulated rate, it being believed that it was more important to the state to have the railroad system get back on its feet than to burden it with heavy expenditures which could wait without harm.

It was because the commission used its discretion in this manner that Albert Levitt, seeking to break into political recognition, sought to have the attorney-general take action against the commission for failure to carry out a statutory provision, and presented a petition signed by 100 to that effect. When the attorney-general declined to act upon this petition the matter was carried to the superior court and the decision rendered that the attorney-general should have responded to the petition. Appealed to the supreme court, a decision has just been handed down which upholds the superior court's view and finds, without going into the justification for the discretion exercised by the commissioners, that the attorney-general should proceed against the commission.

The supreme court does not undertake to say that the commission has done wrong, that it should not have taken the action it did or that it should not have taken consideration of all the facts which it presumably did. It deals with the question of action by the attorney-general and hands down the opinion that notice should have been taken of the petition even though it is later shown that the commission was thoroughly justified in the course it pursued.

The result is, thus far, that the public utilities commission should be proceeded against by the attorney-general and allowed to present its reasons for not carrying out the statutory requirements concerning crossings. That can be set forth at any hearing that may be given. It is believed now that the commission did the wise thing for the good of the state's transportation requirements as well as for the good of the railroad. While it hasn't seemed necessary to go into court to prove it, that is what the Levitt petition calls for.

CORRECTING A MISTAKE

During the closing days of congress, legislation was passed which removed the restrictions placed on shipment of cigars from Cuba to this country. This is action that was taken at the request of Cuba, but also in recognition of the fact that until it was adopted there could be expected to be no restoration of a parcel post agreement between the two republics.

When this government adopted the restriction to the effect that cigars could be imported into this country from Cuba in no less quantities than 3,000 it was intended to end the mailing of small quantities of cigars and therefore prove an advantage to the cigar industry of this country.

It was looked upon by Cuba immediately as a detrimental act, an interference with a legitimate trade and it was not long before it notified the United States that the agreement between the countries relative to parcel post was at an end. That made it impossible to mail any goods between the republics except as first class, which was prohibitive for such things as might ordinarily be sent parcel post. This put to an end much trade which Cuba had previously been doing in this country. There was no chance to secure cigars here by mail, but a much larger volume of business in other lines was lost because of it.

The natural result of such a situation was to set the machinery in operation that would restore former conditions. It has been a matter of two years since the ending of parcel post and not until this year has it been possible to get legislation restoring the former conditions regarding Cuban cigars, but it was inevitable when it is realized that back in 1926 there was $1,000,000 worth of parcel post business done with Cuba. That was, of course, all shut off and Cuba was the only Latin American country with which we had no parcel post agreement.

By our act of taking down the bars it is possible for us to notify Cuba that we are interested in and prepared to negotiate a new parcel post agreement between the two countries. We have had our fling and the experience has not been satisfactory. The desire now is for the restoration of old conditions.

PENALIZING RECKLESSNESS

It is an unusual situation where a railroad collects from the motorist who causes damage to a locomotive at a railroad crossing, but the Central Vermont railway has done so twice within the past two months in the state of Vermont. This is because the responsibility for the crash was due to the motorist, who disregarded all of several warnings.

It is unquestionably true that most crossing accidents are due to the disregard for safety by highway users. They know a crossing is ahead and yet they give little or no heed, expecting to be able to get across before any train may appear. Others are so engrossed by something else than the responsibility of driving their machine that they do not notice flashing lights and escape only by the skin of their teeth, while some are so given to chance-taking and an unwillingness to wait for safety that they plow through gates and over flagmen in their insistence on getting ahead.

Railroad crossings are not desirable things but they are made dangerous in many instances solely because of the attitude displayed toward them. The refusal to play safe is responsible for many of the fatalities at such points. The disregard of adequate warnings accounts for more of the accidents. There are crossings where signals are needed, there are dangerous and much-used crossings that need to be removed, but a crying need exists for increased highway safety at all points and that increase is not going to be obtained through trying to remove all crossings and permitting the reckless driving to continue. Those responsible for the majority of the crossing accidents would continue to be a menace to the highways should all the crossings be eliminated. Perhaps the solution lies in the method employed in Vermont.

MORE CARE DIRECTING MAIL

In a bulletin which has been issued by the postoffice department, the use of more care in the directing of mail is urged on the ground that the average person takes too little care and puts too much faith in Uncle Sam to make up the deficiencies.

If there is anyone who is qualified to express himself upon such matters it is the postal employe who is obliged to handle the mail during its various stages. He knows what his daily experience is, how many puzzles he has to try to solve and how easy it would be for the writers to place clear and complete addresses upon letters as it is to scribble something unintelligible and incomplete.

Some allowance perhaps must be made for the person who hasn't a complete address but thinks that the postoffice department can deliver a letter where it is intended to go without giving it any help, but there isn't much excuse for the person who drops a letter into the postoffice without any address whatever and when it gets to the deadletter office have it disclosed that it contains a $30,000 check for the reduction of a bank loan.

Taking care in writing plainly, making the address decipherable and putting the return address up in the left hand corner operates to facilitate the handling of mail matter, but it also gives assurance that mail when properly handled will get to the destination intended in the shortest possible time. Care works to the advantage of the writer and receiver of a letter quite as much as it does to the postoffice employe and letter carrier. Care would lengthen the lives of postal workers and it would have prevented to a large degree those 23,000,000 letters and 500,000 parcels which went to the deadletter office last year.

The plea of the postoffice department is not a new one, but it is thoroughly justified by the conditions which too commonly prevail.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Among the other showers of the summer are those of the picture postcards.

Erie, Ill., has been brought into the limelight by a gray goose which lived to be 106 years old. What a goose!

Evidently they like the dole over in England. There is more unemployment and they are asking for an increase in the dole.

The man on the corner says: Happiness may be a state of mind, but a state of mind doesn't always mean happiness.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

When we look at the subject of transportation carefully it is not difficult to understand the popularity of the automobile. Take the matter of expense: One can now buy a gallon of the best gas for 20 cents. If he has the latest Ford model (and that is not to be sneezed at) he can run his car 20 miles on a gallon, or about at the rate of a cent a mile. If he travels by trolley, bus, or railroad it will average five or six times as much. Of course in estimating the expense the upkeep of the machine ought to be taken into account, such as repairs, degeneration, insurance, license, taxes and many other possible incidentals. But are not all these things more than offset by comfort and convenience? In these days the automobile can go almost anywhere over the finest concrete roadbed and also over the good dirt road. It is at your door at a moment's notice. Now all this explains the crowded thoroughfares of today.

Now there are other very favorable things to be said in favor of the automobile. It must be admitted that it is among the most serviceable inventions credited to the inspirations and activities of man. Everything considered there are few inventions that have given mankind more real pleasure. One of the very best things to be said about the machine is the one least talked about, and that is its contribution to the physical health and strength of the user. It takes the mind of man away from the antics of Wall street and a woman's from neuritis. If it is a young woman who drives she forgets the new silk dress she is unable to buy but longs for. It brings concentration to the scatter-brained boy, who generally thinks of everything under heaven except the present task. It makes the old man forget the distance between him and the grave. Being exercise in fresh air it brings all people nearer to the crown of life.

Every season brings with it some kindly benediction from a higher power. While no two summers are exactly alike they are all sufficient for the benediction of vegetable and animal life. Of course the growler is always with us claiming that it is too hot, or too cold, too dry or too wet, too much sunshine or too little, and yet this old world of curse has been wagging for unnumbered generations, all the time increasing in numbers and the capacity to live rightly. One thing must be observed by the most obtuse mind and that there must be intelligence back of all this physical energy. Its precision year after year is the clearest evidence that all phenomena are under the dominion of law. Take the present summer, what density and richness of foliage! What bracing tonicity of atmosphere! What frequency of showers to keep vegetation fresh and vigorous! What large escape from wide spread disease! Reader are you thankful?

The summer is the season of the greatest activity if we unite the energy of nature with the activity of man. I recognize that it is the season of the smaller congregations in our churches, but do we think of the hundreds of churches that have service during the hot weather but are closed the rest of the year? There is, of course, no valid reason why our churches should not have larger numbers present than the majority of them do at any season of the year. Every professing Christian is as morally bound to be faithful to his church, as every citizen is morally bound to discharge his political duties. We cannot turn down any clear-cut obligation and get away with it. Violate any great law of nature as it applies to one's body, knowingly or ignorantly, and see how you will come out!

I believe we have been strangely inconsistent in regard to the application of law, both human and divine. In Puritan days they translated law in terms of severity, and made life a hardship rather than something enjoyable, while in modern times law is altogether—in too many cases—mere looseness. Now the Sabbath day was ordained for worship and improvement. It was brought into existence as a benediction to man. It was never intended by the Creator to be sad and gloomy. "The Sabbath was made for man, and not man for the Sabbath," remarked the Holy One "who went about doing good." It should be a day of joy and cheerfulness. It should be calculated to answer the wide range of our human yearnings. The Almighty never intended that man on the Lord's day should sit in a dark room and think of himself as a chunk of clay. I believe it should be a time for cultivating and feeding the moral and spiritual appetite. And for that very reason the Church of Christ is necessary.

If this is the fundamental purpose of the Sabbath why not make it appeal to all that is good in man? The modern science of anthropology teaches us that man possesses many wholesome appetites that are not strictly speaking religious, but which serve an important purpose. If otherwise they would not have been implanted in us by an Allwise Creator. A good illustration of this is the play instinct. All animal life gives evidence of this fact. For this reason modern science advocates teaching children how to play. I will not go so far as to say that baseball is so important as arithmetic and grammar, but it is of sufficient importance to be carefully taught. It is something that a boy's nature quickly responds to. He finds great pleasure in it. Is it not important that he should be taught to play the game right?

It is far from the writer's purpose to unjustly criticize the severity of the old Puritan's ideas and practices. The Puritans held certain definite ideas in relation to all non religious things, such as games and sports of all sorts. The lighter things of life were generally looked upon as frivolous and, in consequence, sinful. This is not to condemn these strong men and women for holding firmly to the thought of their day. But there is no reason why we should be held in the clutch of a dead hand! We respect these early settlers for having the courage of their convictions, but we feel in many cases their severity was unwarranted by the trend of the New Testament. Dancing was common in Bible times and not a word is said against it as a thing in itself. Instincts are given to us for a worthy purpose, not to be crushed, but intelligently used for our betterment and for the glory of God.

Now if what I have said in the above paragraph is true to the spirit of the Bible, and comports with the reason and common sense, why should any one object to such games as baseball, golf and the like when played on Sunday? I believe that every person who has come to years of discretion is morally bound to worship God in His church. He has the innate right to select the church that best adapts itself to his ideas of worship. If he has sought to stimulate his soul in the morning, why not his body in the afternoon? We see nothing wrong in taking a hike or automobile ride on Sunday. We say these are legitimate. If so why is baseball, tennis, golf or any other clean sport wrong? Shall we be guided in our actions by Puritan theology or by our own intelligence and conscience? We are morally bound to give body mind and soul their proper exercise.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 11—No one who has had opportunity to visit Monticello, the home of Thomas Jefferson, could fail to be impressed by the extraordinary breadth of interest with which that famous Virginian was endowed.

Art, literature, science, invention, agriculture—almost every form of human endeavor came in for a share of his attention.

He rivals Sam Pepys, that father of British admiralty methods, in that respect. His home, self designed and largely self built, discloses his many-sidedness just as Pepys library, preserved at his alma mater in England, speaks so eloquently of the man who assembled it.

Most Americans probably have forgotten that Jefferson, in addition to his many other works that still live to make his name immortal, like the Declaration, was the father of the Congressional Library of today.

It was his library, purchased for $24,000 by the government, which was the actual beginning of the vast accumulation of books, ancient and modern, and of other priceless documents which forms the national library of today.

Dubious

Congress was in great doubt about the wisdom of that purchase. Dr. Herbert Putnam, librarian of today, has been digging among the old records to find out just what was said about it.

He has discovered that one reason for objection was that Jefferson had included in works termed "atheistical, irreligious and immoral" and others not "necessary or useful."

Another objection was that Jefferson's taste in books had resulted in a collection "miscellaneous and almost exclusively literary (instead of legal and historical) in character." But the main point urged was that $24,000 was too large a sum to pay for the 3,000 or so volumes.

Liberal minded statesmen of that day who urged that the Jefferson books should be acquired, scoffed at these arguments.

Friends of the bill to effect the purchase, acording to the yellow old records, urged "with zeal and vehemence, wit and argument that the price was moderate, the library more valuable (than the price asked) because of the scarcity of many of its books; and and altogether a most admirable substratum for a national library.

Stands High

Dr. Putnam produced these records in connection with his change of front to advocate whole heartedly acquisition for the Congressional Library of today of the Volbehr collection of "cradle books" at a cost of $1,500,000. And he lent the great weight of his opinion to the argument that these works probably had an actual sale value of $5,000,000 or up.

There is that to be said for Dr. Putnam's standing with house members and senators. No sooner had he announced his change from "the dubious to the strongly affirmative" support of the bill than the senate library committee voted unanimous approval of the Volbehr purchase

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Egret's Sad Story

The way to make a sorrow last
Is constant thinking of the past.
—Mother West Wind.

Egret the White Heron was making his first visit to the Smiling Pool. He had told Peter Rabbit and Jerry Muskrat that this was his first visit to the North, but that once upon a time, so he had heard, his family used to come North regularly. That sounded to Peter Rabbit like a story, and you know Peter dearly loves stories.

"If you please," said Peter, "why did your family give up coming North?"

Egret looked very serious. His eyes became rather sad looking. "Do you ever see any of those two-legged creatures called Men?" he asked.

"Of course," said Peter.

"Of course," said Jerry Muskrat.

"Then you have seen the reason that my family gave up coming North," explained Egret.

"If you please," said Peter, "why did your family give up coming North?"

"You mean that those two-legged creatures hunted the members of your family with terrible guns, don't you?" said Peter.

Egret nodded. "That's it," said he.

"Did they hunt the Egrets to eat?" continued Peter.

This time Egret shook his head. "No," said he, "not that I know of. They hunted us for something else. Do you see these fine feathers on my back?"

Both Peter and Jerry nodded. "We were talking about them," said Jerry. "Never have we seen any feathers like them."

"They are beautiful," said Egret, "but they very nearly put an end to my family. Yes, sir, they very nearly put an end to my family. When I think of it, it is a wonder to me that a single Egret is alive now. It was for their beautiful feathers that the Egrets were hunted by those two legged creatures with terrible guns. They wanted our beautiful feathers. Those were terrible times, terrible times! They were before my day, but I've been told about them and I can't bear to think of them. When I think of the thousands and thousands of young Egrets that starved to death in their nests, it is a wonder to me that a single Egret is alive today."

Peter Rabbit looked at Jerry Muskrat, and Jerry looked at Peter, and in the eyes of both was a puzzled expression. "What made them starve to death?" said Peter after a while.

"The two-legged creatures with terrible guns that wanted the feathers of the fathers and mothers," explained Egret. "You see, it is only in the nesting season that we have these beautiful feathers, which are called plumes. So the hunters would wait until the nesting season. Then they would seek out the nests and shoot the old birds as they brought food to their young. Then, of course, the young would starve to death. Oh, it was terrible, terrible! So the Egrets stopped coming North because there were only a few of them left. They sought out the most difficult places in the Far South wherein to build their homes; but even there the feather hunters followed them. Finally, when there were only a few left, the hunters stopped coming."

Of course, Egret didn't know it, but the reason the hunting stopped was because those who loved the birds secured the passage of a law protecting the Herons and forbidding the wearing of their wonderful plumes. It was true, as Egret had said, that only a few of his family were left; so few, indeed, that for a time it was feared that there would soon be no more Egrets left.

YOUR HEALTH

What Do You Know About Your Child?

By Dr. Henry F. Vaughan, Commissioner, Department of Health, Detroit.

This is a pertinent question which every parent ought to ask himself. To be sure, you know that his eyes are blue and that he has brown hair, that he washes his face and hands, that he plays around the neighborhood and gets himself into the usual amount of trouble and that he seems to be having a good time, to be happy and as far as you can tell, well. This much every parent knows but what do you know of the actual working of his human machine, the most intricate of all machines? As you of course know, used automobiles are sold not at all on the basis of appearance but rather on the age of the car. The reason for this is that appearances cannot be relied upon. A car which has a good appearance but which is a number of years old may run perfectly as far as you are able to determine, but you cannot be sure that some of the parts may give away within a short time. The same thing is true of the human machine. It may appear to be functioning perfectly but there may be, and unfortunately very often are, minor difficulties with the mechanism which is not detected and taken care of may result in permanent injury.

No parent can truthfully say that he knows the condition of his child unless that child has had a complete physical examination of comparatively recent date.

I have just been looking over some of the examination blanks which have come in as a result of our program of health examinations for children from 2 to 7. Here is one child of 5 years of age who has a heart condition due to infected tonsils which had not been recognized and which had been gradually poisoning the youngster until he now has an impairment of heart function. This is but one example of many I might cite. Figures gathered over a good many years show definitely that 70 per cent of children entering school have some physical defect. Obviously these defects have developed very early in childhood.

There isn't any question of doubt but that if every person, young and old, had a complete physical examination at least once a year, at least ten years would be added to the average length of life, to say nothing of the suffering and misery which would be thus avoided. Many, if not most, of the heart conditions of early adult life, most of the rheumatism and many cases of nephritis, develop because of infections of early childhood which have been over-looked or not attended to. Most cases of tuberculosis and many of cancer could be avoided by the universal practice of having complete periodic physical examinations and by following the physicians' advice given as a result of such examinations. In the earlier years of life nearly all of the physical defects which may be found come under the general classification of "easily corrected."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

We Live In Experience

The world without corresponds to the world within. Few men ever climbed the rugged incline to the mountain's peak and gazed on the valley below with the thought that their own experiences in life were strikingly similar; and few men have watched the heaving of the breast, or listened to the moans of the sick and suffering without trying to take a firmer grasp on the realities of life and time. Every season and every year the one that is passing and the one that is coming, each has a special voice in the varying phase of our manifold experiences. Springs brings its message of life and hope; summer its symbol, not of youth, but of manhood ripe and rich; autumn sings in minor strains of the coming rest and quiet, calm, while winter's icy chill demands of us all, young and old, to "pause and number our days, for they are numbered."

We live in experience, not years. Christianity is essentially optimistic. It places a man in the present with his back upon the dead past, his face with radiance upon the future. The old has passed, we stand upon the threshold of the new, and may we not also believe a better season. Let not the failures of yesterday hinder right living today.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Fresh Air Fund

Mr. Editor: Have you glimpsed them on these stifling summer afternoons—the pallid little children of the tenements? In their ragged, makeshift bathing suits, one sees them trying to splash in the gutters when the hydrants flush the sizzling streets.

No need to recall what country outings at beaches and lakes mean for them.

Many are from families of the unemployed—under-fed and run-down from weeks of privation. Many, able to pay a little in other years toward their vacation, have no hope of relief this year unless we send them.

Eight hundred are still waiting hopefully. Each day they come to inquire, "Missus, pleas, can I go to the countries?"

In our country centers we have room for 1,700, but only money enough as yet in our fresh air fund for 900. Won't you help us?

The sum of $87.50 will take a family of five for two weeks, $17.50 provides a two weeks' vacation for some drooping little child, $8.75 means one week of happy days. Checks should be made to Eugene W. Stetson, and mailed to this society's headquarters, 38 Bleecker street, New York, N. Y.

Displeased Over Insistence on Decency

Mr. Editor: May I reassure Miss "Susie" that the men of Norwich were in no danger on Wednesday, when the two "young ladies" walked down your Main street in "shorts." The young ladies were my daughter Frances and a friend, Estelle Pushken, both aged 12 years.

Vacationing at a nearby resort, on Wednesday, with a friend, Dr. Hoffman, I came to Norwich to shop. We had no evil design on the male population of your town and no intention to corrupt the morals of your fair city.

It happened that just as we were leaving our grounds, the two girls came out and jumped into the car. When we reached Norwich and they espied a ten cent store their childish, and perhaps feminine instinct, created a desire to shop, and in an evil moment they left the safe haven of our car. They were told to put on their clothes when they next came to Norwich, by a police officer, who, a moment later, followed them into the store and ordered them out of town.

Two children in "shorts," their lower limbs exposed, and the police must needs run them out of town for fear of the effect they may have upon your morality!

My sympathies to those who are so unfortunate as to live within the confines of your city.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Sea Sled Corporation, West Mystic, Conn.

In the summer of 1853 the company of Maxson, Fish & Co. for the building of ships was formed at Old Field, West Mystic.

Probably the most famous ship built by then was the ironclad gunboat "Galena." She was one of three ordered by the government, the famous "Monitor," being another of the three. The "Galena" was built under a shed, the work being continued day and night and under all weather conditions. On completion she was rushed into service and her work was described as "One of the most masterly pieces of seamanship of the whole Civil war."

The "Vicksburg," the "Aphrodite," and the "B. F. Hoxie" were other Maxson & Fish ships, famous in Civil war annals.

On the death of Captain N. G. Fish in 1870, Mr. Maxson formed a copartnership with Alexander Irving and under the firm name of Maxson & Irving they built several small coasting vessels. Subsequently, Mr. Maxson withdrew and in 1888 Mr. Irving purchased the yard and with Capt. Robert P. Wilbur, engaged in building barges for the Thames Tow Boat company.

The Holmes Shipbuilding company then purchased the yard and built the five-masted schooner "Jennie E. Dubois," the largest vessel ever built on the Mystic river. She was a beautiful craft of 2800 tons burden, launched early in 1902. After a short but very successful career she was sunk in collision with a steamship off Block Island. Subsequently, the Holmes company gave their attention to the development of gasoline launches, in which line they became very efficient.

With credit for the first iron-clad steamer, the first boat to be hauled out and launched sideways, a line of slipper ships noted for speed and with special ability to run to the windward, origination of many ideas of shipbuilding which are now standard practice in the industry, it seems appropriate that this yard should pioneer the development of the Sea Sled, the first boat designed to meet the problems which arose when engines became so powerful for their weights that boats began to come to the surface and plane. The Sea Sled has solved the difficulties connected with this new form of water transportation without retaining any of the undesirable characteristics of the displacement boat when it tries to plane.

From the smallest model 13 outboard Sea Sled (the only boat to finish the Catalina marathon out of 37 entries, and the winner of the longest ocean race—from Boston to New York—against 74 competitors) to the largest standard model 28 which was the only fast boat able to keep contact with the operations during the S-51 submarine disaster, the Sea Sled has demonstrated its ability to navigate rough water at speed with the highest degree of safety.

Having developed the most seaworthy hull possible for this type of water transportation, The Sea Sled corporation next turned its attention to the matter of comfort. A recently patented feature of the Sea Sled gives the operator control of the hydraulic pressure which holds the boat on the surface of the water. A degree of comfort is consequently reached which is superior to that in a boat where solid hull rides over solid water. Models 13, 14, 16, 17, 19, 20, 22, and 26, are recent additions to the fleet which are improved by this feature.

The present officers of the company are: C. E. Stouch, president and treasurer; Wilfred Daniel, secretary; J. A. Christen, vice president and general manager.

POETRY

OUT IN THE OPEN

A man is always glad to take
The wife and kiddies to the lake,
Away from all the city's heat
To where the woods and water meet.
He feels that he has done his duty
By sending them to scenes of beauty,
Where Nature's language they can speak
And he can visit once a week.
It is the proper thing to do—
He sends them, and his work is through.

As for the lady in the case
She cultivates a poker face,
Transports the children and the pup
And gets the cottage all fixed up
To suit the jolly Summer plan
Of keeping house the best she can.
She has to cook six times a day
In primitive, old-fashioned way,
Serve meals both copious and good,
And sometimes split a little wood,
And carry water from the spring
And sit up late at night and sing,
And keep provisions from the mice,
And get along without much ice,
And treat the urchins when they're hurt
And not object to sand and dirt,
And entertain occasional guests—
All Summer, just like that, she rests.

Some day I'll interview a wife
About this happy outdoor life.

SPEED

What lures and ever urges on
The roaring aeroplane—
The ocean liner—racing car—
And locomotive train?

Is it a Sprite we christen Speed,
With wings of screeching air,
And breath of maddened conquering;
With feet bereft of care?

What tosses caution to the winds,
Regardless of disaster,
And tempts us further to pursue
Still faster—faster—faster?

What is it always just ahead
To dare us if we worry,
Who knows if it be Speed, or Death
Which beckons us to hurry?
—Sonia Ruthele Novak, in the New York Sun.

She had asked him for a cheque—and that started it.

"Whenever I stay at home," he remarked, "instead of going to the club, you are always wanting money. You seem to think that life is just a game of chess—nothing but cheque, cheque, cheque!"

"So it is; if you don't give it me," she returned, "it will still be a game at chess—pawn, pawn, pawn!"—Punch.

NORWICH MANUFACTURERS ENJOY GOLF AND BANQUET

Over 50 members of the Norwich Manufacturers' association laid aside their work Friday afternoon to attend the annual summer outing and meeting of the association at the Norwich inn, which included a golf tournament at the Norwich Golf club in the afternoon and a banquet at the inn in the evening. There were guests present from Hartford, Meriden, Bridgeport and New London, including E. Kent Hubbard, of Hartford, president of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut, the guest of honor.

Nearly half of the assemblage, 25 to be exact, participated in the golf match and it was reported that a number of very good scores were shot. The winners of prizes awarded at the banquet, included William G. Park, who carried off the honors in the low net and low gross, receiving a fine cup for the former score. The second award went to Walter Turner for second low net, the third to B. F. Rogers for second low gross and the fourth to Harrison C. Noyes for third low net.

CAR HANGS ON BRIDGE RAIL IN MONTVILLE

(Special to The Bulletin)

MONTVILLE, July 11—Alex Levin of 32 Richter street, Providence, R. I., who is connected with the Norwich office of the Interstate Furniture Co. and operating a 1930 Chevrolet sedan, owned by Rose Levin of the same address, was arrested Friday evening by Police Officer Howard Lamphere of Montville when he figured in a serious accident with a Studebaker coupe, operated by J. W. Thompson of 116 High street, Milford, Conn., on the Norwich-New London state highway, near the witch hazel pond at Kitemaug. Mr. Thompson was on his way to New London when the car driven by Levin was going toward Norwich. When Levin started to make the corner at Kitemaug, he applied his brakes, which locked and shot his car into the path of the other machine.

The Providence car landed on the bridge's heavy post, ripping off about 12 feet of it. The left rear wheel of the car was suspended over the bridge rail. It was a miracle that it did not plunge over. It was damaged to such an extent that it will require several hundred dollars to repair it. The Milford car's front end was completely smashed. Both men were attended by Dr. J. J. Donohue of Uncasville, Levin had four cuts on the head, one of them requiring six stitches to close and a slight cut on the left side of his face. Thompson, who did not complain of any injuries at the time of the accident, later complained of a pain in his left side and an hour later was spitting blood. He was also taken to Dr. Donohue's office by Officer Lamphere. He was treated for internal injuries and a possible fracture of four ribs.

Bonds of $100 were furnished by the Interstate Furniture Co. for Levin's appearance in Montville justice court July 22, to answer to a charge of reckless driving.

TAFTVILLE MAN SUFFERS SEVERE ELECTRICAL BURNS ON POLE AT OLD LYME

Romeo Gauvin, about 30, of Merchants avenue, Taftville, an electrician with the line crew of the Connecticut Light and Power company, narrowly escaped death from electrocution about 11 o'clock Friday morning at Old Lyme, when he came in contact with a high tension wire carrying 22,000 volts. He is a ptient at the Lawrence and Memorial hospitals at New London, suffering from severe shock, burns to his back and to two fingers of his right hand, besides a gash in the head, which he received when he fell to the ground, landing upon his shoulder and head upon a stone wall. At the hospital early Friday evening his condition was reported to be a little improved.

In response to a communication that there was trouble with the high tension wires in that district, a crew of several men in charge of Line Superintendent Frederick J. Ortman of No. 70 Orchard street went to Old Lyme Friday morning to remedy it. The injured man was ordered to inspect the wires on a pole near the art gallery, as the crew was attempting to interchange the current from one wire to another. While working on the pole Gauvin placed one hand on the telephone iron arm and the other on a messenger wire, and it is believed that in moving around his body came in contact with a high tension wire, 14 inches above.

Line Superintendent Ortman, who was standing on the ground below Gauvin suddenly noticed that the latter's shirt and hand were burning and ordered Lewis Hull to secure a ladder so that they could remove him from among the wires. When no ladder was found Superintendent Ortman ordered the men to cut the telephone wires, but before this was done Gauvin freed himself and fell to the ground, landing on a stone wall, in an unconscious condition. Mr. Ortman immediately turned him over on his stomach with his head resting on one side and applied artificial respiration, as he was of the opinion that he might resuscitate him. After working over him for several minutes Gauvin started to breathe, about the time that a doctor happened by.

Upon an examination of Gauvin the physician stated that Gauvin was a "lucky man" to be alive and after first aid treatment was given, he was rushed to the New London hospital in its ambulance.

INSPECTION OF PLAYGROUNDS BY CHAIRMAN FITZGERALD

An inspection of the ten local play centers was made Thursday by William J. Fitzgerald, chairman of the recreation commission. This was in accordance with his custom established seven years ago of personally touring the playgrounds for the purpose of contact with the play leaders and of observing the needs of the various grounds that frequently arise.

The Lake street center, with instructors John Marks, Catherine Madden and Ida Grablefsky in attendance, was found to be especially rife with activity, with a baseball game, volley ball match, dodge ball contest, quoit pitching, and industrial work in progress at the same time. With the addition of seven new swings and one chute recently purchased by the commission to the stationary equipment of this play center, the children of the central district are now especially fortunate in having remarkably splendid play facilities.

Dampness of the soil diminished the attendance usually had at the Greeneville center, but still the varied assortment of swings, teeters, and chutes located there was meeting with popular favor. Boxing has in the past been a favorite sport at Greeneville, and to further its advance Mr. Fitzgerald has ordered a new set of gloves for the use of the children.

In previous years it has seemed advisable to keep the Elizabeth street playground in operation during the afternoon and evening instead of morning and afternoon, as is the case with some of the smaller centers. This practice is in vogue this season also, and has resulted in a greatly increased attendance especially during the evening session. It was deemed advisable to install a new chute upon this thriving playground.

For the benefit of the smaller children still too young to participate in organized play, sand boxes have been built at each of the grounds controlled by the commission, and fresh loads of sand have been carted to the grounds since the inspection of the chairman.

The novelty of installing showers upon the Lake street and Greeneville centers is again to be attempted this year. This feature represents considerable expense, but it is felt the benefits arising from proper use of these showers are well worth the cost of installation.

A cleanup campaign has been inaugurated by Mr. Fitzgerald, which consists in an organized effort on the part of the children to cleanse their respective grounds of all refuse and debris that may have accumulated during the winter months, and to keep them free from such rubbish in the future. In addition to the cups customarily awarded for supremacy in sports, another is to be given this year to the play center which keeps its property in the best and neatest condition.

HEAVY ELECTRIC STORM WITH DELUGE OF RAIN

One of the worst electrical storms of the season passed over Norwich about 8 o'clock Friday evening, preceded about 6 o'clock by one of lesser ferocity, which kept different repair crews of the city departments out most of the evening repairing trouble occasioned. The second storm was accompanied by a high wind and a deluge of rain, which filled the city streets to a depth of three and four inches within a short time. There was also a display of sharp lightning.

The Southern New England Telephone company was the worst hit by the storm, over 200 telephone stations being put out of commission, scattered over a wide area in the district, including the towns of Hanover, Baltic, Montville and other surrounding places. About 50 lines failed to function after the storm, but a number of these were put in order by the repair gang, which was sent out immediately. No telephone poles or wires were reported down.

In spite of the downpour the trolleys of Connecticut company were able to function on scheduled time with the exception of a few instances. Cars on the Baltic, Greeneville and Yantic lines were slightly affected when the motors were burned out by lightning. These three cars were able to continue under their own power and complete their runs.

A little trouble was also experienced by the gas and electrical department, but it was quickly put into working shape by two crews under direction of Nicholas Pierce. The Norwich line at Yantic was out for a time, when the brakes at the plant was thrown out by men who were testing the Bozrah Electric line for trouble, laid to the storm. The power line for the J. B. Martin company had to be fixed, but this was out of order only for about 20 minutes.

Transformer fuses were blown out on New London turnpike, Colt and Ann streets, Broadway and Slater avenue and Laurel Hill and Summit streets; also the white way lights in practically all instances were out, all of them on the night circuit and part of the part time circuit. These were put in shape in ten minutes.

CONNORS YOUTH HOME; SEARCHING FOR MAN

Neil Connors, 17, son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius Connors of 80 North street, came back home at 6 o'clock Friday morning, after having been missing since Tuesday afternoon when he went away with a strange man who took him to New York on the promise to make a big league ball player of him by a course of lessons for which a brother of Neil contributed $35.

Because Neil said he had been brought back to Norwich and left in Franklin square Friday morning by the man, state police from the Groton barracks were engaged during the day in a search for the slick stranger, but it was reported from the Groton barracks Friday night that no more information had been secured in the case.

Neil's story was that the man took him to New York and there took from him the $35, but said nothing more about the baseball lessons. The youth was given a place to sleep but had to beg his meals and swept out a restaurant in return for a meal. Neil said it was the strange man who sent a telegram asking that $30 be sent to 1440 Broadway, which is a telegraph office. The man claimed to be Bob Shawkey, manager of the New York Yankees, and made his representations look good by getting Neil to sign a contract before he told the Connors family about the boy going to New York.

Neil said that they left New York Thursday night and came to New Haven in some way and that they walked all night and reached New London Friday morning, completing the trip to Norwich by bus. The man disappeared after leaving him on Franklin square.

COMMITS SUICIDE BY HANGING IN BEDROOM

Michael Zalonchowski, 60, took his own life at his home 101 Summit street Thursday afternoon, and was found dead in the bedroom by his wife when she returned to the house about 5 o'clock after completing her day's work. She had been home to have dinner with her husband, when he seemed to be in good spirits, but when she returned she found him on the floor of the bedroom with a strap around his throat and the other end over the bedpost.

Medical Examiner C. C. Gildersleeve gave a verdict of suicide. Zalonchowski had been employed as a moulder but had been out of work for about six months and also was afflicted with an incurable disease, both conditions contributing to bring on a despondent mood.

Besides his wife he is survived by two sons and two daughters.

AVIATORS AT GROTON PRACTICE FRONT SHOOTING

The 43rd Division Aviation in camp at the Groton airport, wound up its practice in shooting with front machine guns at ground targets located at Fred Stone's ranch in East Lyme Friday with each officer shooting 100 rounds of ammunition. The first of next week the advance pilots of the aviation outfit will do record shooting in which record will be made of the ability of the respective airmen.

Picking up messages from the ground was a phase of the communication work Friday. Messages attached to a string held between two soldiers standing several yards apart were successfully snared by the plane, and messages on a cord stretched between two six-foot uprights were also picked up. A long weighted string is dropped from the ship and as the plane flies over the weight hits the cord to which the message is attached, winds around it and secures it. The pilot can then draw the message into the plane. Radio, panel signals and colored flares were also used in the communication work.

The Photo Section cooperated with the 192nd Field Artillery in morning and afternoon training.

HORTON SMITH TAKES LEAD IN QUEST OF NATIONAL GOLF CROWN; MILLER IS OUT

By ALAN GOULD
Associated Press Sports Editor

INTERLACHEN CLUB, Minneapolis, July 11—(AP)—The Scots heard the wild call of the buzzard today instead of the sweet song of the birdie and as a result two young Americans named Smith and Jones fought a dazzling duel for leadership at the half way mark of the United States open golf championship.

In this homebred struggle, waged between swirling, perspiring galleries all the way, the strapping young blond professional Horton Smith, outplayed the champion of the world, Bobby Jones, to take the lead in this classic of golf classics for the first time in his career.

Smith added a par-cracking 70, one of the two best rounds of the day, to his par 72 of the first round for a two day 36 hole total of 142. Playing right behind, Jones started his second round with a one-stroke advantage, lost it on the first nine and emerged from a stiff battle with the hazards of Interlachen with a score of 73 and a 36 hole total of 144.

Fully 10,000 spectators, scrambling around on a day that was well up in the 90-degree region but not so torrid as the day before because of a cooling breeze, galloped back and forth as these two darlings of the galleries, Smith and Jones, played out their rounds, five minutes apart.

Smith, the 22 year old Missourian who now represents the exclusive Cragston (N. Y.) Golf club of the Metropolitan district, played the great Georgian to a standstill in the first personal duel these two ever have had the chance to wage for the blue ribbon prize of American golf.

The tall blond from the corn country has been coming like the wind in the last few years, the youngest of the new crop of professional stars. He shot for the main goal today with a combination of skill and confidence that may make him a difficult youth for Jones or anyone else to catch tomorrow.

The two strokes difference today between Smith and Jones represented the difference between the way they played the ordinarily easy 408-yard 15th hole. The young pro had a one-stroke edge at the time and got his par four without special difficulty. A few moments later, Jones, on the same hole, hooked his tee shot wildly to the long grass in a spot where he was prevented by a tree from doing anything but playing out safely. The champ then pitched to the back edge of the green, came on weakly and missed a four foot putt as the climax to a wretched six.

Bobby got a stroke back on the 16th, where he holed his longest putt of the day, nearly 25 feet, for a birdie 3, but he could not catch the flying Missourian on either of the remaining two holes.

The three veteran favorites, Macdonald Smith, Tommy Armour and Walter Hagen, in quick succession shot away their chances for par scores or better on the tough incoming nine.

The tie for second place became three-cornered when the last player, Charles Lacey, 23-year-old Englishman from the Pine Valley club of the Philadelphia district, came home with a par-breaking 70, equalling Horton Smith's low round of the day and giving him a two-day total of 144 to tie Jones and Cooper.

Lacey's finish was wasted on the galleries, which had deserted the links in the belief that all the big shots of the day had been fired but this unheralded performer came in just before 7 p. m. to inject himself unceremoniously into the foremost rank.

Lacey had a great chance to score 69 and take undisputed hold of the second place but he missed it by taking a five on the 18th, losing a shot in the rough, after one of the most spectacular putting exhibitions of the tournament.

There was mild interest in the overheated press shed with Lacey went out in even par, 36. There was consternation and amazement for the experts when Lacey began clicking off birdies.

Mac Smith, who had shared the first day's lead with Armour at 70, took 75 and occupied fourth place with a total of 145.

Armour and Hagen picked identical holes, the 14th and 16th, on which to stage sudden blow ups and send their totals soaring. The Black Scot finished with 76 for a two day total of 146. He found himself in a tie for fifth place with Wilfred "Wiffy" Cox, who had 71-75—146 and Johnny Farrell, the 1928 champ, who staged another fine comeback with a par 72, added to his opening 74 for another total of 146.

Hagen's 72-75—147 also involved another tie, with John Golden of Darien, Conn., stepping along to post 74-73—147 for his two day's work.

There were a dozen or so inside the 150 mark to indicate how keen the competition has been, with a total of 156 as the dividing line for those 60 and ties allowed to compete in the final half of the 72 hole grind tomorrow.

It was still pretty much of a wide open battle, too, with eight of the most seasoned professional favorites, along with the one and only Bobby Jones, bunched within five strokes of each other. Any one of them has the chance to break through but on the basis of today's play, Jones and Smith looked as the pair most likely to fight it out with Cooper. Mac Smith, Armour, Farrell and Hagen still within easy gunshot of the lead.

Today's show was strictly a double header, with the Armour-Mac Smith-Hagen half of the bill furnishing the early fireworks, sputtering out at the finish, as Jones and Horton Smith went out to put on the big thrill of the round.

Hagen looked like the Hagen of his championship days as he sailed out serenely in 35, one under par, catching both Armour and Smith at the 27th hole and starting back with all his shots apparently in splendid working order, "The Haig" hit the chutes on the 14th 444 yards, where at least a dozen traps lurk in waiting for shots that stray off the line. After he had finished his battle with these bunkers, Hagen had a six on his card and a five on the par four 15th did him no particular good. He offset a birdie 3 on the 16th by going one over par on the tough, 252-yard 17th and needed 40 strokes for his incoming nine.

Meanwhile, Armour, even par for 12 holes, suddenly absorbed a setback when he missed a putt of a few feet for a birdie four on the 12th. This mistake upset the Black Scot so much that he remarked to bystanders: "There goes my chance for the championship." That error alone was not sufficient cause for the remark but when he took 4-6-5 on the next three holes, dropping four strokes to par, Tommy's chances went sky high. He regained control to bag the last three in par figures but the damage was done and his total of 76 tumbled him out of the lead.

Mac Smith's putter cost him enough strokes to have at least enabled him to keep pace for the day with the American member of the Smith clan. Mac had no serious mistakes but he missed four putts by the narrowest margins, besides playing the 18th timidly enough to force a five, one over par, on his card of 75 that otherwise might well have been 71 or 72.

Jones and Horton Smith, because of the huge crowds following them, were late starting and continually delayed in their progress around the course. Smith caught Jones on the first hole and went into a one stroke lead on the second hole, with a birdie three. Both set a sensational pace and at the ninth they were all even as Smith made the turn in 33, three under par, to Jones' 34.

This ninth was a thriller. Smith hit a great spoon second to within 20 feet of the pin and then sank the putt for an eagle three. Jones then came along and after a substantial delay, half-topped his second shot, a spoon. The ball headed for the big pond fronting the approach to the green, bounced off a collection of water lilies at the far edge and rolled up the fairway. As the crowd roared for this "break," Bobby capitalized by chipping dead and sinking the short one for a birdie four.

It was nip and tuck over the last nine but Bobby found himself a lot more trouble than Horton, beginning with the 11th. Horton got a birdie four on this but Bobby, going for the pin, pulled his shot and landed in the rough. He was lucky to get a five and luckier to get another par five on the 530-yard 12th, where he put his second in a big trap, came out too strong, ran his approach putt downhill ten feet past the pin and then sank it.

Jones misjudged the 194-yard 13th green, sending his ball bouncing over it into deep rough and barely extricating to the edge to get his four. Then came the hazardous 15th, after an easy par on the 14th, where Smith was forced to take a five. Bobby tried desperately on the last three holes to make up for his weird six on the 15th but the best he could do was clip a single stroke from par. He missed putts by narrow margins on both the 17th and 18th.

LOCAL PROFESSIONAL IS OUT OF NATIONAL TOURNEY

By shooting an 80 over the Interlachen course at Minneapolis yesterday Massie B. Miller, professional at the Norwich Golf club shot himself out of the national open golf tournament. Miller who carded an 82 in the first day's play was two strokes better on Friday but his total of 162 was six strokes too high for him to qualify for the 36-hole final today. Last year Miller finished in 19th place in a tie with Jim Barnes.

Louis Chiapetta of Hartford was also eliminated when he added a 78 to his 83 of Thursday to give him a total of 161. Only two of the Connecticut contingent remain in the tourney, John Golden of Darien and Billie Burke of Greenwich. Henry Ciuci withdrew from the tournament at the 27th hole when his game was going sour.

Here's one they tell about a certain officer of our local police force:

It seems a stranger drew up beside the officer as he was directing traffic an dinquired the way to Plainfield. The officer, who is always obliging, says, "Now you take your first left, then a right and the nturn left again. Then you pass eight streets and turn right again and then you go straight ahead."

"My, but isn't that a little complicated?" asked the motorist.

"Oh, no," replied the officer. "It's cement almost all the way."

Well, anyway, the officers are trying to uphold that reputation for courtesy that they have.

(By The Associated Press)

The leader drove out a single and a double in four times at bat against Cincinnati and brought his average up one more point to .408. Klein was allowed only two official times at bat and failed to hit at all, dropping three points to .399.

SPLIT HEAT RACES FEATURES GET-AWAY-DAY

NORTH RANDALL, Cleveland, July 11—(AP)—Get-Away-Day for the Grand Circuiters here this afternoon was characterized by split heat races and the biggest avalanche of long shots of the meeting.

Scotland won the first heat, when Gaylworthy was left flat footed at the post, the horses being given a standing-still start. Henry Thomas won the second heat with Phil Volo at 29 to 1. Gaylworthy however, got away to a flying start in both the third and deciding heats and had no trouble in getting the verdict. Outside of this trio. Caretaker from the Dickerson stable, trotted the best race.

JOHNNY GREENE MISSES PERFECT GAME BY ONE HIT AS CITIZENS BEAT ROYALS

Johnny Greene, knocked at the portals of the local baseball hall of fame last night, had the door opened for him, got one foot inside and then had the door slammed in his face. The former Academy star, now a member of the Polish Citizen pitching staff, shut out the Royals at the campus 7 to 0 and came within a hair of turning in a no-run, no-hit game, allowing a single hit in the sixth and final frame with two away. During the entire game but one of the Panik clan saw first base, Morosky, the first baseman being the fortunate one. He made the bass twice, once in the first on a walk, and again in the sixth with his lone bingle.

The game was played under the most questionable of weather conditions, rain falling before game time and a heavy shower falling just after the game was finished. Despite this there was a good sized crowd on hand and every fan stuck through to the final inning. The spectators began to arrive shortly after six o'clock in the midst of a heavy shower, coming equipped with umbrellas, raincoats and newspapers (for the bleachers).

Because of Greene's superb form the contest was a bit lopsided, the Royals failing to provide the expected stiff opposition. For two innings there was no scoring but in the third the Cits got to Eddie Nevins and counted four times. The runs were the result of four hits, two bases on balls and an error. There were other plays which might have gone as slips had the playing conditions been better. The Cits added another pair in the fourth and their final counter in the fifth.

In addition to his nice mound exhibition Greene shaped up nicely with the stick, connecting safely twice in three tries. Lamory was the heavy sticker, getting three in three. The fielding jewel was contributed by Dee Gaudette, Cit centerfielder, in the fourth when he made a beautiful snare of Natosky's long fly to deep center. The score:

LUCAS PITCHES BRILLIANT BALL TO WIN FOR REDS

PHILADELPHIA, July 11—(AP)—Red Lucas pitched superbly in the tight places today and aided his own cause with a home run in the ninth inning to give the Cincinnati Reds a 5 to 3 victory over the Phillies in the opening game of their eastern tour.

The Phillies had plenty of scoring chances but Lucas bore down each time he was in danger. Philadelphia scored twice in the first inning on three solid hits, a walk and a sacrifice, but could not count again until the seventh when Davis hit a home run into the left field bleachers.

The Reds cashed in on every opportunity. They counted three times in the fourth on doubles by Walker and Heilmann and singles by Stripp and Ford, then broke the 3-3 deadlock in the eighth on singles by Swanson and Cuccinello.

Both starting pitchers lasted to the end. The score:

TIGERS WHALE OUT EASY WIN OVER INDIANS

DETROIT, July 11—(AP)—The Tigers went on a hitting spree today and whaled out 17 safeties to win the series closer from Cleveland, 11 to 1.

Brown and Miller were the victims of the assault, while Waite Hoyt was holding the tribesmen to seven safeties. The rampant Bengals hit Brown safely eight times in the first two innings, scoring three times in each. Stone tripled in the first, scoring two men. Averill made a three-bagger for the Indians in the seventh but it didn't figure in the scoring. The score:

WHITE SOX TIE FOR 6TH BY BEATING BROWNS

ST. LOUIS, July 11—(AP)—The Chicago White Sox went into a tie for sixth place with St. Louis today by defeating the Browns 5 to 3 behind steady pitching of Pat Caraway who held the Browns to seven scattered blows.

Caraway was in danger only in the third inning when the Browns bunched their blows to score three runs. Their efforts were powerless after that. Jeffries hit a home run. The score:

Game called at 3.15 p. m.

In the event that the weather man is on his good behavior the first game of the championship series between the J. B. Martin and the Army and Navy will be played at Martin field, Sunday afternoon.

This annual series between these two clubs has in the past caused a great deal of interest and has been looked forward to as the baseball treat of the season. The current year being no exception, enthusiasm is running equally as high as in former years, not only in Taftville, but in the neighboring towns, with every indication that a capacity crowd will be on hand to witness the initial tilt of this inter-village series.

The manager of the Army and Navy is determined to draw first blood and to make good his threat he secured the services of "Speed" Bidge, of Somerville, Mass., to do the pitching. Bidge, who was recommended by Hughie Canavan, former Norwich K. of C. star, was a sensation in Villa Nova college this past season and at present is a stellar performer in the Twilight league in Worcester.

The supporters from the upper village are fully confident that their "hired men" will supply the necessary punch to enable the Army and Navy team to trounce the Velvetmakers and are "saying it with money" that the service boys will walk away with the series.

The J. B. Martins also have plenty of confidence that they will come out on the long end of the score, but they intend to do all their playing on the baseball field and have but very little to say. It is safe to add, however, that the fans from Fancy Corner will have plenty of money on hand Sunday afternoon to wager that their representative in the series will take over the service team.

Walter Linder will toe the slab for the Velvetmen and Eccleston will do the catching, the remainder of the lineup is unchanged.

Hamil and Flynn are the umps.

ROTARIANS NOSE OUT ITALIANS IN LAST INNING OF CLOSE ENCOUNTER

In the best game played in the Junior league to date, the Rotary club defeated the Italian Young Men's club Friday night, 3 to 2. Due to the thunderstorm, the game had to be called while the Rotary was batting in the fourth inning, but as the Rotary were the home team, the game goes as a regulation contest. There seemed to be some question by some as to the legality of the game. The Junior league ruling is providing the team last at bat is leading providing the tea mlast at bat is leading at the time the game is called.

Caron of the Rotary club and Connell hooked up in an exciting pitcher's duel, each allowing four hits. Caron however had the edge on strikeouts having 7 to his credit to three for Connell, while the latter walked three men to one for Caron.

The Italian club was first to score, pushing a run across in the second on a single by Angelone, a stolen base and a scratch hit by Kotch through the infield.

The Rotarians came back in the third with two runs putting them in front. Deschamps, leading off, was safe on an error by Fern. Varonick singled near first base, sending Deschamps to second, Sabroski popped to Hastings, and Charon fanned, but Dickenman came through with a long triple to centerfield, scoring both Deschamps and Veronick. Dickenman was caught at the plate, however, when he tried to stretch the hit into a homer.

In the first half of the fourth, the Italians pushed another run across tying the score. With two away, Fern singled to left, stole second and took third on a wild pitch. Kotch hit to short and when Deschamps mussed up the play, Fern scored and Kotch was safe. Hoffman closed the inning with a liner to Caron.

With rain threatening to stop the contest at any time, the Rotary went out and won the game in their half of the fourth, scoring the necessary run to turn the trick. Austin walked as a starter, and stole second. Nylen also walked. McKenna popped to Hastings, but Caron came through with a long single to right, scoring Austin. Deschamps fanned and Veronick walked, filling the bases. At this point, Umpire DeBarros called the game on account of rain, the Rotary winning, 3 to 2.

Why Any Protest?

Sports Editor: We wish to call your attention to the piece the P. N. A. C., in the Junior league put in the paper. We wish to state that those umpires gave their services free. They did not ask to umpire. Now they wish to ask just which umpire was not up to the standard. The Italian club had a chance for a protest but, the P. N. A. C. were defeated 19 to 0.

Mr. Mathews can be excused, but just which umpire could help Mr. Petrowski's team in a game like the Elks defeated them.

Never mind Mr. Petrowski, you will have a couple of high school paid umpires soon.

Hoping you better luck in the future, I am yours in sports.

Your Garden And My Garden

'In a garden grew a rose,
It was the purest thing;
A lovelier flower ne'er was known,
And all the birds would sing
About its fragrance and its charm,
As happily they'd fly,
Ah! no one e'er could picture it,
This—little rose—to die.

"A boy grew up to manhood,
He was his mother's pride.
We all adorned and loved him,
He grew up by our side;
And when the Great War took him
Away across the foam,
We could not picture him, our boy,
To leave—forever—home.

'God made the world and sends to us
A message from the heart.
It says: "My children, in your world
The dearest friends must part;
For I am thy true Father,
And My will shall be done;
Yea, every harvest shall I reap,
And pluck them—one by one.

'But grieve not for them, is My wish,
They will not have it so—
For they are like the tender flowers
That in the garden grow.
Your boy, just like the little rose,
Was taken from the rest,
But sorrow does not come to him,
For he—dear one—is blessed."

WHO KNOWS?

Dear Social Corner Folks: Wednesday, July ninth, and I have just planted wax beans. Can anyone tell me what the result will be? Has anyone ever planted them as late as this? My mother passed away in May and I did not take any interest in gardening or anything else at that time. My cup and saucer and morning glory vines are growing very slowly. How can I hurry them along? I hope everyone will have a nice summer. GERTRUDE.

Laugh and Be Merry

Laugh and be merry, remember, better the world with a song.
Better the world with a blow in the teeth of a wrong.
Laugh, for the time is brief, a thread the length of a span.
Laugh and be proud to belong to the old proud pageant of man.

Laugh and be merry: remember, in olden time,
God made heaven and earth for joy He took a rhyme,
Made them, and filled them full with the strong red wine of His mirth,
The splendid joy of the stars: the joy of the earth.

Laugh and be merry together, like brothers akin,
Guesting awhile in the rooms of a beautiful inn,
Glad till the dancing stops, and the lilt of the music ends,
Laugh till the game is played; and be you merry, my friends.

These I Love

I love these things;
The grass at early dawn while wet with dew,
A wind that whips my hair, a sky that's blue,
A voice that sings.

And these I love:
The cool gray rain that drops down in the night,
The glory of the sun's pure golden light,
The clouds above.

And stranger things:
A gem within whose heart a bright flame burns,
A yellowed book, a pair of massive urns,
Or young doves' wings.

While I have breath
I'll always love these things that stir me so,
And through the years to come that love will grow,
Till I meet Death.

And even then
The voices of the wind will waken me,
The rain upon my grave will make me be Alive again.

MAKING EIGHTEENTH AMENDMENT EFFECTIVE.

Social Corner Editor: Nothing better shows the real greatness and moral courage of the United States than the promptness of the decision of the supreme court, "the 18th amendment is constitutional." The reform needed now, ("law enforcement") is too deep, too radical to be accomplished by selfish politicians. Christian men and women must do the work or it will not be done. They must cleanse themselves of any guilt by their presence and influences at the caucuses, political conventions and the polls, to make and enforce the law as decidedly as possible against the outlawed liquor traffic. It is true that civil government is appointed by God, but that it shall be in this or that form. He hath not appointed, and though there are several forms of civil government, yet all are lawful and may according to the rules of prudence be made use of in any state, as shall be most for the public good. Therefore, all forms of civil government are called of God. "Submit yourselves unto every ordinance of man for the Lord's sake whether it be to the king as supreme; or unto governors as unto them that are sent by him for the punishment of evil doers and for the praise of them that do well. Having made a choice of a magistry, the authority of God comes upon the magistrate and men are to obey as unto God, and to be subject for conscience sake. The magistrates are for the support, uniting and adorning the commonwealth. They are to be the corner stone upon which the weight of the nation may lie, the corner stone to support the commonwealth in upholding the laws. Laws are the foundations of this nation. If the foundations be cast down, what can the righteous do? The law is the rule between the subject and the magistrate, that the one may know how to rule, and the other, to obey, therefore magistrates should take special care to be learned in the law and make it their business to study the laws by which they are to rule. It is the magistrates' duty to uphold their authority in the highest, to scatter the wicked men with their eyes, for there is a generation of men that are enemies to authority and they talk of levelling all every day. In the Kingdom of Israel, the key of the house of David was laid upon the Magistrate Eliakim's shoulder, the key being the emblem of government, that men should see the weight of government, and as it was placed upon the shoulder of the magistrate men must put their shoulders to the magistrate's shoulders and assist in upholding lawful government.

SOCIAL CORNER EVENTS

July 16—Picnic at home of Canterbury Bell, Bean Hill, Norwich.

The religious preachers and teachers must be faithful, they have a double reference. First, unto the particular flock over which God hath made them overseers. Second, unto the land in general where they live, unto which God hath made them watchmen to foresee danger, and trumpeters to sound forth the praises of God. And men are debtors to both, we must pay both debts in their season and be not forgetful to the nation and church wherein we are, for this is the common ship in which we are all embarked, and if, in bad judgment any are cast away or dashed against the rocks of any foreign power, or swallowed up in the quicksands of domestic divisions, it hazards all the passengers.

We have all concurrence of all the prayers of saintly men that have gone before us, for the prayers of the church are like the acts of a state, they die not with the one who made them, for they are made unto an Eternal God, grounded upon an everlasting righteousness, offered by an eternal spirit, and therefore they are eternally acceptable and of eternal efficacy in after ages. The Psalmist David's prayer (109 Psalm) took effect upon Judas Iscariot, Acts 1-16-20. So men must preach and teach for future years as the prophets did, and the apostles entered upon their labors. So men must work and pray for the future and be content that other men in time to come shall reap the benefit of their prayers and labors. God has always begun a great work as shown in the 18th amendment, and we have great cause to be earnest with Him to go on with it, for He hath said, "Shall I bring to the birth, and shall I not bring forth?" So it is the duty of everyone to assist in the observance of the law.

Let us all beware of them for they forsake the law by putting false interpretations, for he that hath not the spiritual and true sense of the law is without the law, and they that take away the mind of the law, they do destroy the law and this is the greatest sacrilege in the world. Let the ancient standing of truth be preserved. Steal not away the truth from us under the shows and pretenses of love or patriotism, in vain have the efforts of conciliators been who have striven to unite men whose principles in respect of truth were contrary.

The police force of any municipality ought to be one constable to 750 inhabitants, the state to have control of one-third of the number of police in every city or town, said police to be responsible to the state and independent of municipal authorities—or state police increased in the same ratio, two-thirds municipal, one-third state police. Their maintenance to be a matter of agreement between the state and city or town. Transfer of state police from one station to another as the good of the service requires. Removal of all liquor violation cases from municipal courts to federal courts, the department of justice, Washington, D. C., to have charge of prosecution of such cases. Penalty for first offense, maximum fine and minimum imprisonment. Second offense maximum fine and imprisonment in state prison. Third offense might be made by act of congress, "treason" and punished according to degree of crime. In the event of an appeal by an individual convicted of violation of the 18th amendment, said appeal to be referred to the attorney general of the United States, for his review and recommendation. Where the evidence in liquor law violation cases is sufficient to convict an accused person, and juries fail to convict, the presiding judge at his own discretion, might remind jurors of the law relating to perjury. All individuals, who, by giving evidence or otherwise assist in the prosecution of violations of the 18th amendment or any law, should be afforded all possible legal protection from intimidation of any kind, and rigid punishment meted out to the intimidators if convicted.

There is such a thing as deciding from impulse, without reflection, that is mere recklessness, but for the United States to hesitate after a decision has been properly reached in the enactment of the 18th amendment into law would be a mark of weakness, "Forward" must be the nation's watchword. WHEN THEY DON'T LIKE MILK

Dear Corner Friends: Some years ago my sister was convalescing after a serious illness. The doctor had ordered six glasses of milk a day. She had little appetite and did not like milk. This was the way we devised to encourage the drinking.

We bought a half dozen cheap glasses (jelly tumblers serve nicely). Then everyone saved small silhouettes and pictures such as could be quickly pasted to the outside bottom of the glass. The older children enjoyed the little task of cutting the pictures and preparing the glasses.

The pictures were pasted to the bottom of the glass to be seen as one looked into it. When Betty had finished the glass of milk there was always a surprise picture in the bottom. Milk drinking soon was a pleasure and hunting pictures amused the other children. When the glasses were washed we changed the pictures, which was also fun for the children.

Gooseberry Tarts: Two cups gooseberries, 1 cup sugar, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup strawberries. Use baked tart shells. Mix the ingredients and cook until fruit is tender. Fill the baked shells and serve with whipped cream.

Corn Chowder: Two cups fresh corn, 4 cups chopped potatoes, 1½ inch cube fat salt pork, 1 onion, 4 cups milk, 3 tablespoons butter, salt, pepper. Cook enough ears of corn to fill two cups when cut from cob. Cut potatoes in one-half inch cubes and parboil for 5 minutes. Cut pork in small pieces and fry until crisp, then add butter and onion (chopped finely) and cook 5 minutes, stirring frequently. Strain fat into a pan. Add potatoes to the fat together with 2 cups of boiling water (water from the potatoes may be used). Cook until the potatoes are soft and add the corn and milk, then bring to the boiling point and season with salt and pepper. Serve immediately. FRED'S WIFE

CARING FOR HOOKED RUGS

Social Corner Members and Editor: As my husband has always been a connoisseur of hooked rugs and antiques of all kinds we have been using lovely old antique rugs in our home for quite some time. Of course, they become soiled as other rugs. This is how I have kept them in good condition so that both the beauty and value of these lovely old things have increased rather than deteriorated.

At regular intervals I turn the hooked rugs face down and allow the feet that have pressed the dirt into the rugs to step it out again for a few days. Then I use an old-fashioned scrubbing brush, a mild white soap and water and begin the actual cleaning. I scrub soap into one part of the rug at a time and rinse it immediately with a wet, loose-woven towel, removing the suds quickly in this way. The scrubbing loosens the dirt and the wet towel removes it. I then wipe the entire rug with a dry cloth.

After cleaning the rug must be dried as quickly as possible and this I do by laying it on the grass but not in the direct sunlight if the day is very hot and allow it to dry thoroughly by turning it occasionally. I never hang an antique rug on a line as this treatment is hard on them.

It is generally known among antique dealers that an old rug should never be washed in a machine or placed in a bath as one fugitive dye might ruin the whole rug. Also, I never use the vacuum cleaner on these rugs as the strong suction catches the loose ends and the rug is likely to rip. Instead I sweep them with a soft broom that has fine splints and is just right for this purpose.

Asparagus and Olives Au Gratin: One pint asparagus, cooked or canned, 1-4 cup ripe olives, 1 hard cooked egg, 1 cup white sauce, buttered bread crumbs. Place a layer of asparagus in bottom of baking dish, sprinkle with ripe olives, stoned and chopped and with hard cooked eggs coarsely chopped. Cover with white sauce and sprinkle with crumbs. Bake until the dish is heated through and brown. DORIS

PERNICKETY'S GARDEN

Dear Social Corner Members: We went riding Sunday and while we were out saw so many pretty gardens that I was, well, rather disappointed in my little raggedy patch when I got home and looked at it, remembering the others I had seen. It simply doesn't compare with them! But what can one expect of a garden when it is tended by a gardener like me?

I started pulling out those old sweet william plants the other day but it began to rain and I had to stop and haven't been near them since. And my young canterbury bell plants are howling to be set out. If I don't get them out soon there won't be any to put out. And weeds! Well, I had better stop this tale of woe and talk of more cheerful things.

Dianthus heddewiggi has just begun to bloom and if we have any rain at all, will continue to put forth blossoms till frost. This is a very satisfactory flower for cutting as it has fairly long stems and keeps well in water. There is a very wide range of colors and both single and double flowers.

The calliopsis are flaunting their bright yellow and brown petticoats these days and I have caught them flirting with the bachelors buttons which grow near them. My calliopsis were dwarf last year but these that have come up from the self-sown seeds of last year are tall. I wonder why?

My phlox is just beginning to bloom. Jules Sandeau, a bright pink with a white eye is my earliest. I also have Thor, Rynstrom, Mrs. Cameron, La Vague and Beacon. I like them all very much and there is a good long season of bloom if the first seed pods are kept clipped off. I have read that all phlox seeds should be cut because the seedlings are often more vigorous than the old plants, even though they are much inferior as to color and other qualities. In the order for new perennial seeds to be planted in the cold frame I sent for some perennial phlox seeds. I think it will be fun to try some and see if I can get plants different than those I already have. The name given in the catalog is phlox decussata. I wonder if I shall be "cussing" them a year from now!

I wish to thank those who suggested names for my garden. They were very good but somehow none of them seemed to fit it exactly, and I am still puzzling. Sister Rhody suggests "Patnways" but I think Hodge-Podge will be more appropriate!

When are you coming to see it? PERNICKETY.

SIEVE FOR STRAINING JELLY

Social Corner Friends: I secured a round wooden cheese box from the grocer, took off the bottom and bought enough aluminum screening to cover the bottom twice. Tacked one piece on, letting the edges come up on the box about one-half inch—then placed the other piece of wire on so that the opening between the wires would be over the wires of the first, which makes a fine sieve for straining the juices from all kinds of peeling and fruits for making jelly. I seldom ever have to strain the juices again, by not forcing it through. Legs are nailed onto the box about three or four inches long to hold it off the bottom of a large dishpan, which is used to catch the juices.

I can think of no greater timesaver than this homemade sieve for one who makes shelves of jelly for a large family, and its usefulness would surely replace the time for making and the space for keeping.

I have three boys and one can imagine the grime that is carried into the kitchen and left on the linoleum. So I bought a ten cent scrub brush and nailed it bristle side up to the back porch. Now when they come in they stop and run their feet across the brush and my worries along this line are over.

Sponge cake Virginia: Four egg yolks, 1 cup sugar, 3 tablespoons orange juice, 1-2 teaspoon lemon extract, 1-8 teaspoon salt, 3 tablespoons grated orange rind, 1 cup pastry flour, 1 1-2 teaspoons baking powder, 4 egg whites, stiffly beaten. Beat egg yolks and add sugar and beat until creamy. Add orange juice and beat 2 minutes. Fold in remaining ingredients. Mix lightly. Half fill greased muffin pans. Bake 15 minutes in moderate oven. Unmold and serve cakes fresh and surrounded with orange sauce. AMIABLE.

ENJOYABLE DAY AT BAY STATE'S

Dear Social Corner Friends: Yesterday I attended the picnic at Bay State's home and had a good time. Her yard is just the place for picnics with plenty of room for autos and tables. We had a lovely dinner of chowder and other good things and then had our picture taken. Hope they prove good. Then we went over to the summer house and had a nice view of the river. Some of the members and children went in bathing. Soon the water began to look very dark and I was sure it was going to rain so quite a lot of us started for home. And how it did pour up through Lisbon! Hope every one got home safe as I did.

My recipe for spice cake is as follows:

Spice cake: 4 level tablespoons butter, 1 cup sugar, cream well and add one egg, and continue creaming till smooth; 2 cups of sifted flour, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 teaspoon blended spice, 1-2 teaspoon cinamon. Sift well together and add to egg and sugar, with one cup of rich sour milk or cream and 1-4 teaspoon vanilla. Bake in moderate oven. White frosting. AUNTY JANE.

CANTERBURY BELL EXPECTS LARGE CROWD

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: Just a line to let you know I am looking for you all July 16. I want to meet new and old writers. Please bring your dishes (paper plates are best), also something to eat; whatever you prefer. Coffee will be served at noon. Please bring your work and spend the day. I am on the Plain Hill road in Norwich Town. Take the Yantic trolley car, get off at Bean Hill church and follow the color about one-half mile up the hill.

Betsy Bobbett: Very nice of you; plants are looking fine.

W. C. E.: Please call me up when you get to telephone. Would like to speak to you. Tel. 634-W. CANTERBURY BELL.

CHILDREN IN THE GARDEN.

Dear Social Corner: Do you share your gardening joys with your children? If my garden were for my own pleasure only, I should feel very selfish for spending so much time and money on it. But Margery and William are both interested in gardens so we have good times together. They never refuse an invitation to go to the garden. When we find some new buds we call them a secret. They like to find surprises in discovering new plants in bloom.

The spring that she was 18 months old Margery always wanted to lead me to the garden when we went out for a walk. One day she went out by herself and I found her wandering around the garden. Although her vocabulary was very limited at that time, she made me understand that she was looking for something. This was in March so all we could find was some narcissus and dandelions that had commenced to grow. These seemed to satisfy her and I wondered if she remembered going to the garden for flowers and vegetables the previous fall. From that time her interest in gardening has continued.

Last summer Margery started a little garden of her own. Whenever I was working around my plants she would ask me to give her some. She would set them out and then later up they would come and other plants would go in their places. As it was her own garden I let her do as she pleased with it. A few days ago a little girl was visiting here and I heard Margery telling her about my plants. "These look like pansies but they are violas. They are a cross between pansies and violets. The blue ones are Jersey gems and the yellow ones are apricot gems."

William didn't want to be left out so held up a leaf and said "This is a lily of the valley leaf. It has white blossoms." He has a garden of his own too, but he never gets as enthusiastic over things as his sister does. He knows the names of most of my plants and there are only about 100 kinds in my garden.

One evening when I was dressing to go out, some visitors came to see my flowers. They said that they would go to the garden by themselves, if I were too busy to show them around. Then William spoke up, "Mother doesn't need to go with you, I'll show you the flowers." So when you come to see it, my son will guide you around my garden.

As for bouquets, my sideboard is usually covered with them from early spring until late in November. I let the children pick all they want to of most kinds of flowers. They usually gather a mixture of every kind of flower in bloom at the time.

Whenever there is a new garden magazine or catalog in the mail, we look it over together. We talk over our garden plans and hope to have a bird bath and a lily pool some day. The interested faces of these two youngsters are the brightest spots in Happy Hour garden. SISTER RHODY.

WRITERS ARE MISSED.

Dear Friends: The weeks go by so quickly that Thursday gets by before I know it and the Social Corner letter isn't written. I am having a hard time living up to the white sink now as I have an infected finger and can't put my left hand in water. Maybe it isn't some job to keep it out. The bandage is so large that I can't wear a rubber glove so I wrap my hand in wax paper and tie it on with a string. I have already been to the doctor's three times and no one knows how many more times I'll have to go. I don't enjoy his poking around in it at all. The wet solution I put on it every two hours smells like chloride of lime and I detest the smell of that so all together I'm having a very pleasant time. By the way, I didn't get it Fourth of July, either. I just naturally cut it with a butcher knife, and it wasn't sharp either like those E. L. M. has.

Today I attended a picnic at the home of Beers and had a nice time and delicious dinner. I had to leave early though, eat and run as it were, as I had a date with doctor. There was one Social Corner member there, but I don't know her pen name, beside Beers, Milky Way and myself.

Beers' flower garden was lovely and formed a pleasing background for the long table that was set in the back yard. Rambler roses are at their best now and Milky Way has an arbor with both white and pink ones. I do enjoy the "garden" letters, especially Pernickety's, who seems to have such a store of knowledge gathered from her experience.

What has happened to Jane of R. I.? And Nonesopretty? I just found out the other day what that flower looked like.

I hope Ann Tenna will soon be back on the page too. A Friendly Voice used to write very interesting letters and I haven't seen one for ages. It seems to be the faithful few who keep the page going.

There are so many who send in their letter for admission and let that end it, but why not try to write once in a while so that when you don't write you will be missed. If you don't have much to write about this time perhaps next time there will be a lot. If every member wrote once a month what a page we would have every week. Think it over, any way, and give it a try. SUMAC (No. 6)

A NARROW ESCAPE

Dear Social Corner: Someone going by our place just now singing, "My Wife's Gone to the Country, Hurrah! Hurrah!" reminded me that our page looked that way last week so I will drop a line to say I am still here but had a close call recently. During the electrical storm yesterday afternoon a bolt struck a high tension wire pole just at the rear of our barn and split the pole in two just as slick as if a buzz saw had done the job. The cross arm was splintered into kindling wood and the bolt ploughed up an irregular tract of turf from stone to stone, through a thicket of brush and stopped at the root of a large nut tree several yards from the pole. We were thankful the bolt did not strike our barn as we had worked so strenuously to get our hay into it before the shower.

Bay State: Was sorry to miss your picnic but felt duty's call before pleasure, as we were in the midst of haying and felt we ought to get some under cover.

Does anyone know the value placed on a coin dated 1835 (East India company), a wreath on one side and coat of arms on the other side, one quarter anna; in good condition. Recently I looked through an ancient Bible that was given to me years ago and found in it a U. S. inter. revenue proprietary three cent stamp, green in color, with Washington's head on it. The cancellation was made in hand writing, May 8th, but no year date. Can anyone tell me about what year these were first used. Gypsy Wanda: Please tell me or anyone else who will.

Hope all are having a pleasant summer and our best thoughts go out to the sick and those in trouble.

Hope to be able to attend the picnic next week at Canterbury Bell's home and I am hoping to see her flower garden. It seemed a pity to see all the lovely ox-eyed daisies mowed down and in 20 minutes all dried to a crisp in the hay. The blue spider lily and the flame day lily have given me much satisfaction as well as my geraniums this year.

Pisces: Where are you? Let's have a picnic at Squaw Rocks, Club 4 members. ARIES

SALAD TIME

Dear Social Corner Friends: First of all I want to thank the editor for the yellow—perhaps I should say "golden"—slip. Most yellow slips that are sent to me around the first of the month are just "yellow" to me, but "golden," ah, how golden! to the other fellow. It is kind of nice to find one that does look golden to me.

Summer time is salad time. There seems to be no end of combinations for salads. How helpful that is for using up the nips and bits in the food box. Who wouldn't prefer a salad instead of hash? My young hopeful always calls hash the "kitchen clean-up." Never have I heard him speak of a salad as such, even if the makings of it were those of hash. A friend once said that everything but the kitchen mop was in the salad she'd hurriedly scraped together for some unexpected luncheon guests. However, mop or no mop, the guests, one and all, proclaimed it the most delicious salad they'd ever eaten.

Here are a few salad hints that may be of help in a time of emergency.

The vinegar from preserved pickles may be used in place of ordinary vinegar. In a way, it is even better, for it adds a delicious flavor to the salad.

Everyone knows, of course, that lemon juice can be substituted for vinegar, and is even preferable for most fruit salads. It sort of brings out the fruit flavor.

Melted butter can be substituted for olive oil. Care, however, should be taken to just melt the butter, not to cook it.

Bacon may also be used in place of oil. Dice several slices of bacon. Put it in a frying pan and fry until a crisp delicate brown. Pour about a half cup of vinegar into the pan, add seasonings and a few drops of onion juice. Stir well and pour over the salad and serve immediately. This is particularly good for a salad of greens, such as lettuce, chicory, endive or water cress. It is also so good for potato salad, and makes an agreeable change for the usual French dressing. IOWA LYNN.

MY MOVING PICTURE

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: How I do enjoy reading about the gardens but I enjoy more having one and watching the plants develop. From the time of the early scillas until the hardy chrysanthemums are snow-covered, some shrub or plant is in bloom and then all winter there are the sunny windows with bright geraniums, fuchsias and begonias. One poet puts it this way:

"He who makes a garden opens the gate of heaven and lets the glory through."

This week the ramblers are in their prime—red, white, pink and larkspur that is almost five feet tall—one bed all blue, the other all pink and white. This from my own seed.

I am using ageratum, a soft blue, to edge two of my beds, placing coleus plants in varied colors just back of them and red geraniums next and expect the contrast to be delightful.

Verbenas are a favorite of mine and each year a cozy corner is reserved for them. Drummond phlox so rich in variety and range of color makes an attractive spot. I am trying the Chinese forget-me-not for the first time, this year. They are just coming into bloom. I sometimes call my garden "A Moving Picture," for each day all through the season brings its change in growth and color—a constant delight. A garden to me means so much; a place of hope and promise; a place where burdens and cares seem to slip away for a while; a place to bury fret and worry and the things that should not be. A place where we exercise our faith and confidence in God each time we plant a seed.

As I write, humming bird and bee and butterfly are flitting about from flower to flower as if they, too, were enjoying my garden. Some of the flowers find their way to sick, to shut-in, to church, to friend, so I am indeed glad that God gave us gardens, for gardens "help us to think God's thoughts after him"; thoughts of beauty; thoughts of service; thoughts of love.

Kindest wishes to Aunty No. 1. Hope she will soon be her own dear self.

I wish Ren and Ink could obtain a book of essays by Odell Shepherd from the Otis library called "Joys of Forgetting." I enjoyed it so much. I think she would.

Where are Lill and Gardener's Daughter. I enjoyed their letters so much.

Hope you all have a good time at Canterbury Bell's, July 16. ROYANCO

NO HOSTESS, SO NO PICNIC.

Dear Social Corner and Members: As no one has offered to be hostess there will not be any picnic, July 15th. Out of so many members of Club 6 it does seem as if the same ones wouldn't have to be hostess all the time. I am willing to do my part, but if no one offers to be hostess at the August picnic I am afraid a new secretary will have to be chosen. If any one cares to take charge for next time they can communicate with me. RAVENA (Club 6).

HELPING THE GARDEN

Dear Social Corner: Have just discovered a crop of poppies all bedded in a disused portion of the garden.

I took a large old clump of sweet william and placed it as a hedge. Divided up, it covered a long space.

The country roads are beautiful just now and it is a treat to drive through Canterbury and see the lovely roses and scenery. Many improvements are being made and constant progress is being made in the right direction.

I hope all the readers are enjoying this beautiful summer. THE BANSHEE

EATING

Dear Corner Friends: I see more letters are needed for the Corner page and as I have got started, will scribble again a few lines as a filler. The fresh vegetables and fruits right from the garden surely do taste good these days and those we can and preserve for winter use taste just as good at that season. Eating is just as necessary for life and health as breathing, and the proper food is essential, too. A feast is enjoyable, such as our Social Corner dinners, but sometimes detrimental. Do we consider eating a rounded out and complete part of every program? The following lines I came across may answer the question.

"Behold! The lodge lodgeth together and they eat.

The clubs clubeth together and they eat.

The business men take counsel and they eat.

The young people elect officers and they eat.

And even when the missionary society meeteth together, they eat. But the latter is in good cause because they 'eat in remembrance of the poor heathen, who have not much to eat.'

Behold! Hath man's brains gone to his stomach.

And doth he no longer regard intellectual dainties.

That thou canst no longer call an assembly, or get together a quorum, or even a Baker's dozen.

That the day cometh, that to get a crowd at prayer meeting, the preacher must hold up a biscuit? Yes, verily thou hast heard of the child races of the world.

But behold! It is nigh thee even at the door. For as one calleth unto the child and sayeth, 'Come hither, sweet little one and I will give you a stick of candy,' even so must thou say to grown up papas and mamas, 'Assemble ye together and we will serve refreshments,' And lo they come like sheep into a pen.

Isn't it true?"

Don't we sometimes think it is true that the eating part of the program is the drawing card. When to some the hour or two of sociability afterward would be very pleasing even complimentary after the hostess had worked hard and long to prepare the eats.

Why do we not hear from Rural Aunty any more, her letters were full of cheer and hope.

Mavis: I think I have lost your address but still thank you for the card you sent quite a while ago.

We are inexpressably sorry to know that Aunty No. 1 is still confined to her bed but hope she may be able to be up by the time this is printed. I am sure Little Sister would enjoy cards and letters as she is a patient in the hospital and her address is, Mrs. Nettie Dunstan, care of St. Joseph's hospital, Willimantic, Conn.

You spoke of knowing two of my nieces, Woodside, and I just wonder who you are. Did you know I was a great-great-aunt to a niece born on my birthday, July 4? There are six Social Corner sisters with the same patriotic birthday. Those that sent cards, I thank you. THEODA

PLANNING THE GARDENS AHEAD

Dear Social Corner: What do you look for when you are out riding? I always notice the flower gardens. When I see one with a green gate, I shall stop and see if the gardener is Betsy Bobbett. Some day when she's out on a country road a long way from home, she may see a patch of flower beds with a stone wall around three sides and a white gate under a linden tree. Then she will know that she has reached Happy Hour Garden. I wonder if Pernickety has decided upon a name for her garden.

Last year I set out a Peruvian daffodil bulb. I put it in a flower pot on the porch but it died. The catalogues claim that it will bloom outdoors in summer and again in the house. I hope Betsy Bobbett will write again about hers. She is not the only one who keeps a list of what flowers she wants to try. One of the things on my list is dwarf hybrid dahlias from seed. I want to start some in my hot bed next spring.

Have you planted seeds of perennials for next year's flowers? I sowed four kinds in the cold frame and some of them are coming up. Coonara pink Iceland poppies and royal blue forget-me-nots are two things that I have started for a color picture in my garden next spring.

For the sister who likes to try new recipes I will send the following:

Spider Cake (sponge): 3 eggs, 3 tablespoons hot water, 1 cup flour, 1½ teaspoons baking powder, ½ teaspoon lemon extract, ½ teaspoon vanilla extract, 1 tablespoon vinegar added last. Bake in a spider with sugar sprinkled on top of dough.

Cumberland Cake: 2 eggs, 1 cup sugar, ½ cup milk, ½ teaspoon salt, 2 level T. butter, 1 c. plus 2 T. flour, 2 teas. baking powder. Beat whites of eggs stiff, add yolk and beat. Add sugar gradually. Scald milk and put butter in it. Add flour, baking powder and salt to eggs. Add scalded milk and beat. Add flavoring. SISTER RHODY

A BUSY SEASON.

Dear Social Corner Editor and Sisters: Many thanks for yellow slip. It sure was a surprise, and for the Sisters that sent me birthday greetings I thank you all. It is nice to be remembered.

While we are all busy all the time, it seems that we are even more so at this time. I just don't know where the time to do canning is coming from but it will be done just the same.

Sumac has been having an infected finger which meant a visit to the doctor every day and yesterday (Wednesday) he told her that she could keep her finger a while longer, which was certainly good news. Best wishes to you all. MILKY WAY.

BLOOMERS.

Dear Editor and Social Corner Sisters: Who among you wear or would like to wear bloomers? Not dainty, fancy ones, but real workday, serviceable ones? Here is a way for those who can have them. For huckleberrying, gathering nuts in the fall, or any roaming in the lots or woods, climbing over walls and fences or through brush, they are more convenient than skirts. In the kitchen if you like and in our gardens, too, both vegetable and flower gardens, you will find them most convenient. You who keep poultry and buy mash by the bag, turn the bags wrong side out, hang on the line and beat with carpet beater. Let them hang for a week; if it rains all the better. Then put them in the wash boiler with water and powder, give a good boiling, twice over if you have plenty of water. Then a good rinsing. If you wish to dye them blue, gray or green do it, following directions. It takes two bags to make one pair of bloomers. Cut out a pattern, or buy one, face around waist line and bottom of edge, run in black elastic one-inch wide, fasten to the desired bigness and there you are. Take your comfort in convenience, you who have plenty of these bags. Pass a couple over to some one you know who has none. Tell them how to make a pair of bloomers. If you do not care for these make a kitchen apron or two. One bag makes a large apron; dye or not as you like.

I have a couple of every day petticoats for winter wear. The cloth is soft and warm for summer wear. O, no, ha, ha, but I do not enjoy warm clothing in cold weather. I am not ashamed. I am along in years and like to be comfortable. Proud? Yes, more than is good for me sometimes. Pillow cases, too, can be made for boys and workmen. One bag makes a slip of course. Sash curtains can be made for the back windows on the farm. They do not look so bad, with a wide hem all around. But all of us do not live on a farm. Use only one bag to a window in one to two sashes as you like.

Enough for this time. TURQUOISE (Club 4).

SOME SUMMER READING

Dear Social Corner Readers: I was browsing about in our small library recently in search of books that would go well with summer weather and yet leave something worthwhile with me when read. I espied Mrs. King's book, "The Well-Considered Garden," took a peep inside and charmed by the fine views of masses of gorgeous flowers I took possession of it without delay. For a companion book I browsed further, soon noticing a very modest title, "The Next-to-Nothing House." That certainly sounded meek and not especially enticing, but on glancing inside and noting the fine views within I concluded the author had really overdone the modesty role in her title. And so I took it and came home. It is by Mrs. Alice Van Leer Carrick, was published in 1922, and is the story of how she furnished the old Webster cottage in Hanover, New Hampshire, with antiques which she secured by gift, by trade and by purchase from second hand shops, junk men and at country auctions. I judge from her tale that the "goodman" is, or at least was, a professor at Dartmouth college. You see, this humble story and a half cottage built in 1790 is not without some measure of fame having been the birthplace of the founder of Wellesley college and more than that, Daniel Webster roomed in it during his sophomore year at Dartmouth, so there is a plate outside setting forth these facts and many tourists read and call to be shown about.

What a wonderful Corner page we might have if only we possessed such facile pens as does Mrs Carrick. Also, if we had her inimitable style, but then no doubt she wields her pen and sharpens her wits oftener than most of us do ours. She sort of takes one by the hand and leads one about each room explaining all the difficulties and problems she faced and how she met and at last overcame each one. Sixty views show just how the furniture is arranged in each of the eight rooms. Somehow one finds oneself rejoicing with the writer over having secured these appropriate pieces and at a reasonable outlay. Some of my friends know my fondness for pottery. Mrs. Carrick has a lot of it—gray and brown and yellow, some pieces with ears and some without, some provided with handles, while others are handleless. My joy in finding this treasure book is especially great because I was quite sure this small library held not a single book about antiques and I do so like to read about them and the interesting tales a collector with the knack of writing entertainingly can tell about his adventures and finds. Mrs. C. writes minutely of her fine lot of silhouettes which she prizes highly. Some of our members no doubt have such and many other desirable things, but little along this line has appeared on the Corner page. I wish we might have some letters on this subject which to many of us is fascinating. This author in the front of the book quotes these appropriate lines from Black.

"And I said to myself. If I were a poet or a painter, I would take the common things and show the wonder and the beauty of them."

With greetings to you all. EVELINE BURR.

SOME GOOD RECIPES.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: Here are some more recipes:

A Man's Salad: One head of lettuce, half a dozen young green onions, including tops, and one hard boiled egg. Use the heart of the lettuce for the body of the salad. Shred the lettuce, chop the onions and mash the egg. Moisten with French dressing and pour over lettuce.

Hollywood Salad: (Individual service. Peel an orange, removing all white skin. Cut into one-fourth inch slices. Cover a plate with shredded lettuce and lay on two slices of orange. Cover this with two banana quarters which have previously been covered with lemon juice and rolled in finely ground nuts. Top with another slice of orange and garnish with mayonnaise and a maraschino cherry.

Vitamin Salad: (Individual service). On a bed of lettuce arrange orange slices allowing one medium size orange to a serving. Remove stones from large prunes which have been cooked until tender. Stuff with cottage cheese formed into small balls. Put four prunes around orange slices. Garnish with mayonnaise made with lemon juice.

Woodside: Glad I happened to give you the name of the dish you bake so often. Your advice as to the part of the ham to use is good. P. K.

LEADING SHARES LOSE 1 TO 4 POINTS AS TRADERS TOOK PROFITS

NEW YORK, July 11.—(AP)—Minus signs were in vogue again on the stock market today.

Leading shares lost one to four points net as traders took profits on the three day advance. The decline was accelerated by the weakness of wheat, for the July quotation dropped to a new lo wfor the year at 95 3-8 cents. Cotton was heavy and closed $1.15 to $1.80 a bale lower.

The bond market was strong. Utilities joined the rails in the advance, although trading was slightly less active than yesterday.

Efforts to mark stocks up at the opening drew a limited following from commission house customers. A score or more of one thousand to three thousand share blocks changed hands in the first half hour at rising prices, but the list soon began to wobble and before noon was fluctuating uncertainly.

During the early afternoon quotations shaded off and the market gradually turned heavy, closing at the lowest level of the day. The total transactions amounted to just over 1,500,000 shares, one of the smallest turnovers of the year.

The market was partially influenced by the movement of wheat which was higher in the forenoon, only to break sharply later. July closed 2 cents lower, up a cent from the bottom, and the other months showed roughly the same net loss.

Reports of rains in parts of Canada, and large receipts from the southwestern harvest fields figured in the bearishness. Corn, on the other hand, was steady, closing fractionally higher. Call money eased, dropping to 2 per cent, from the renewal rate of 2 1-2. Time funds were firm in a dull market and the current quotations are regarded as largely nominal. There was no change in the other forms of credit.

The week end business reviews found the first ten days of July had fulfilled earlier forecasts of the seasonal recession, Dun's commented on the results of the mid-year inventories which reveal relatively moderate stocks of goods, "foreshadowing an ultimate resumption of buying on a large scale."

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—Prices of investment issues continued their upward climb in the listed bond market today, although some issues which have profited greatly from the demand this week failed to hold their gains. On the whole, the advance and the activity were less than yesterday, the banner day since last March. Trading started at a brisk pace but slowed down during the afternoon.

The investment demand, however, continued for high grade railroad, utility and foreign bonds, and the average for utility issues reached the highest point in three years. Stock privilege issues were hesitant after early strength and some recessions occurred as equity issues weakened. At the close convertible bonds were irregularly higher. Trading in United States government bonds was dull and lower prices were the rule.

Bank and institutional buying held prime corporation issues on their upward course, although some declines followed early gains. Atchison General 4s, touched a new high and then sold off 1-4 in thin trading. Union Pacific refunding 4s were strong, rising to a new 1930 high on a 1 3-8 point gain. St. Louis-San Francisco, Pennsylvania and New York Central issues were steady. A large inquiry developed for Big Four 4 1-2s, Nashville Chattanooga and St. Louis 4s, and Southern Railway 4s.

BOND SALES.

NEW YORK, July 11.—(AP)—Official New York Stock exchange bond sales today $9,986,000. From January 1st to date $1,551,068,000.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—Curb stocks worked irregularly lower today, in another dull session of narrow and indecisive price movements.

Total sales aggregated 402,100 shares, or 78,400 less than yesterday's. The market opened firm, but began to ease later, in sympathy with the big board.

The only issues to show any great activity were Electric Bond and Share and Trans-America. Electric Bond sagged a point., Trans-America closed off a fraction.

Some of the natural gas stocks were well supported. The United Light A, American Light and Traction, Lone Star group, worked a little higher the last two closing about a point up. Electric Power associates lost about 3 points, and Duke Power, a strong spot yesterday, lost its rise with an 8 point drop.

Holding company and investment trust shares were generally irregular. United Founders sold up a fraction in response to its semi-annual report, which showed an asset value only little more than a point above recent levels. The stock later eased, and closed off 1-8. Goldman Sachs lost a point. Prince and Whitely and Taggart corporation were firm.

Among the few copper shares on this market, Mayflower associates, an investment trust with substantial South African mine holdings, lost about 4 points. Oils were dull. Gulf lost a couple of points on announcement of another cut of 15 cents in Pennsylvania crude, then rallied to close off only a fraction. In the industrials and specialties, Deere and Anglo Chilean lost 2 points, and Driver Harris jumped 3 in a small turnover.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 11—(AP)—Suddenly reversing an upward flight, wheat values late today plunged to below the bottom level reached heretofore this season or for 17 years back.

Reports of rains affording some relief from drought both in Canada and in domestic spring wheat territory, were to a great degree responsible for a quick switch that many traders made to the selling side as the day drew to an end. Earlier, extremely adverse crop advices from the Dakotas, and Montana tended to make the wheat market soar. Closing quotations on wheat were unsettled 1 7-8a2 3-8c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish and in some cases at exactly the lowest point yet reached. Corn closed at 1-4a1c net advance, oats a shade off to 1-4c up, and provisions varying from 5c setback to a rise of 20c.

Provisions averaged higher influenced largely by the course of hog values.

NEW YORK, July 11—(AP)—Commercial failures for this week totaled 428, compared with 435 for the five days last week and 490 insolvencies for the six days two weeks ago. Defaults with liabilities of more than $5,000 declined in each instance, totaling 253 this week, 266 last week and 287 two weeks ago.

Standard Statistics company, in a survey of the paper industry, says: "Leading manufacturers have succeeded in effecting some operating economies to offset the poor prospects for an upward revision on news grade paper and further savings in production costs are expected in the coming months. The current outlook, therefore, is that, while newsprint sales this year will fall somewhat below 1929 takings, producers' earnings, nevertheless will probably exceed the disappointing showings recorded last year."

Plant breeding experiments have been conducted since 1879 at Michigan State college.

192ND FIELD ARTILLERY COMPLETES SECOND PROBLEM

Completing the second of its two-day war problems, the 192nd Field Artillery, C. N. G., returned to camp at Niantic Friday, after spending the night occupying a defensive position on the west bank of the Connecticut river. The outfit took the position under cover of darkness Thursday night, acting as a war strength battalion under a different set of officers from those who commanded a similar problem the first of the week.

Just how successful the regiment was in keeping its movements from sight of "enemy" observers and in concealing its equipment in the field from the view of airplanes which circled overhead Friday morning, will be determined at a critique to be held at the camp.

Little rest was obtained by the men of the regiment while on the problem and accordingly Friday afternoon's program at the camp was devoted largely to giving the men a chance to rest up.

There was a regimental parade Friday evening at 6 o'clock, daylight saving time.

Saturday the feature of the 192nd activities will be a big track and field meet.

The climax of the first week of camp will be reached Sunday afternoon when the regiment will celebrate its organization day.

The Headquarters battery, stationed in New London and commanded by Capt. Laurence B. McEwen, will present a pageant of colonial service from 1739 to 1776.

The Service battery, stationed at Danielson and commanded by Capt. Gordon J. Gale, will present a series of tableaux showing post-war service, 1920-1930.

The First battalion Headquarters Battery and Combat train, stationed at Norwich and commanded by Capt. William R. Dennison, will present a tableaux of the battle of Petersburg, Va., June 16, 1864.

Battery A, stationed in New London and commanded by Capt. Edison O. Davis, will present a scene showing the surrender of Burgoyne at Saratoga in October, 1777.

Battery B, stationed at Norwich and commanded by Capt. Meredith Lee, will present a tableau of the Aisne-Marne, August, 1918.

The Second battalion Headquarters battery and Combat train, stationed at Norwalk, and commanded by Capt. Patrick H. Lyden, will present a scene from the battle of Fredericksburg, Va., December, 1862.

Battery C, stationed at Norwalk, and commanded by Capt. Frederick H. Borneman, will present a scene from the Oise-Aisne offensive, September, 1918.

Battery D, stationed at Danbury, and commanded by Capt. Reuben H. King, will present a tableau of great historic interest, the Danbury raid, April, 1777.

The Third battalion Headquarters Battery and Combat train, stationed at Stamford, and commanded by Capt. Wood D. Beeghly, will present the scene at Appomattox Court House, April, 1865.

Battery E, stationed at Stamford, and commanded by Capt. Kieran Herford, will present the Meuse-Argonne, September, 1918.

Battery F, stationed at Greenwich, and commanded by Capt. George M. Hill, will present a tableau of the campaign around New York in 1776.

The people of Connecticut will thus be presented with scenes of their history from colonial times, when Lighthorse Harry Lee of Virginia on June 7, 1776, moved a resolution in the Continental Congress "that these united colonies are and of a right ought to be, free and independent states," and the flintlocks of the colonists barked out their challenge to Great Britain, until the last shell screamed its way toward the German lines on the 11th day of November, 1918.

The committee that is arranging this great celebration is headed by Lieut. Col. C. Hadlai Hull, 192nd F. A., with Lieut. Col. Nathan Horowitz, U. S. A., as honorary member, and Major Otto H. Schroeter of New London, Major George J. Schoen of Danbury and Major Charles H. Metcalf of Stamford as members.

He Bows To The Moon

By DONALD BAYNE HOBART

A MILLIONAIRE BACHELOR'S BUNGALOW IS INVADED BY TWO BEAUTIFUL WOMEN WITH VASTLY DIFFERENT MOTIVES

DOUBTLESS there have been more beautiful nights for lovely starlights are molded with the shadows of dreams and the faint fragrance of remembrance, but Blake Martin asserted afterward that there could not possibly have been, and Mr. Martin was in a position to know.

One who has strolled amid the dark misery of a woeful night, one who has known the pale silence of the stars, who has marched with shadows whose voices were the whispers of the wind, learns much of the wee small hours, and such was Blake Martin.

Lofty souls are so often considered lonely; so it was that Blake Martin's friends, knowing little about the man, said much. Envy and malice whispered from behind the threadbare cloak of friendship, for Mr. Martin was rich and quite charming and thus fair game for the sneers of the shallow.

That he was unmarried was something else again. There had been many ladies, quite adorable ladies, who had met Blake Martin and wondered and who had gone out of his life a bit chagrined and still wondering. As is the way with charming ladies, they had asked themselves many questions and had found many answers as to why Mr. Martin should have found them desirable, but he had not done so. The answer was quite obvious and for that reason a bit obscure. Blake Martin had neglected to fall in love.

Mr. Martin, feeling quite satisfied with the world and the cut of his new white flannels, strolled languidly along the white beach which led to his bungalow. Such was the mood of the gentleman that he found objection neither to the lateness of the hour nor to the fact that he strolled in solitary grandeur with the moon.

WHAT the sea whispered as it bathed in the light of the moon he did not know, for the sound of the sea is the voice of yesterday, eternally speaking but never silent. To his ears the roaring of the waves was the muted bass in the symphony of the night.

As he reached the shadowy veranda of his tiny Spanish bungalow, Blake Martin turned and bowed to the moon. Now, a man who has walked in solitary grandeur with the moon may bow, but the result of the action was a soft and musical laugh—oh, quite a lovely laugh.

"A brave companion always is the moon!" said the voice of what surely must be a very lovely lady. A voice like the last strains of a waltz.

"A brave companion and a gracious one," said Blake Martin, moving forward. "A moon that will lead a man to loveliness where he expected only solitude deserves far more than my humble bow!"

"But how can you be sure that the moon has led you to loveliness?" asked the voice from the shadows, and Blake Martin knew that a lady smiled.

"Must one be sure? Often it is the uncertainty of things which makes them lovely!"

He dropped into a chair close to the lady, who was but a white and softly scented blur amid the darkness.

"Then you think that I am an uncertainty?" said that low, throbbing voice, soft as the dusk.

"Is not the unexpected always that?"

"Perhaps!" Now a soft laugh, wistful as the wind. "But one does not always welcome the unexpected!" Could that have been a sigh? "Most men prefer to deal in certainties; it is the unexpected which frightens them!"

"Are you quite sure? After all, most of us marry—"

"Oh!" Again that laugh that was a rose dropped from a window upon a rainy night. "Then you are a cynic?"

"No." Blake Martin shook his head. "Cynicism is but a shield we wear to hide the bitterness within our hearts. Gallant hearts are never cynical, for they dare to forgive and in forgiving they forget!"

"Yours, then, is a gallant heart?"

"I do not know!" Ah, Blake Martin had a voice that lingered in a woman's heart. "Perhaps mine may be gallant, Lady of the Shadows; it has never been tested!"

"And how shall one test a gallant heart?" Her lovely voice, opening doors peering into corners in a heart that had been so gallant—and so empty.

"That I do not know—I can only say that my heart is glad now!"

"You make me feel that perhaps I am welcome, Blake Martin," said the Lady of the Shadows. "We women are not like men; it is often the expected that we dread!"

"You thought I would not welcome you?" he laughed. "Do any of us scorn romance?"

"I, then, am Romance." Such a lovely, lovely laugh. "Romance that makes even love follow when it leads! Oh, no, no! Not romance—I am only Sharee Farrell!"

NOW, Sharee Farrell was a name that Blake Martin had never heard and yet had known always. A haunting name that was part of a wistful past that had never been. A lovely, illusive name which was strange and yet familiar—a name which seemed to make yesterdays of tomorrows.

"Sharee Farrell," he repeated softly, and his voice was like the deep, throbbing notes of a cello.

For an instant the Lady of the Shadows studied his profile, for his face was clearly visible in the light of the moon. Who can say what Sharee Farrell thought then? Was she swayed by the fact that Blake Martin was handsome in a bold, masterful way, that his rugged features were those which inspired in the mind of a woman not the thought of conquest but of conquerors? Who knows? For it has been said that a woman is like the reed that bends to every breeze but breaks not in the tempest—and such was Sharee Farrell.

"You have not asked me why I'm here," she said very quietly.

"No." Blake Martin smiled as few women had ever seen him smile. "How vain it is to ask the price of lovely gifts!"

"Look at me, Blake Martin!"

A soft rustle, and with the languid grace that was her own Sharee Farrell stepped into the moonlight. Well she knew that she was beautiful—and the moon is always kind to lovely ladies.

The dusky gray of her eyes, the soft lips with their strange illusive air of sorrow, the deep, reddish bronze of her hair, her slender, stately figure sheathed in an evening gown of black, a white Spanish shawl gayly bedecked with flowers about her creamy shoulders, her hands, on the slim fingers of one of them two odd, lovely rings that made one think of Paris.

Blake Martin stood now, gazing at her. Her beauty, her very nearness, frightened him, as did the faint, half-amused light that shone for an instant in those deep, taunting eyes.

Because desire whispered to him, told him to take her, to crush her tight, tight in his arms, to print kisses upon those soft lips, he lit a cigarette with hands which trembled ever so slightly.

"You like me a little, Blake Martin?" Her voice was liquid music, taunting him, daring him.

Blake Martin did not speak, he could not. He gazed at Sharee Farrell, his face flushed, hot. Her eyes gazing at him, mocking little devils smoldering in their gray depths. He thrust his shaking hands into the pockets of his coat.

Thoughts sped through his brain. A bit of verse that he had heard long, long ago. Something about "gather ye rosebuds while ye may—"

With a gesture of impatience, he drew the cigarette from his lips and tossed it away. Slowly he moved toward the woman, who stood watching him—smiling at him. As he did so her eyes widened, changed, for an instant they gazed deep into his—then grew dark—lonely.

The dusky gray of her eyes, the soft lips that now quivered slightly, the nearness of her. Blake Martin reached out his arms. His fingers clutched the soft whiteness of her shoulders beneath the shawl, lingered and then tightened slowly. Her lips were close * * *.

Sharee Farrell laughed. That amused, derisive laughter that women so often find a useful weapon. Faint, mocking laughter that was to Blake Martin as the dash of icy water in his face.

Gallant heart—shame! His fingers loosened, fell away. Fool! Fool! Who whispered now? Not desire—desire was a coward who ran away from a laugh. Fool, Blake Martin, fool! He laughed shortly and moved back, feeling a little childish, a little shamed.

"A woman always dreads the expected, Blake Martin!" said Sharee very quietly, but her voice was tinkling ice.

"And, dreading, takes pains to arrange that it will happen!" said he quietly. "Why did you come here, Sharee Farrell?"

The old laugh, wistful, haunting. The soft rustle of silk as she moved again into the shadows, leaving the moonlight pale, forsaken.

"The eternal masculine 'why'?" she said in her soft voice. "Always you men must ask reasons, tear the petals of a flower apart that you may learn what makes it grow. Men are fools, Blake Martin!"

"Perhaps. So many of us fall in love, you know!"

"Score!" said the Lady of the Shadows. "And never are you more foolish than when that happens!"

"And what of women, lovely lady?"

"It was Balzac who wrote, 'In love, a woman is like a lyre that surrenders its secrets only to the hand that knows how to touch its strings.'"

"How unfortunate," said Blake Martin, "that so few of us are accomplished musicians!"

Sharee Farrell laughed softly, that laugh that was like a violin played softly in the twilight.

"You're a clever man, Blake Martin." Her tone changed, grew soft, appealing. "But you have not said that I'm welcome—and I have come to stay—if you are willing!"

"The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak," said Blake quietly. "You've come to stay as my guest? It is a matter of thought, dear lady."

"And, in thinking one may soar to the heights!"

"Or descend to the depths! What must I think now, Sharee Farrell? What would you expect any man to think?"

"I should say that depends upon the man, gallant sir!" She moved and her lovely face was in the moonlight now, her eyes looked deep into his.

"And you think that I—" he paused, halted by an expression in her eyes.

"I know that you are a gentleman, Blake Martin!"

"A gentleman!" His tone was derisive. "The word may sometimes cover a multitude of sins!"

"Still you act the cynic—ah, some one must have hurt you very badly, dear boy!" Such a haunting voice she had. "It is an attitude that hardly fits in with moonlight and—"

"A very lovely lady!" he finished quickly as she paused.

"Thank you." That laugh beating, beating upon his heart. "I might have said—romance."

"Why are you here, Sharee?" he asked.

"Suppose that I say that I came here because you needed me?" she asked very softly, an illusive rainbow of a smile. "But you don't understand! How could you?"

HE FROWNED. "I hope that you realize the risk you are taking, taunting lady!" he said, his tone serious now.

"A risk! It sounds melodramatic!" That faint hint of laughter in Sharee's tone. "What do you mean?"

"I'm a very wicked man, Sharee—all of my friends will assure you of that!" His tone was bitter. "Oh, quite a rotter! There isn't another cottage within half a mile down the beach. We are alone here—quite alone, and it is very late! You're very beautiful—and beautiful things are always desirable!"

"Isn't it a pity we are out in the open?" Her taunting, daring smile. "That speech would have sounded far more effective if you'd carefully locked the door and then turned to me with fire in your eyes!" She laughed. "As they do in the movies!"

He laughed. "You win!"

"I'm glad." She covered her soft lips quickly with her hand as she yawned. "I beg your pardon! I'm very sleepy—if you will be kind enough to show me to my room."

He stared at her. Lovely Sharee Farrell carrying her game through, daring, risking—for what? She returned his gaze calmly and yet the illusive feeling that she was laughing at him lingered. He rose and bowed.

"If you will follow me, please," he said quietly.

HE HELD the door open for her to enter. Her nearness as she passed into the dark living room frightened him. His fingers tightened upon the door handle as he drew the door closed. He touched a button and soft lights flooded the room with their pale glow.

Sharee stood gazing at him. The glory of her hair, the mystery of her eyes, the allure of her lips. A moment that was somehow a little breathless and tense. Then a clock struck softly. One, two, three, and a lady smiled.

Sharee glanced about the room. Rather a charming place. Quaint tables, chairs and long, mysterious chests of Chinese design. Red-and-gold affairs that might have been incongruous had they not blended so perfectly with the odd draperies with which the room was hung. Yet it was a man's room, this living room of Blake Martin's. There was something lacking, something which made all seem stiff and formal in spite of the quaint and expensive furnishings. Sharee knew just what was wrong; she felt that with a few deft touches, a slight rearranging, she could make the room lovely and livable. It was like Blake Martin's heart, empty because no woman lived there.

BLAKE stood near the door gazing at her. She turned and smiled at him.

"Your house is lovely," she said. "But it is late—and I'm very tired! If you will lead the way."

"Certainly!"

With fingers which shook slightly Blake Martin turned and locked the front door of his cottage. The faint click seemed to him to be the sound of a curtain descending, a curtain which separated them from the outside world.

Without further words he led the way up the stairs. There were only three rooms on the second floor. Blake paused before the closed door of one of these and turned to Sharee with a smile as he drew the door open.

"The best I have to offer," he said, stepping aside that she might enter. "I hope it will do!"

"Thank you, this will do very nicely!" that faint illusive hint of laughter in her tone. "Good night, Blake Martin."

"Good night, Sharee Farrell."

For the first time he noticed the large vanity bag which she carried in her hand. She must have left it beside her chair when she had first appeared before him in the moonlight.

That laugh playing on his heart like an organ. A swift, graceful motion of the slender hands and the door in front of him closed softly. For an instant he stood there gazing pensively at the closed door. Then he turned in startled surprise as he heard an insistent rapping upon the front door of the bungalow.

Slowly he descended the stairs and went toward the door. Who could be knocking at this time of night? He hoped it wasn't any of his friends, those dear friends that were so eager to belittle him. And now to find him alone at this time of night, or rather morning, with Sharee Farrell! What a morsel for the vultures of scandal!

The knocking continued insistently. Slowly Blake Martin drew open the door. A pair of deep blue eyes gazed into his, a pair of red lips smiled at him, and for the second time that morning a lovely lady stepped into the house of Blake Martin.

Now, that a bow to the moon may lead one to a lovely lady is well and good, but that one should find two such charming creatures was something else again.

His latest arrival, Mr. Martin noticed as he closed the door, was a brunette with hair as dark as the shadows of night and which contrasted strangely with the whiteness of her face and the deep blue of her eyes.

Oh, quite a fascinating lady this. A lady that made one think of swords thrust from the dark—poison wine in a jeweled cup—uncertainty—dinner with the Borgias. A dangerous lady this!

A crimson evening dress that enveloped her like a flame, a wrap of gray fur that she drew off as soon as she entered the room, long, slender fingers that for all their loveliness somehow reminded one of claws—a dangerous lady—strange woman this! Beware, Blake Martin!

"You don't seem very pleased to see me, Blake," a deep voice, husky—like rushing water in the distance. "Surely you've not forgotten—Rome?"

"No," Blake Martin shook his head. "How could I forget—St. Peter's—the Forum—the Colosseum—and the moonlight—glorious! One learns to bow to the moon in places like that!"

"Then you haven't forgotten!" There was delight in the dark lady's voice.

"No, I've not forgotten Rome—the Corso thronged with people as it slumbers in the sun—little tables on the sidewalk. Via Del Foro—the Piazza Colonna with the monument of Marcus Aurelius standing in the center," he smiled. "Ah, yes, Rome—but somehow I do not remember you!"

"Oh! How cruel!" Wicked devils in blue eyes, powder and matches—dangerous woman. "Then you have forgotten Tawn Le Grange?"

"I'm afraid I've never heard the name before!"

"Oh, Blake, Blake, how could you be so cruel! To think that you could forget! Forget your Tawny—" a faint sob. "It—it breaks my heart!" A bent head and quivering shoulders.

Now Blake Martin knew quite well that she was not his Tawny—as a matter of fact, he had never heard of Tawn Le Grange before—and yet he felt guilty. Tears, a woman crying because she thought him cruel. It made him uncomfortable — gallant heart—fool!

"Surely there must be some mistake." His voice faltered, hesitated. "I don't remember—"

Futile words.

"You must remember!" Those blue eyes flashing now—lightning, fire.

"I'm quite certain that we've never met before!"

"Oh, no, no! It can't be!" wildly, pleadingly. "Blake, Blake, I've risked everything to come here now—everything! My husband is a jealous man—insanely so! If he finds me here he'll kill me! Yet I dared to come to you, Blake Martin—I had to see you—my heart was starving for a look, a word! Oh Blake, I love you so!"

He stepped back and gazed at her in alarm. "But, my dear lady, I do not know you—there's some mistake. I've never seen you before!"—his eyes narrowed—"and you know it!"

A pause. Eyes staring into eyes. Then a knock on the closed front door. What now? Tawn Le Grange with fear in her eyes moving slowly away toward Blake's little den beyond the living room.

"It may be my husband!" she whispered as she retreated. "He may have followed me here! I'll hide—get rid of him, Blake. You must! If he finds us here alone I don't know what he'll do."

Blake Martin nodded. Something wrong here—what's the game? Tawn Le Grange—danger! He drew open the door. A man in evening clothes stood there, a scowl upon his heavy face.

"Where is she?" the man demanded. "Where's my wife?"

"Why ask me?" Blake's voice was very cold.

"Oh, you needn't try to bluff, Martin!" an angry growl. "I know that she spent most of the night alone with you here in this house!"

"Yes?"

"Yes! And I'm Tawn Le Grange's husband!" Le Grange took a step forward. "Where is my wife?"

"You might come in and look if you're so anxious about her," said Blake Martin quietly.

"All right—I will!" Le Grange stepped into the house.

BLAKE closed the door and stood waiting. For a moment the husband of Tawn Le Grange gazed about him, then a slight sound from the direction of the den sent him hurriedly toward the closed door. Swiftly he drew it open and entered. Blake watched tensely. Then Tawn Le Grange appeared, hair down in wild dissarray, dress half torn from her shoulders. Her husband followed close behind—leering.

"Oh, Jim, Jim!" Tawn's voice, husky, emotional. "He lured me here—told me that he was giving a big party—and when I arrived I found that there was no one but just the two of us—and he—her voice broke. "He would not let me go."

"You rotter!" Le Grange glared at Blake. "To take advantage of a poor, defenseless girl like this!"

Blake Martin wanted to laugh. Heroic speeches—melodrama—what's the game?

"All night I've been here alone with him—oh, the shame of it—the bitter shame! I shall never be able to face the world again! If I could only forget. If I could only go away somewhere—far away—and try to forget with you, Jim!"

"Yes, Tawn, if you only could!" Le Grange softly, soothingly. "But we may find a way. It would not be a very pretty story to tell the world about Mr. Blake Martin," he leered. "Perhaps if he would help us—ah—financially, we might be able to adjust things!"

So that's it! The old badger game. Blackmail! The wronged wife—the forgiving husband—for cash! Tawn Le Grange—dangerous woman. No way out of it—cleverly played! Blake Martin frowned.

"How much?" he demanded shortly.

"Fifty thousand," said Le Grange.

"What?" exclaimed Blake. "You must be mad!"

"I am!" Again the leer. "And I'll be so mad that I'll talk to the whole world if you don't come across quick!"

"What's the matter, dear?"

Sharee Farrell, standing upon the stairs clad in a lovely pink negligee, a tender smile on her face as she gazed at Blake Martin.

"I heard voices, Blake; is there anything wrong?"

"No, Sharee!" Blake Martin smiled. "I think that Mr. and Mrs. Le Grange have made a little mistake!"

"Who is this woman?" demanded Tawn Le Grange, blue eyes gleaming wickedly.

Sharee looked at her. Slowly her eyes traveled over the other woman from head to foot, and her glance was an insult.

"Why don't you tell them dear?" said Sharee, smiling at Blake. "Tell them that—I'm your wife!"

"Yes, my wife!" said Blake Martin. "And as she has been home all evening and can testify that we've been quite alone up to about fifteen minutes ago when Mrs. Le Grange arrived, I'm afraid I shall not be able to assist you in your—ah—missionary work. Good morning!"

Blake drew open the door. With a crestfallen air Le Grange stepped out into the dawn. His wife followed slowly. At the door she turned and gazed for an instant at Sharee Farrell.

"D—you!" she said quietly.

Tawn Le Grange. Poison in a jeweled cup—dangerous lady—she was gone.

"The Le Granges," said Sharee. "That was why I came here tonight, Blake Martin—because I knew that they were coming and I thought that you might need me." She smiled her wistful smile. "I was sitting on a balcony of the hotel last night. I heard voices beneath me—heard them plan to blackmail you—and, well, I didn't want them to do that!"

"But you did not even know me!"

"No, but I had seen you often—and I liked you, Blake Martin—and so when I found that I could I wanted to help you! Now, I seem to have known you always!" That laugh that was the first faint breath of spring.

"And I seem to have known and loved you always, Sharee Farrell!" His voice was tender, for a gallant heart spoke at last. "Will you marry me, Sharee?"

A flash of pink upon the stairs and she was gone. With a heart brimming with joy Blake Martin opened the front door and bowed to the spot in the gray sky where last he had seen the moon.

WESTMINSTER

FREAKS OF LIGHTNING DURING RECENT STORMS

During the past month two large dairy barns have burned due to lightning. In a recent electrical storm, lightning struck the store building of A. T. Macleod and put the lighting plant out of commission. The bolt entered by way of the chimney and tore its way out the side of the building unknown to the sleeping family in the adjoining house until morning. During the same storm, lightning struck the garage of Mrs. Agnes Wood directly across the street and splintered the interior. The doors which were padlocked were burst open. Mrs. Wood, with her car, was absent for the night. Sunday evening during the worst electrical storm of the season, lightning struck a galvanized stove pipe in the brooder house of Ambrose Leidwein, ripped it open the full length and tore up the dirt floor of the brooder house. A large flock of pullets in the house was uninjured. A long black streak down the side of the dwelling which stands 25 feet from the brooder house showed the narrow escape of the family who occupied sleeping rooms on that side of the house. In no instance did the buildings get afire.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Fleet, of Port Chester, N. Y., have arrived at their summer home for the season.

Several members of the Frank Koch family are at their summer home and will be joined next week by the remainder of the family.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Rosensmar, of New York, have returned home after a week's vacation visiting in this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Wodraska, of New Rochelle, have been spending a few days with Miss Wodraska's father E. A. Gooding.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Davis called on friends in Willimantic, Sunday.

Frequent showers during the present haying season are causing much extra work for the hay makers as well as spoiling the quality of much of the product.

SMALL PART OF POWER COST IS IN GENERATION

Approximately sixty-five per cent of the cost of electric light and power service in Connecticut lies in the expense involved in transmitting the electricity generated at the power plant to the premises of the customer, according to the unanimous statement of electric utility engineers. In other words, to carry electricity over transmission and distribution lines and to pay for other actual service involved in bringing it to the customer costs far more than the actual costs of generation.

This statement follows upon the claim made by Ambassador Sackett in a speech at the world power conference in Berlin to the effect that electricity costs the great mass of consumers fifteen times what it cost to produce. Matthew S. Sloan, president of the National Electric Light association, has challenged the accuracy of the ambassador's statement with the claim that "on the average the country over the sale price to domestic consumers is not over four times the cost of the energy at the power house.

"The large items of expense in serving our domestic customers," he continues, "are costs of lines, facilities to deliver to their homes, losses in delivery, reading the meters, billing, collecting and maintaining service ready for constant use. Our customers cannot go to the power house and get their electricity. We cannot store electricity and await future sales. Service must be constantly ready for immediate use in any quantity our customers demand. These conditions govern the sales price."

FIRE ON N. ENG. STEAMSHIP PIER, NEW LONDON, ATTRIBUTED TO SMOKER

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 11—The pier of the New Haven railroad, used by the New England Steamship company, was threatened with serious damage by fire late this afternoon and but for the timely discovery of the blaze and the prompt and efficient work of the department the pier and shed must have been destroyed, as was the case about 20 years ago. Shortly before 5:30 a great cloud of smoke was discovered making its way from the west side of the pier and at its extreme end. An investigation was made and an endeavor begun to extinguish the blaze, but because of its being located among the heavy pine timbers, which are soaked with oil from the numerous freight trucks, it was impossible to subdue it. The flames gaining headway, an alarm was sent in from Box 23, located at the approach of the pier. Chief Thomas Shipman and Deputy Chief Calvin Edmund and four pieces of apparatus responded. Three streams of water were emptied upon the flames and after a half hour's battle the fire was extinguished. The damage it is believed will not exceed $200. It is believed that the fire originated from a careless smoker permitting a butt to drop into one of the crevices of the pier.

BLACKHALL ST. TREE FALLS, PULLING DOWN POWER WIRES

A tree collapsed on Blackhall street, near Belden street tonight and in falling landed on the wires of the Connecticut company, pulling them down, putting an end temporarily to trolley traffic over that line and causing live wires to flicker and sputter. Two patrolmen were sent to guard pedestrians and automobile traffic until linemen and a repair gang arrived, with a force of laborers, who made repairs and the tree was removed from the tracks. Traffic over the line was interrupted more than an hour.

HOSPITAL BAZAAR PROFITS THIS YEAR REACH $7,600

The bazaar of Lawrence-Memorial hospital on the grounds of that institution yesterday afternoon and last night was a success, but did not net the total of a year ago. The profits of yesterday were but $7,600 as against $10,000 in 1929. The decrease is attributed to a large extent to the fact that the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circus was here two days previous, a carnival also being in progress the entire week.

MILDRED AVERY'S EX-HUSBAND IS SOUGHT AT HOLLYWOOD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 11—Lieut. Leslie Arnold, army aviator, formerly of New London, is in the limelight again because of his marital troubles. Arnold, when the World war broke out, enlisted in the aviation corps and then married Mildred Avery, formerly of Groton. Their marital life was not a bed of roses and Arnold obtained a divorce, which was later set aside by the supreme court. In the meantime and after he had obtained divorce, Arnold married Priscilla Dean, Hollywood motion picture actress, but by the edict of the court, the second marriage was declared null and void. Within the past few days, Miss Dean has appealed to the authorities of Beverly, Cal., to restrain and prevent the first Mrs. Arnold from entering upon her California premises, for Miss Dean asserts that she found Mildred Avery Arnold and detectives in her garage. They explained their presence there by asserting that they were seeking the whereabouts of the aviator.

EXPECTANT MOTHER IS LANDED IN A CELL

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 11—A Groton woman, who is in a delicate condition, came to New London during the day, eventually found agreeable company and became intoxicated. She was in that condition this evening and complaint was made to the police when the woman was occupying the greater part of the sidewalk on State street and in the vicinity of the post office. Officers Dennis Murphy and Louis Tooker finding the woman there arrested her and she was locked up for the night.

Joseph C. Hubbard, of the naval academy, Annapolis, Md., and Madeline C. Hardenbrook, 27 Prospect park, West Brooklyn, N. Y., were arrested this afternoon, together with F. W. Barden, Worcester, Mass., charged with various violations of the traffic laws. Neither driver will be in court for the trio was released with a warning to observe the traffic signs in the future.

William Falvey, 814 Main street, was arrested tonight at the request of the Waterford authorities charged with breach of the peace, being apprehended by Patrolman Dennis Murphy. Falvey, who has a police record, was locked up and will be delivered to the Waterford authorities and will be presented in the Waterford town court Monday next. Falvey went to Broad street extension last night and there created a disturbance. He escaped but his identity was known and his arrest resulted when he was found on the streets this morning.

TRENTON YOUTH IN WHIRL, ALTHOUGH IT WAS SHORT

Howard Robbins, renton, N. J., youth, was arrested in Groton last night charged with theft of an automobile and will be in Groton town court Monday next. Robbins, who has been in New London but a few days, went to Ocean Beach last night and there stole an automobile owned by Paul Rosen, of East Hartford. Robbins drove the car through New London and across the Thames river highway bridge to Groton. Continuing, the youth drove to Mystic and in that village he lost control of the steering wheel resulting in the car crashing against a monument between the Mystic river bridge and the railroad station. The auto, which was wrecked, was abandoned and Robbins then sought and obtained a ride in another car. He was seen to leave the wrecked machine and enter the passing auto, which was en route to New London. The state police were acquainted with the wrecking of the stolen auto and Robbins' being given a "lift," so that when he arrived in Groton, Robbins was arrested by State Officer William E. MacKenzie.

Lieut. Shepard Goes Free

Lieut. S. A. Shepard, submarine base, who was arrested last night because of his refusal to comply with the motor vehicle laws of this state, was in the police court this forenoon on three counts—driving with improper markers, and driving without a Connecticut registration or license. In open court the case was ordered continued until tomorrow but after adjournment of court, Shepard was ordered discharged by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer, so the uniformed man will escape a court penalty for his offenses. Shepard who was assigned to service at the submarine base a short time ago from Maryland, did not have markers issued by that state on his automobile, the markers being of the home-made type, printed on ordinary cardboard. Neither did he obtain a Connecticut license or registration, but he did continue to drive at random. Once Shepard was warned by State Police Officer Eric Swanson to comply with the state motor vehicle laws and again State Police Officer William E. MacKenzie advised Shepard to obtain proper markers and registration and license. Shepard, however, failed to heed the double warning and late yesterday afternoon when Motorcycle Officer Thomas Cavanaugh discovered Shepard continuing to drive without paying the state for that privilege, he was arrested.

Paul M. Sampsell, 55 North Main street, Essex, was charged with violation of the city's traffic regulations. He did not appear in court and his bond of $2 was forfeited. Sampsell had parked his car on State street more than four hours.

Joseph Lefebre, Uncasville, charged with speeding, was fined $10 and costs.

Stewart Hitchner, submarine base, was charged with driving without a license and was fined $25 and costs.

James Riley, Florida, was charged with driving without a license and driving a car equipped with defective brakes. On the first charge a fine of $10 and costs was imposed and on the second count a penalty of $25 and costs was given. Riley was arrested early this morning by Patrolmen Edward and William Riordan.

Joseph Supera, a youth who resides at 542 East School street, Woonsocket, R. I., was arrested in Waterford last night by State Police Officer Arthur Kaithe on a technical charge of vagrancy, but because of the sad having numerous wounds, he is being held more for an investigation as to how he received his injury than the charge upon which he was arrested. Officer Kaithe found the young man in the highway very badly wounded for he had lacerations of the scalp, both eyes were discolored and he bore lacerations of the nose, chin and lip. The youth did not give a satisfactory explanation of how he sustained his injuries and for that reason the vagrancy charge was made against him.

James McArdle, a laborer employed at Fishers Island, when he is in the mood to work, which is seldom, was charged with vagrancy and was sentenced to 30 days in jail. McArdle was arrested last night when he was found loitering in Riverside park.

A negress residing on Hill street was charged with intoxication and was fined $5 and costs. She was arrested last night by Patrolman Lawrence Fardy and Cornelius Moriarty and upon complaint of her husband. She was in court on the same charge a week ago, and at that time she was given suspension of judgment.

Mrs. Graham, 5 Cape Ann court, made complaint to the police today that a window was smashed in her home the night before, presumably by a mischievous boy.

Patrolman Henry Hick last night discovered a window open in the rear of the store of the Schwartz Furniture company, 137 Bank street. The officer was able to secure the store.

Joseph P. Noyer 7 Huntington street, was arrested this afternoon charged with blocking traffic on Bank street. He furnished a bond for his appearance in the police court tomorrow.

Was Palmer Bros' Foreman

Robert E. James, 58, died last night at his home on Logger Hill, Waterford, after an illness of about a month, although he had had impaired health for a long time. He is survived by a son, Ray James, of Waterford and by two sisters and two brothers. Mr. James was born in New London Feb. 18, 1872 and for 40 years was employed as foreman at the mill of Palmer Brothers.

Wells, who died last night at her residence on Baker's cove, Puquonoc bridge, after a lingering illness, is survived, besides her husband, by a daughter, Mrs. Anita Durfee and a sister, Miss Loretta Healy, both of Groton. Mrs. Wells was born in Groton Oct. 14, 1867, the daughter of William and Susan Healy.

Salvatore LaRocca

Salvatore LaRocca, 57, died this morning at his residence 350 Jefferson avenue, following an illness of but a few weeks. He is survived by his wife and two brothers, John LaRocca, of this city and Frank LaRocca, Brooklyn, N. Y. Mr. LaRocca was born in Italy, but had resided in New London many years. For several years he was proprietor of a confectionery and tobacco store on the pier of the Fishers Island Navigation company.

Charles Harrigan, Florence, N. Y., was arrested in Stonington yesterday by State Police Officer Eric Swanson charged with reckless driving. He posted a bond of $50 and will be in the Stonington town court Tuesday next.

Superintendent of Schools Warren A. Hanson today made another complaint to the police because of youths causing damage by smashing windows at Nameeau, and Harbor schools. Several windows in both schools were smashed last night between 7 and 9 o'clock. About a week ago, Superintendent Hanson made another complaint because of windows in the two schools having been destroyed.

Runaway Truck

A runaway truck caused slight damage to the city, also to Connecticut Power company property early today. The truck, which had been parked started up and traveled an eighth of a mile before it stopped when it crashed against an electric light pole. The truck was in charge of Jacob Rosenfield, of 37 Hollander street, Roxbury, Mass., and when it arrived on State street about 3 o'clock this morning, it was parked between Main and Bank streets, while the driver went to a lunch room. The truck became in motion, either because the brakes were released or not properly applied and being on a slight grade, traveled east and gained in speed throughout its short journey. Passing at Bank street and where a grade to the union station exists, the truck gained speed rapidly, but strangely, it rounded the curve in the rear of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument, after crashing through a traffic Potter street, where it brought up sign and continued to the corner of against an iron electric light pole. Three of the four light globes were smashed. Rosenfield was taken to police headquarters by Patrolman Clyde Murphy, but no charge was made against the driver, who agreed to defray the cost of repairs, both to the traffic sign and the pole, together with paying the costs of the lights.

Robbed Hull Power Launch

Still another power launch at anchor in the harbor was included among the pleasure boats robbed by river pirates Wednesday night. Attorney C. Hadlai Hull reported to the police that his boat which is moored south of the Merritt-Chapman-Scott Wrecking company wharves had been entered and a compass stolen.

WESTERLY

SEVERAL CASES DISPOSED OF IN DISTRICT COURT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., July 11.—The regular session of Third district court took all Friday morning when Judge Oliver H. Williams disposed of court matters as follows:

New writs entered before the call of the docket—Charles E. Chappell, of Hopkinton, vs. Frank H. Brown, of Hopkinton.

John O. Mills vs. Anthony C. Catalano and John O. Mills vs. Alice M. Wright. If unanswered, continued one week.

Philip Jacques, of Central Falls, with six years experience in operation of autos in Canada and two years in Rhode Island, was arraigned on complaint of Sergt. Ernest F. Stenhouse of the state police, charged with the reckless operation of an automobile on the Noose Neck Hill road on June 29. Sergeant Stenhouse testified that the accused drove his car almost head on into that of Philip Esto, of Boston, about 11:36 p. m., when he drove his Chevrolet roadster down Teffts Hill in the town of Richmond and at the time was 5 1-2 feet over the center road line and although no one was injured $150 damage was done both cars. On his plea of guilty he was fined $100 and costs.

William Carroll Johnson, whose place on Gavitt lane was raided by Westerly police, was before the court. The defendant was represented in court by Attorney John J. Dunn, who asked for and was granted a week's continuance on the count of the return of the complaint and warrant in the search for liquors. In the second count a plea of not guilty was entered in the charge of unlawful possession of liquors seized in the raid of July 5 and the case continued one week with $100 bail furnished. He had already been arraigned on the third count, that of interfering with the registration of the electric meter of the South County Public Service Co., as raiding officers at the time of the search reported the finding of a loop around the meter, this case also having been continued.

Jack Rossman, 26, of New Haven, apprehended by State Police Officer Donald A. Symonds of the Hope Valley barracks, was arraigned on the charge of speeding. The accused declared that he "was taking the folks home over the week-end and did not want to lose any more time than necessary." On his plea of guilty he was fined $25 and costs.

Stanley Barszcz and John Christ changed previous pleas of not guilty to possession of intoxicating liquors to nolo; from the former, 66 bottles of beer being reported as seized and the latter with one-half barrel of mash. They were found guilty and sentenced to pay fines of $25 each and costs.

Bolick Pianki, charged with possession of two bottles of beer, was found guilty by Judge Williams and fined $25. Notice of appeal to the higher court was taken and Bertha Pianki became surety in the sum of $300.

Westerly Italian parishioners of the Immaculate Conception church have made plans for the annual observance on Sunday with program of interest in the Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel.

The committee of arrangements in charge of the day's program are the following: Pasquale Pellegrino, president; Frank A. Toscano, secretary; Antonio Turco, treasurer; Rev. Henry Bruno, S. M., director; Samuel Nardone, honorary president; Antonio Trebisacci, Frank Regine, Nicola Lupica, Natale Emanuele, John Salimeno, Nicolo Ferigno and Angelo Gallante.

The day's observance will begin with a solemn high mass in the morning, followed by a religious procession, and a band concert and fireworks in the evening.

The celebration of the feast really started Thursday with a triduum of special devotions. They were held at the church at 7:30 o'clock and the sermon of the occasion was delivered by Rev. Reginald Giuliani, O. P., from the St. Vincent Ferrer Priory in New York city. There were also services this evening and tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock, and Father Giuliani will again be the speaker.

Street Parade

On Sunday the first event in the program will be a street parade at 9 o'clock by the Colonial band of Providence. The streets to be visited include Pierce, Pleasant, Canal, Stillman avenue, Garden, Downer, Liberty, Railroad avenue and High.

At 10:30 o'clock there will be a solemn high mass, at which the sermon will be delivered in Italian by Father Giuliani. Special music for the occasion will be rendered by the church choir under the direction of Mrs. Frank G. Ahern.

The mass will be followed by a religious procession in which the statue of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel will be carried through the following streets: Oak, High, Pierce, Pleasant, Canal, Industrial drive, West and Friendship.

Upon arriving back at the church, benediction of the blessed sacrament will be given. The singing for this service will be by the Girls' Missionary society, composed of Italian girls. They are also singing at the triduum services preceding the feast day.

Band Concert

No activities are planned for the afternoon, but in the evening starting at 7 o'clock there will be a concert by the Colonial band of Providence at the High street athletic field. At 10 o'clock a spectacular display of fireworks will go on, and as in past years it is expected that several thousand persons will be on hand to witness it.

Installation services will be conducted this (Saturday) morning at the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church for its recently called pastor to succeed Rev. Clayton A. Burdick. Rev. Harold R. Crandall, a former Westerly boy. Uniting with the Pawcatuck church will be congregations from Ashaway, Hopkinton, Rockville and Waterford, Conn. The pastors of these churches will have a part in the program.

He and his family have been in Westerly now for a week and have settled in their home at the parsonage. Dr. Clayton A. WESTERLY HOUSE HIT BY LIGHTNING DURING STORM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 11—In the regular series of afternoon and evening thunderstorms on Friday evening, Westerly was again visited by a severe thunderstorm, accompanied by sharp flashes of lightning and downpours of rain. So severe were some of the flashes that the fire whistle on the Union street fire station was sounded in three or four blasts simultaneously with the lightning.

About 6:30 p. m., a fire alarm was turned in from Box No. 71, Canal and Pleasant streets for a fire in the house of Frank Costanza, a fruit peddler, residing at 4 Rose avenue, which was struck by a bolt of lightning at the chimney with a jagged rip nearly 25 feet long down the house. Articles in the house were strewn about and those in the neighborhood stunned at the time that they detected sulphur fumes. All three pieces of fire apparatus responded and the fire was put out without further damage. The recall was sounded at 6:50.

The firemen, returning from the blaze were caught in a downpour and despite rubber boots, were soaked to the skin, requiring a complete change of clothing.

The storm returning shortly before 9 p. m. and at the height of the storm, the electric light and power current was turned off for nearly ten minutes. A local drugstore resorted to acetylene lamps for illumination.

CHARGES ENGINEER WITH ERROR IN LOCATING OLD FIRST BURYING GROUND

In a communication to The Bulletin regarding the location of the old first burying ground of the town of Norwich, William S. Case of 129 West Town street takes issue with the conclusions reached by Civil Engineer George E. Pitcher in locating the old burying ground for the selectmen by a certain blue print, which the civil engineer further explained by a letter which was published.

Mr. Case claims that the civil engineer's blue print is wrong and that his explanations likewise are erroneous.

In his statement, Mr. Case says:

In the past The Bulletin has printed three communications from me on the subject, Where is the Post-Gager burying ground—Where are its boundaries? The last one published Sept. 9, 1929, was principally a criticism of the work and findings contained in a blue print drawn by Surveyor George E. Pitcher, who was employed by the town of Norwich for the express purpose of discovering, if possible, the location of this first burying ground of Norwich, sometimes referred to as the Post-Gager burying ground, and its boundaries. I had a thought at that time that it might never be necessary for me to take up this matter again, but much water has passed under the bridge since that time. Perhaps it might truthfully be said that there has not, apparently, much change been made in the situation, with the exception, that although the opposition to this movement still appears as determined as ever, yet it is a fact that more persons are showing an interest in what the future will reveal. It seems to be a subject that most of the people are inclined to avoid, not caring to take any personal action regarding it. Almost all seem unanimously agreed to let George do it.

In The Bulletin of June 7 there was a letter from Mr. George E. Pitcher in which he requested the attention of the public to some facts that he claimed to have found in the search of the town records. His letter was rather difficult to read and determine just what his viewpoint was; and when discovered is found to be similar to that of his blue print—extremely erroneous. The reason that I have for taking any notice of his letter, or criticizing it, is for the same reason that I criticized his blue print, and that was, and is at the present time, because he misrepresents the deed of Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case, and makes an accusation against Samuel Case entirely uncalled for, and unsupported by the town records. In my criticism of the blue print, I made this statement: "The surveyor has removed or does not recognize the Gager lot as it was in 1839 when Samuel Case purchased it. Then in the western part of this new lot he seems to have produced he makes this memorandum—'Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case.' The blue print misrepresents the Gager lot by removing the boundary line separating it from the Post land on the west."

In his description of the Post home lot, printed June 7. Mr. Pitcher makes this explanation; he says: "I find the boundary of said home lot, and remaining as described in said deed, until I found a part of the Edgerton land annexed to the Post land, by one Daniel L. Huntington, by deed of Samuel Case to Daniel L. Huntington, April 11, 1844."

Mr. Pitcher's claim is this: That Samuel Case deeded to Daniel L. Huntington, Edgerton land that had been annexed to Post land. It is hardly necessary for me to make a denial of this assertion of Mr. Pitcher for two reasons; one that this statement is entirely without support from the land records, and also that I have in my possession the original deed of Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case, describing the land sold to him "as the remaining to me part of my Gare Hill pasture, and Foxborough lot, so-called, bounded on the westerly by land of said Barrett—easterly by a part of my Gager Hill pasture estimated to contain three and one-half acres, reserving out to whomever it may belong a small burying ground." This is the land sold by Samuel Case to Daniel L. Huntington in 1844. It was not annexed in any way to Post land, and it was in all probability about 200 feet from the boundary line of the Edgerton home lot.

In the blue print Mr. Pitcher arbitrarily removes the western boundary line separating the Foxborough lot from the Post land owned by Mr. Barrett, thereby annexing the Gager-Foxborough lot to the Post lot, owned at this time, 1844, by Daniel L. Huntington. The print clearly shows that Mr. Pitcher is the person who has annexed the Post lot to the Gager-Foxborough lot owned by Samuel Case. The fence is there at this present time which separates these two lots, a portion of the fence still remains upon the original boundary line, but no fence appears in the blue print. Mr. Pitcher has eliminated it.

Why was this done? What is the object to be gained by annexing Post land to the Foxborough lot, owned by Samuel Case? This is also clearly shown when Mr. Pitcher places the legend in the upper corner of the blue print which contains the Post lot added to the lot owned by Samuel Case—"Elisha Tracy to Samuel Case." He has now accomplished his purpose. He has succeeded in making it appear that Mr. Case is the owner of a Post lot. The fact that this lot is nearly twice the size of the lot formerly owned by Samuel Case seems to make no difference with him. After he has prepared this new lot to suit himself, what does he do next? Shall we discover the object for all this effort? Yes! For he then removes the Post burying ground to a place down near the river, to the Post land that he has provided for it. As the eastern boundary is described by Mr. Tracy, "to be a part of my Gager Hill pasture," it makes it very convenient for Mr. Pitcher to locate the Post burying ground beside this eastern boundary line, and then locate the Post burying ground in the Gager Hill pasture. This Gager Hill pasture is the land that has been known for some years past as the James McNally lot. This is the first and only time that this lot has been incumbered by a burying ground. The truth is, that it exists only in the mind and the blue print of Mr. Pitcher, because it does not exist in the book of land records of the town of Norwich. Mr. Pitcher hesitates at nothing; any act that will serve his purpose is immediately performed.

He now has removed from the Houghton lot the Post burying ground and locates it upon the land formerly owned by Samuel Case. This is easily done as it now is a Post lot. He also has removed from the Houghton lot the Gager burying ground, and relocated it upon the land formerly owned by James McNally. Now, who benefits by all this shifting of real estate? So far all the benefits are conferred upon the owners of the Houghton lot, and, perhaps, their advisers. The fact is that the Houghton lot is now available for sub-division into building lots. But who pays the bill? Six hundred dollars is the price. Can we find any other benefits conferred by this blue print? Perhaps we will look for them at some other time. We know who paid this bill. This print must be of value to someone. I cannot see where the town of Norwich is benefitted.

In the letter of Mr. Pitcher, he says: "I wish to call public attention to the fact that my report—The Post-Gager burying ground was where I located it on a plan by unanimous vote of selectmen at that time, by advice of the town counsel."

This is the point where the trouble begins. It is now nearly one year since the print was approved, and during this time this movement by the people of Norwich has been opposed by the disposition that has been made of this print.

I hear persons remark: "I cannot understand it. Mr. Murray is a nice man, and it seems to me that he would be willing to do the right thing in regard to this first burying ground which belongs to the town of Norwich." The real truth of the matter is this: How can Selectman Murray do anything when he has had this hallucination of a blue print wished on him by the advice of town counsel? If this statement of Mr. Pitcher is true, and I have not heard of it being denied, then Mr. Murray is handicapped. If this is a fact, then it is aggravating to say the least. Perhaps I am justified in saying that it is a disgraceful state of affairs, when the people of the town of Norwich are deprived of the services of Selectman Murray because of the fact that he has been practically hog-tied by the advice of the town counsel.

This is written from one angle, or viewpoint. There are many other viewpoints, and some of them are not to be considered as jokes. There is more that can be said relative to this burying ground that might prove to be a serious joke for someone.

What is the summary of the work done by Mr. George E. Pitcher up to date? A part of it is this; he succeeded in convincing the town counsel that his search of the town records was rewarded by a complete, and satisfactory, answer to the question—"Where is the Post-Gager burying ground—Where are its boundaries?"

He succeeded in causing what has amounted to a total paralysis of Selectman Murray's ability to function in his duties as regards the interest of the townspeople in the restoration and preservation of the first burying ground of Norwich—either as citizens, taxpayers, or descendants of the founders of Norwich.

He succeeded in collecting six hundred dollars—$600.00—for one blue print of uncertain value.

Personally, I have this to say to all who are at all concerned in this matter. That just so long as this opposition to the location, restoration, and preservation of the first burying ground belonging to the town of Norwich is based upon this misrepresentation, and false accusation as expressed by Mr. George E. Pitcher in his blue print, his report, and his letter in The Bulletin of June 7—"That Samuel Case deeded Edgerton land annexed to Post land to Daniel L. Huntington in 1844"—just so long I shall take the liberty to criticize any man, or any body of men, who shall make it their business to attempt to support these false claims made by the surveyor in the blue print, report, and letter. To do this I not only consider it a duty but a privilege, a pleasure. I do not consider it necessary to draw the line on town officials, surveyors, lawyers, or others.

The object that we are engaged in, and in which we are equally interested, is really a town affair—not a personal one—but it may be, and undoubtedly is, a fact that public servants are more responsible for their actions in this matter than are others.

Personally, my own position is like this: Nothing can, nothing will, deter me from using my best efforts to expose and crush, if possible, this contemptible attempt to make a false accusation against the dead for the purpose of perpetrating an injustice upon the early settlers of this town who lie buried in this first burying ground of Norwich, and who had every reason to believe and expect that the place of their burial would remain forever inviolate, protected by their descendants, and the inhabitants of the town of which they were the founders.

DIED IN HIS SLEEP DURING THURSDAY NIGHT

Charles W. Johnson, 59, died in his sleep Thursday night at his home at No. 201 West Main street, his body being found in bed at 9 o'clock Friday morning by Police Officer James Ryan, after a neighbor, Edmund Robinson, failed to arouse him. His death was caused from heart disease and a cirrhotic liver, according to Medical Examiner Dr. C. C. Gildersleeve, who conducted an investigation. He had not been in very good health for some time, remaining at home the greater part of the time.

When Mr. Robinson went to the house Friday morning to pay Mr. Johnson a visit he found the door locked and, rapping on a window, he received no answer. He finally summoned Police Officer James Ryan, who effected an entrance and found him dead in bed. Mr. Robinson visited him the night before and found him to be feeling much better than he had been all day. Mr. Johnson had been living alone the past few days, as his wife is a patient at the W. W. Born in Sweden, Nov. 30, 1870, Mr. Johnson came to America in his youth and for many years lived in Norwich, where he was engaged as a gardener and janitor. Besides his widow he leaves several brothers and sisters in Sweden.

EFFORTS TO REVOLUTIONIZE RAILROAD TRANSPORTATION

Great Sytems Are to Endeavor to Pick Up and Deliver Passengers and Freight At House Door and Store Entrance—Indications Are That the I. C. C. Is Willing to Facilitate the Development — Pennsylvania Railroad May Supplement Its Railroad Cars With Buses.

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP) — If progress in railroad transportation is going to require the great transportation systems to pick up and deliver passengers and freight at house door and store entrance, present indications are that the Interstate Commerce Commission is willing to facilitate the development.

Although the commission last week closed one stage of the hot railroad contest over New York passenger business—entailing automobile service on an important scale—railroad men say the competitive controversy there is far from ended and that the New York situation is being treated as an opportunity for important experimentation with the possibilities.

The Pennsylvania railroad, which owns one of the best known of all passenger terminals, in the heart of New York city, has found it somewhat inadequate to demands of modern travel. It sought permission to install a motorized system of pick-up and delivery of passengers at house or hotel doors, and was refused by the federal agency.

The commission's decision, however, now appears, to have been sharply qualified; the Pennsylvania may have merely been refused the right to install the auto extensions for its passengers on a schedule basis.

Since one of its rivals, the Baltimore and Ohio, initiated automobile bus service right into Manhattan, avoiding difficulty with the commission simply by doing it without filing regular transport schedules, it still is possible for the Pennsylvana to proceed n some other fashion to supplement its railroad cars with buses.

The remarkable revolution in transport conditions which development of automotive transport has brought about is regarded by interested people as best illustrated by the New York city squabble in which the commission's ruling was interjected. Though the Pennsylvania, like the New York Central, at a cost of hundreds of millions, put its passenger rails into the city, less wealthy lines have been unable to match the facilities, They stopped on the Jersey shore. The Baltimore & Ohio, permitted during federal railroad control to run passenger trains into the Pennsylvania's New York terminals, was excluded as soon as carriers were returned to private control. Experimentally the Baltimore line installed a relativiely inexpensive bus service from the Jersey shore into New York city, and the rubber-tired rigs obviously have worked havoc with Pennsylvania's passenger traffic, for that carrier, after two years of experience, applied to the commission for authority to run buses out of its New York and Newark terminals, to reach right into the resident districts and pick up the passengers who were finding the several scattered B & O bus stations in New York city convenient.

Promptly, not only the Baltimore & Ohio but the other roads with terminals on the Jersey shore intervened. If the Pennsylvania were allowed with all its Manhattan terminal advantages to run buses and accomplish house door delivery of rail passengers, they would be forced to follow suit, they said. A great increase in New York's already congested street traffic was among the possibilities forseen and touched on in the argument.

REPULSE OF MOB BENT ON LYNCHING NEGRO

SHAMROCK, Texas, July 13.—(AP)—A mob of approximately 200 men which formed here last night apparently bent on making reprisals against the Negro population of the town for the slaying of a white woman by a Negro Friday, disbanded after armed officers and civilians mustered by the sheriff threatened to shoot.

Tonight, Sheriff W. K. McLemore said Wheeler county authorities were in command of the situation which developed after a Negro had beaten to death Mrs. Henry Vaughan Friday with an iron bar.

Jesse Washington, the Negro accused of the slaying, is in the state reformatory at Granite, Okla., where he was taken hurriedly yesterday to forestall a threatened lynching here.

Most of the hundred or so Negroes had left town before the mob formed last night after notices were posted about the Negro section ordering them to "move out before sundown."

The mob went to the Negro section threatening to burn houses occupied by Negroes and to run out of town those Negroes remaining here but the sheriff's men stood in front of the houses with guns drawn and in some cases shoved back the bolder of the invaders. Faced with such stern resistance the mob soon dispersed.

MYSTERIOUS EPIDEMIC FOLLOWED EARTHSHOCKS

GANGTOK, State of Sikkim, India, July 13.—(AP)—A mysterious epidemic, resembling cholera, which has claimed the lives of 45 persons in the last few days, was blamed in part today on the recent earthquakes which shook India.

This little state, perched on the top of the world on the main axis of the Himalayas, suffered the brunt of the tremors, and physicians advanced the theory that the shocks, disturbing the earth's surface, uncovered dormant germs.

The disease, whatever its origin, continued to spread.

The quakes damaged many buildings here, especially government buildings, schools and shops.

WITNESS AGAINST MOONEY TO RETURN TO CALIFORNIA

BALTIMORE, July 13—(AP)—John MacDonald, itinerant acrobat-walter-watchman whose testimony 14 years ago aided in sending Thomas J. Mooney and Warren K. Billings to prison for life, tomorrow will be released to attorneys for Mooney, who will return him to California to seek Mooney's pardon.

MacDonald, arrested here, signed a 1,500-word affidavit in which he declared that the testimony he gave was false and engineered by the Milney-Billings prosecution at their trials in 1917 for the preparedness day bombing in San Francisco in 1916 which cost eight lives.

The statement in which he repudiated his testimony was made to Herbert R. O'Conor, prosecuting attorney of Baltimore; Frank P. Walsh, Mooney attorney and other officials. Tomorrow he will be turned over to Walsh, representing the Mooney defense committee, for return to California and to appear before Governor C. C. Young, who last week refused a pardon to Mooney.

MISSING GIRL RETURNS WITH HER "ABDUCTOR"

RICHMOND, Va., July 13.—(AP) — Mary Frances McClenny, prominent 20-year-old Richmond girl, missing since July 1, was at the home of her parents, Dr. and Mrs. D. C. McClenny, today, after returning last night with her companion, Harry Dickinson, who the girl's father had arrested on a charge of "abducting" his daughter.

The two weeks they spent together in a Waynesboro, Va., rooming house apartment came to an abrupt end late yesterday, when they were discovered and returned to Richmond—the girl to her parents, and Dickinson, a filling station operator, to jail.

After surrendering himself to authorities on his return Dickinson was released in $1,000 bail to appear for police court hearing July 18, with N. H. Dickinson, and Johnnie Leadbetter, his garage associates, arrested as "accessories."

BODY OF SLAIN GIRL WAS FOUND IN FURNACE

PORTLAND, Me., July 13. — (AP) — James M. Mitchell, 22 of this city, was arrested today on a charge of murder of Miss Lillian I. MacDonald, 20, who disappeared yesterday while distributing pay envelopes to employes of a local stationary store.

The girl's body was found early today in the furnace in the basement of the building the firm occupied.

County Attorney Ralph M. Ingalls said Mitchell, who was an employe of the same firm as the girl, has confessed.

Part of the $750 the girl had in undistributed envelopes, when she vanished, was found under the furnace.

The young woman was killed by a blow with an iron pipe which crushed her skull. Her body was then crammed into the fire box and prodded back with the pipe which was found alongside the remains.

NEGROES DRIVEN OUT OF ERICK, OKLA., BY MOBS

SHAMROCK, Tex., July 13—(AP)—Reports received here late today by Sheriff W. K. McLemore of Wheeler county, said Negroes were driven out of Erick, Okla., last night and from Texola, Okla., today by mobs seeking reprisal for the death of Mrs. Henry Vaughan, wife of a farmer in nearby Collingsworth county, Texas, who was beaten to death Friday by a Negro.

Sheriff McLemore said he was considering asking Governor Moody to send state rangers here to assist local peace officers, should further mob disorders be threatened.

Walked O[illegible]uring "Spir[illegible] Messages

Many of Audience Left the Hall In London At Services For Sir Arthur Conan Doyle.

LONDON, July 13—(AP)—Memorial services for the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, attended by 10,000 persons, including Lady Doyle and Sir Arthur's sons and daughters, came to an abrupt end tonight during the delivery of what purported to be spirit messages. Many of the audience rose and walked out.

Mrs. Estelle Roberts, a salaried clairvoyant employed by the Marylebone Spiritualist association, had delivered messages from five "spirits" which she asserted stood behind "pushing" her.

Forty of 250 persons in various parts of the great auditorium of Albert hall, where the meeting was held, suddenly got up and started for the doors.

"I can't go on with all these people walking out," Mrs. Roberts announced from the platform, and the meeting reached a sudden end.

The memorial service, organized by various spiritualist bodies in recognition of Conan Doyle's work on behalf of spiritualism, attracted a vast crowd The audience was orderly until the exit of the oqended persons.

As the meeting broke up, Mrs. Roberts told Lady Doyle she had received a "message" from Sir Arthur. On hearing it, Lady Doyle exclaimed, "I am perfectly convinced the message is from my husband."

She declined, however, to reveal it.

Throughout the service, an empty chair stood on the platform to symbolize the "unseen presence" of the late creator of Sherlock Holmes.

Among the five spirits with whom Mrs. Roberts said she was in communication was Emily Wilding Davidson, a suffragette who threw herself under one of King George's horses at the Derby several years ago.

The messages purported to be addressed to various persons in the audience, each of whom claimed to have recognized the authenticity of the message to himself or herself.

SENATORS DELINQUENT IN CONTEST OVER NAVAL PACT

Only a Bare Quorum, 40, Answered the Roll Call Friday—Twenty-Seven Senators Failed to Attend Any Session Last Week — Opponents of the Pact Have Attended Every Meeting—It Is Possible For the Opponents to Break a Quorum and End the Special Session At Any Time.

(By Francis M. Stephenson.)

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—President Hoover and senate advocates of the London naval treaty gave serious consideration today to attempts to bring back to the senate sufficient members to insure a quorum for a protracted contest on the pact.

As treaty proponents turned their attention to missing members, foes drafted new reservations to be offered after the senate has disposed of the Norris reservation, which provides that no understandings not embodied in the treaty text shall be considered to have been ratified by approval of the pact.

Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, is preparing some reservations and around these the treaty foes will center their forces. He will have these before the senate early in the week at the time he delivers a prepared address against the treaty

Senators Vandenberg, Michigan, and Allen, Kansas, republicans of the militant young guard group, conferred over the week-end with Mr. Hoover at the Rapidan and the danger facing the treaty session because of the possible failure of a quorum was a subject of serious attention.

The senate ended the first week of debate with only 40, a bare quorum, answering the opening roll call on the final day. Only 41 senators have answered a roll call every one of the five days of the special session for the treaty. Twenty-seven have not been there at any time.

The treaty opponents, led by Senators Johnson, republican, California, and Moses have been on hand throughout and the treaty advocates must thank them for the quorum that has been present. Likewise, the treaty forces realize it is in the power of the opponents to break a quorum and end the special session at any time. Definite moves toward an adjournment of the session this week are expected and little hope of ratification of the pact during the week is in sight although there is obviously an overwhelming majority for it.

Those who have answered the opening roll call every day include: Republicans, Borah, Capper, Couzens, Dale, Fess, Gillett, Goldborough, Hale, Hebert, Johnson, Jones, Keyes, McCulloch, McNary, Metcalf, Norris, Nye, Oddie, Patterson, Phipps Reed, Shortridge, Sullivan, Thomas of Idaho, Townsend, Vandenberg and Watson, Democrats—Black, Caraway, George, Kendrick, McKellar, Overman, Sheppard, Stephens, Swanson, Trammell and Walsh of Montana.

In addition to these, Senators Moses and Robinson, of Indiana, answered other roll calls on each of the five days.

The following answered the opening roll call on four days: Republicans, Bingham, Glenn, Hastings, Howell, Lafollette, McMaster, Robison, of Kentucky, and Walcott. Democrats—Harris, Robinson of Arkansas, Thomas of Oklahoma, and Walsh of Massachusetts.

The following have not attended the special session: Republicans—Bard, Blaine, Brookhart, Cutting, Frazier, Goff, Gould, Greene, Grundy, Kean, Norbeck, Pine and Waterman. Democrats—Ashurst, Blease, Bratton, Brock, Broussard, Dill, Hawes, Heflin, Ransdell, Smith, Steck, Tydings, Wagner, and Wheeler.

Senator Norbeck is in Iceland on a commission from President Hoover to attend a celebration there. Senator Ashurst is a delegate to the Interparliamentary Union in London about to open.

CAPONE DEFIES OFFICIALS OF MIAMI AND DADE COUNTY

MIAMI, Fla., July 13—(AP)—Although Scarface Al Capone's vacation visit at his estate near here has been interrupted by a number of legal entanglements and he is anxious to return to Chicago, he will refuse to be "run out" J. F. Gordon, one of his attorneys, said today.

The Chicago racketeer decided, Gordon said, that he will continue to maintain his $250,000 residence on Palm Island, Miami Beach, despite the effort to oust him. His plans to leave for Chicago as soon as possible are unchanged, the attorney said.

HELD FOR DEATHS IN AIRPLANE ACCIDENT

VALLEY STREAM, N. Y., July 13—(AP)—Charged with manslaughter as the result of two deaths last night in an airplane accident at Curtiss-Wright field, Alfred Watts, 21, a mechanic, was released in $10,000 bail today for a grand jury hearing.

George McConnell a passenger in the plane piloted by Watts, which struck a grandstand filled with spectators watching a night flying exhibition, was held in $5,000 bail as a material witness.

Hyman Kanterman, and his wife, Mary, both 30, of Brooklyn, were killed by the whirling propellors of the ship. Both were sitting in the bottom row of the stand and were struck by the blades as they attempted to help an aged relative out of danger.

FOREST FIRES RAGING IN MOUNTAIN IN VIRGINIA

BLACKSBURG, Va., July 13.—(AP)—Forest fires continued to rage on Brush mountain late today although civilians and national guardsmen who fought the flames all night believed they had won their battle to save the homes of farmers at the base of the slope.

Ditches were dug and back-fires started to check the blaze, which spread rapidly through woodland parched by a sustained drought and threatened many farmhouses and buildings. One barn was burned and flames approached close to many homes before they were checked.

Two companies of national guardsmen from Blacksburg and Christiansburg and scores of civilians continued the fight today as the wind swept the fire southeastward, away from most of the farm homes in the vicinity. A light sprinkle during the morning apparently had no effect on the flames.

National guard officers visiting Blacksburg today said the fire was partially under control but would continue to burn for many days unless rain checked its sweep. The wind had decreased since morning and late today was a gentle breeze.

CAMPAIGN OF VIOLENCE IS FEARED IN INDIA

BOMBAY, India, July 13.—(AP)—Attempts by nationalist extremists to launch a country wide campaign of violence and terror in the event that Mahatma Gandhi's non-violence program of civil disobedience should fail is feared by some Gandhi lieutenants.

The introduction of any such methods into the swaraj (independence) movement is strongly opposed by Mr. Gandhi and his principal field leaders.

It is pointed out that the violent revolutionaries of the Indian national congress party from the beginning of the Gandhi campaign, have stood for a program of violence.

In some congress quarters it is hinted that the movement is already showing signs of weakening. In support of this view, the half-hearted response to Friday's procession in sympathy with the mutineers of the Garwhal rifles regiment has been adduced. Less than 2,000 persons turned out for the parade.

AUTO HIT BY TRAIN BUT LITTLE DAMAGE DONE

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13.—George Perrine of 241 Willow street almost miraculously escaped paying with his life as well as those of his wife and two daughters, Charlotte and Doris, about 3:30 o'clock here Saturday afternoon for the wrongful presumption that the Columbia avenue grade crossing was an underpass. Perrine saw passenger train No. 122, Waterbury to Boston, approaching the crossing, headed toward this city, but continued to drive on in the belief that the train would take an underpass route. His guess proved wrong and in effort to avoid colliding with the train as it sped across the avenue he swerved sharply to the right, pulling his car in the same direction as the train was going. One of the coaches struck the left rear of the automobile, sending it skidding along a distance of 62 feet, where it came to a stop against the flash-signal box, putting the signal out of commission.

None of the occupants was injured in any way and the car, although damaged, was driven off under its own power. State Policeman James A. Buckley of the Stafford Springs barracks notified Perrine to appear in police court here next Saturday to answer to a charge of speeding, the officer having determined that the danger signal was operating at the time of the crash. The train, due here at 3:30, was in charge of Engineer F. A. Putnam and Conductor W. J. Beardsley, both of Waterbury.

LOCAL MAN ARRESTED FOR RECKLESS DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13.—Amedee Blanchette, 25, of 65 Ives street, this city, was arrested at his home Saturday noon by Police Officer Arthur Hurley and Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins of Columbia as the aftermath of a collision in Columbia earlier in the day. Blanchette was arraigned before Justice of the Peace Ruth Benton of Andover in the Columbia town court Saturday evening on charges of reckless driving and evasion of responsibility. He was fined $25 on the first charge and $50 and costs on the second, a total of $97.35, which was paid. A charge of taking a motor vehicle without permission of Alex Elliott of Quercus avenue, this city, the owner, was not pressed when Grand Juror Joseph N. Clarke explained that Blanchette had been working with Elliott and was accustomed to taking the machine, a Chevrolet truck. Blanchette pleaded guilty as charged. The truck, driven by Blanchette, collided with another truck driven by Joseph Furtado of 87 Sheldon street, Providence, and owned by Fink Brothers of 68 Eddy street, that city. Furtado and his assistant, John Curry, also of Providence, had stopped the truck on the highway near Katzman's corners to make slight repairs. Suddenly they heard the roar of the approaching truck driven by Blanchette and, sensing a collision, jumped to safety in the nick of time. The Chevrolet struck the parked truck and then shot into an embankment where it was badly wrecked. Blanchette and a companion left the scene, but the driver was arrested at the conclusion of an investigation conducted by Sheriff Collins, assisted by Officer Hurley.

TOWN TEAM WRESTS VICTORY FROM EAST HAMPTON, 6-4

The Colchester town baseball team defeated the fast East Hampton team in an exciting game on the local park diamond Saturday afternoon, 6-4. The line-up: Colchester— P, Broder, Fedus; c, Welch; 1st, Saban; 2nd, Gyome; 3rd, Fedus; ss, Slavkin; cf, Falbowski; rf, Cohen; lf, Rathbun. East Hampton—P, Bransfield; c, Scotia; 1st, Shoemaker; 2nd, Peterson; 3rd, Bransfield; ss, Bransfield; rf, O'Richio; cf, Casey; lf, Collins. Umpire, Lester. Broder made 6 strikeouts for Colchester and Bransfield made 13 strikeouts for the opposition. Colchester collected thirteen hits from the East Hampton twirler, Bransfield, a member of the Middlesex league who was not playing in quite his usual top form. Broder held East Hampton scoreless until the 4th inning when they scored one run and in the seventh inning the East Hamptonites secured their other three runs when Broder worked himself into a hole and was finally relieved by Fedus. In the eighth inning, with the score 4-3 in favor of East Hampton and with 2 men on base, Falbowski, the local star center fielder, made a clean single sending in the winning run. Out of three times at bat he made three hits. Slavkin hit his second three-bagger of the season and Rathbun made a fine 2-base hit for the local outfit. Shoemaker was the heavy hitter for East Hampton, getting a neat two base hit. Fedus did some sensational base stealing for Colchester and Saban, the local outfit's first baseman, made several brilliant stops at his corner.

Two of the checks were cashed by Harry Shalett, proprietor of Shalett's Dyeing and Cleaning company, 4 Montauk avenue. One check was for $20 and the other for $2 and both purported to be against the account of Helen Stewart. Two other checks were for $10 each and were drawn by Stevens. Saturday morning he returned to this city, accompanied by Edna Jackson, also colored, of New York. They occupied a Hudson sedan and drove to Bank street, opposite Montauk avenue and but a few feet from the dyeing and cleaning company. While the automobile was parked, an employe of Shalett observed Stevens and acquainted his employer with the fact that the Negro check passer was occupying the parked auto. Shalett went to Bank street and made complaint to Officer Sylvia. The latter went to the automobile and arrested Stevens. Sylvia escorted Stevens to a nearby police signal box, where the officer was summoning a police car, when Stevens started to run away. Sylvia pulled his revolver and threatened to shoot if the Negro did not halt. Stevens decided not to take a chance at receiving a bullet in his body and surrendered.

STRANGE ANIMAL SEEN IN DANIELSON YARD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 13.—Page a zoologist! Hide up if you're timid! There's some sort of a four-legged thing loose up in the central Broad street section, or was Saturday, and he just isn't native to these parts at all.

Robert Cudworth has knocked around in many corners of the world during his service in the British armed overseas forces, and he has seen many things, but when he was mowing the lawn up at Mrs. John B. Bassett's place on Broad street Saturday morning something appeared to him that does not classify at all within the known species of animal life of eastern Connecticut.

Mr. Cudworth's attention was first attracted to the fact that something unusual was going on by the strange and frightened actions of a passing cat. The cat left the vicinity on high as a strange and weird animal made its appearance.

Mr. Cudworth looked the thing over and could not, and cannot, figure out just what it was. It probably weighed as much as 20 pounds, had a small head, short hair, long and apparently hairless tail, and front legs that appeared to be shorter than the hind ones. It was dark in color and a bit clumsy in getting about.

Out in Broad street it sat up like a rabbit and looked about for a minute, but as Mr. Cudworth approached it ran off and up a tree near the Conklin home. Then Mr. Cudworth started looking for someone who might have a gun or a penchant for hunting down such strange members of the animal kingdom. Meanwhile the animal made off, and has not since been seen.

This is neither here nor there, but on Friday night a sideshow attraction at a circus on a lot up on North Main street was a wharf rat—a giant—weighing, according to the announcer, a mere 20 pounds. The show did not get away from here until after daylight Saturday morning. Now arises the question, in the minds of many here, did that giant rat escape, and if so, was that the thing that Mr. Cudworth unquestionably saw up on Broad street a few hours later? And if it is the rat, what kind of a beast is it that looks like nothing known hereabouts and can climb trees and scare a cat out of six or eight of its nine lives? The answer to all of this must rest with the venturesome souls that can kill the thing, and also the current nervousness of many women folks in the section mentioned.

The promise this afternoon was that there will be the usual grist of Monday cases in the Killingly town court. Violations of motor vehicle regulations will account for most of the court appearances. Last night state officers handed out 13 tickets in checking cars that came along by the barracks on North Main street for the purpose of determining how the drivers were giving attention to such equipment as the officers habitually inspect.

County Game Warden Thomas Daniels of Plainfield ranged over the county at the week-end, as did his deputies, checking on fishermen and as to how they were obeying the laws. In Eastford there were two arrests for violation of fishing regulations, court appearances of those guilty of the violations and impositions of fines of $1 each on the accused. Not so many are fishing, now that the trout season has ended, but there are those who are out for bass, pickerel and perch, not to mention pout, and they may expect to be checked up at any time.

Plankey Fined on Two Counts

This Sunday afternoon Elmer Plankey was presented in a justice's court in Canterbury and fined $150 and costs—$75 on each of two counts alleging sale of intoxicating liquors and keeping with intent to sell, and added costs.

His presentation before Justice Colt followed a raid made last night by State Officers Elton Nolan, Henry Mayo and Lionel Poirier of the Danielson barracks.

They seized about four gallons of alcohol at the Plankey farmhouse, which is on a dirt road between Wauregan and Canterbury.

While checking cars for their equipment efficiency, lights, brakes, etc., opposite the state police barracks on North Main street Saturday night, State Officer Lionel Poirier arrested Mike Bolinsky of Elmville on a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was under the influence of an intoxicant. Bolinski, released under $200 bail, will make an appearance in the Killingly town court Monday morning.

Incident to the services at the Westfield Congregational church today, information was conveyed to those attending relative to what Dr. J. J. Banninga, in the missionary service of the church, is doing in India. In a communication to the pastor, Rev. Harding W. Gaylord, Dr. Banninga says in part: "I must drop you a line before we leave Kashmir, for I shall be more than busy when I get back to Pasumalai. We shall have one of the best entering classes ever we had, and I shall need to do a lot of preparation for this class in arranging all details of courses, residence, etc.

"We have had a delightful time here . . . motoring under difficulties, living in a houseboat, climbing mountains, crossing over snow-bridges, ascending peaks and scrambling up valleys—all to our heart's content and to the weariness of our flesh, but, oh! how we did sleep afterwards! And now I am fit as a fiddle, and could easily walk 15 miles daily.

"I am glad that Anukoolam is to be with you (in Danielson) or, perhaps, already has been there. He will give you a light on Pasumalai that I could not give, for he has been a student there, and knows it from the India side. I trust he will not paint us missionaries too black!"

A. Putnam Woodward, ranking a captain on the retired list; Ira A. Warren, a lieutenant with the American overseas forces in the World war, and Sergeants G. Rene Caron and Sidney P. Marland of the present special service troops of the 43rd division, with headquarters here, were among the visitors with officers and members of the service battery at Niantic today, the occasion of the historical pageant staged by the 192nd Field Artillery.

Estimates as to the percentage of traffic diverted from the direct Danielson-Wauregan state highway route because of construction work run as high as 50 per cent. Much of the diverted traffic is going around through Brooklyn, an excellent optional state highway route. More of it, chiefly out of Central Village, Moosup and Sterling, has been passed over to the old Green Hollow road, a first class dirt highway. This diversion likely will continue through the summer season, and thereafter will come the reward of practically three miles of new, high-grade concrete highway between Wauregan and Danielson.

John Patterson of Broad street was reported quite seriously ill today in a Worcester hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Piuze and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Lague, were among those who today visited Niantic, where the Service battery, Danielson, of the 192nd Field Artillery, is doing field service, as it does each summer.

Added to local military notes may be mention of the fact that the special troops of the 43rd division stationed at the local state armory here, under the command of Major E. L. Darbie, will do their annual tour of field service at Camp Devens, in August.

Danielson's July co-operative sales plan opened with a bang here on Saturday, when many out-of-town people came in to share in the distribution of real bargains.

The coming Saturday, hundreds of employes of Powdrell & Alexander's six mills in this town will be at Rocky Point for the annual outing, which has become a fixture. The employes will pay a nominal sum for transportation and the fine shore dinner to be served to them. The company will see to it that they have a real big-time holiday.

Mrs. Jennie Alexander and daughter, Barbara, of North Main street, have gone to Los Angeles to visit with Mrs. Alexander's husband, Charles, who has been out there several weeks preparing to open a new curtain factory for the concerns by which he is employed.

Local motorists read with interest, but no dividends, of the gasoline war in California, where disagreeing oil companies are in such a jam that the liquid that makes the motors purr is selling for 5 cents a gallon, including a state tax of 2 cents per gallon. Like cyclones and tornadoes, such things never happen in this section of eastern Connecticut.

JEWETT CITY

SO-CALLED HUCKLEBERRIES HARMLESS SHADBERRIES

The local shadberry has again come into its own. One afternoon recently a party of fair berry pickers returned to tell of the wonderful huckleberries they had found and of which they had eaten their fill. They declared that the new species of this luscious berry grew on trees, which were much taller than their heads. Upon being informed that huckleberries never grew so high, samples of the branches and specimens from their pails were produced as evidence. Finally, one of the girls, feeling a bit uncertain, told the story to a friend, later learning that her party had lunched on shad berries, but no bad results needed to be feared. During the first few years following the World war, a young southern student minister held one of the local pastorates. One day, he with a local boy, was roaming the nearby woods, when they came upon a shad bush, ten feet tall, loaded with bright and shining berries. But, preacher and lad, ate freely. After returning home the dominic decided that something might not possibly be well. A local doctor was called, and a boy dispatched hurriedly to secure a sample of the berries on which the twain had feasted. In that case as well as in the present instance, the berries were declared harmless, whereupon the clergyman crawled out of bed to which he had suddenly retired.

This (Monday) evening the Q. C.'s and Accos will play on the Ashland grounds. Judging from information received Sunday this contest is to be removed from the ordinary class. PUTNAM

SECOND DEATH AS RESULT OF RAILROAD ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 13. — Thomas Lynch, foreman of the section crew involved in the fatal accident at North Grosvenordale Friday morning, died at the Day Kimball hospital shortly before 9 o'clock Saturday evening after waging a courageous but losing battle with death for more than 36 hours. With the death of Mr. Lynch, another name was added to the fatal list, resulting from the derailing of the motor car at Reardon siding above North Grosvenordale. Frank Perichino, a member of the crew, met instantaneous death when hurled from the car as it left the rails and careened through the brush of the railroad embankment and plunged into the French river.

Mr. Lynch was 53 years of age and resided on Fifth street in Webster. With head crushed, both legs broken and suffering from possible internal injuries, he put up a brave battle for life. Mr. Lynch remained in a semi-conscious condition throughout Friday evening and until late Saturday afternoon.

Mr. Lynch was well known in Putnam, especially in railroad circles. He had been a section foreman of the New Haven road for more than 30 years. His widow and children are immediate survivors and a sister, surviving him, is Mrs. Timothy Hannifan of South Main street. The body of Mr. Lynch was returned to his home in Webster this morning. Funeral arrangements had not been announced this afternoon.

BRANCH TELEPHONE SYSTEM AT VONSIATSKY HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 13.—An automatic branch telephone system is being installed at the estate of A. A. Vonsiatsky in Thompson, by employes of the local telephone company. This system, which will connect with the Putnam exchange, is one of the newest types of equipment adopted by the Bell system. There are only a few such systems in the state of this type. The only other one in eastern Connecticut is located in the Thames Bank and Trust company at Norwich.

The dial system is incorporated in the service being installed at the Vonsiatsky home. Dials are provided at all of the telephones on the estate and any other telephone in the loop may be reached by using the dial numbers.

Calls to the Putnam exchange may be passed or received by pressing a button on the base of the telephones. While this is the first automatic branch telephone system to be installed in Windham county, Manager E. L. Beebe of the local exchange said yesterday that negotiations are now being conducted with other large concerns and estates for the installation of similar apparatus.

Ernest L. Chandler, a member of the squad of five officers of the police department, was elected local vice-president of the State Police association at the conclusion of its annual meeting held last week in Bridgeport. Morris Murray of Boston, would be included in the itinerary of the Pomfret and Thompson gardens tour to be held on July 18, for the benefit of the hospital nurses' home fund. The estate of Mrs. Murray is one of the most beautiful and elaborate of the Pomfret country places. The Italian gardens, with beds of rare and imported shrubs, its canals and artificial pond, is certain to be an unusual treat for lovers of nature's beauty.

Geissler Saturday morning and was fined $5 and costs when found guilty of operating a car with improper brakes. State Officer Lionel Poirier testified as to the condition of the braking system on Leite's car. Judge Geissler gave the driver a severe reprimand along with the fine when the Providence operator informed the court that he was financially unable to meet the demand of the court. He secured the money later in the day to secure his release.

Herman Turvell, operator of a Bridgeport produce company's truck, paid a fine of $1 and costs, when found guilty of transporting an overload. The case was presented by State Officer John Murphy.

Anthony Tarnl, operator of a large service truck of a chain store concern, paid a fine of $50 and costs when found guilty of transporting an overload. Charges against the driver were preferred by Sergt. George L. Gardner.

Three cars, two in motion and the other parked alongside the state highway, were involved in an accident, on Providence street Saturday evening. A sedan operated by Arthur Marquis of Railroad street, about to drive away from the curbing, was struck by another sedan operated by Otto Schemwick of Seymour, Conn., which was traveling in a northerly direction. After side-swiping Marquis, the Schemwick car, out of control, continued down the street and crashed into a Ford touring car parked on the corner of Mill and Providence streets. Considerable damage was caused to the three cars, an investigation by Sergt. A. J. Sponcey revealed. The owners made satisfactory arrangements as to a settlement and no arrests resulted.

Three surviving members of the crew of the motor car which met with an accident at North Grosvenordale siding Friday morning causing the deaths of two workmen, will appear at the office of Coroner Arthur G. Mrs. Tourtellotte's death, according to word received here today, is attributed to a heart attack which she suffered a few weeks ago. WESTERLY

GROTTO MEMBERS ON WAY TO BLOCK ISLAND PASS HERE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 13.—A convoy of several Connecticut autos with the fez-wearing occupants, members of Obeh Grotto of Bridgeport and also from Hejah Grotto of New Haven, passed through Westerly on Saturday morning bound for Providence and Block Island. They were to attend the two-day outing of Suhrab Grotto of Pawtucket, R. I., it being the first outing of the Mystic Society of Grottos held since 1926. There were some 150 members present from 11 New England Grottos and from its membership on Saturday night at the Royal hotel was presented a vaudeville entertainment for the benefit of the society. A program of field sports made up the Sunday program for the outing's closing last night.

Connecticut State Police Officer Arthur Whitmarsh and an associate motorcycle officer of the Groton barracks picked up the convoy at the Connecticut river bridge from the officers of the Westbrook barracks. At the Westerly police station Westerly Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown was asked to co-operate and a telephone call sent to the Rhode Island state police barracks at Hope Valley where Sergt. Ernest F. Stenhouse detailed two R. I. troopers to take over the convoy from the Connecticut officers and accompany it to Providence, where a boat was taken for Block Island.

Members of Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M., of Westerly, Fred G. Kennedy, master and Pawcatuck lodge, No. 90, A. F. and A. M., of Pawcatuck, Thomas J. Burdick, senior warden, of Norwich, acting master, in the absence of Worshipful Raymond E. Pendleton, master, met on Sunday morning at Masonic hall to attend church in a joint body. P. M. "Love thy neighbor as thyself" was the sermon theme.

SEVERAL IN HOSPITAL AS RESULT OF AUTO ACCIDENTS

Automobile accidents in Westerly over the week-end sent patients to the hospital for medical care and attention to injuries received. A contributing cause was the heavy down pour of rain.

Police Officer Robert M. Kessel was called shortly after 6 o'clock Friday night to investigate an accident on Franklin street near the Standard Oil Filling station where two cars came together while both were proceeding in a southerly direction. The International stake body truck of the Holly Transportation Co., driven by Elwyn A. Taylor, R. F. D., No. 1, Hope Valley was turning into the filling station as the Ford half ton truck driven by Salvatore Terranova, 29, of 31 Franklin street, endeavored to pass the Holly Co. truck on the right side. At the time, it was reported that Terranova lost his head and seeing a crash inevitable covered up his eyes with his hands and neglected to put on the brakes of his car, which following the impact went over an 8-inch curb and crashed through a picket fence.

The front running board and front right hub cap of the larger truck was smashed while the Ford had a broken wishbone, front end spring, windshield and right wheel smashed. In the officer's investigation it was found that Terranova's license had expired June 25th and he was given a summons to come into Third District court on July 18th. Terranova's wife, aged 20, who accompanied him was taken to the Westerly hospital where Dr. Linwood H. Johnson found that she had sustained a cut over her right eye and a perforating wound on her left leg.

The ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps was called about 10:15 p. m. to the Noosenec Hill state highway to a place just south of the "Ten Rod Road" where the Reo car driven by Gordon E. Baum of Providence had skidded and overturned, injuring the occupants, and R. I. state police from the Hope Valley barracks were called to investigate.

The police learned that the auto had been parked during the very heavy downpour of rain by the roadside. The accident occurred very soon after the trip had been resumed.

Brought to Westerly in the ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps, Mrs. C. L. Frisbie of Providence, Mrs. Beulah Wilcox and Miss Ella Thorp, more or less injured. Mrs. Herman Miner, also of Westerly, was brought to Westerly in the auto of the state police, to receive medical attention.

On Sunday there was but slight improvement in the condition of Privates Edward Nelton and Richard O'Hara of the U. S. S. Anteres in Westerly hospital. Both marines have been on the danger list since Monday when they were injured in an automobile accident. They were passengers in a car driven by Leon Sinclair of Bar Harbor, Me. The car crashed into a tree on Hope Valley Hill.

On Saturday afternoon in Hope Valley, following the short afternoon shower Sidney Jerry of Westerly lost control of his automobile and it crashed into a roadside sign. Jerry told state police of the Hope Valley barracks that the car skidded on wet pavement when he attempted to make a left turn into a driveway.

The downpour of rain was the most severe experienced in Hope Valley in a long time.

Listed as passengers on the Cunard Line steamship, Scythia, which sailed from New York on Saturday for Liverpool, England, were the Misses Helen L. and Margaret S. Buffum of Westerly, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Horton, for Europe. Before embarking the Misses Buffem said they plan a three months' motor trip through European countries. They will also attend the passion play at Oberammergau.

That Stonington Police Officer Adin R. Sheldon of the Pawcatuck patrol exercises the duties of his office impartially was admitted by many Pawcatuck residents who happened to be near the Broad street Pawcatuck river bridge between midnight and 1 a. m. Sunday morning. An automobile bearing the R. I. license plate of the state police department was parked just over the Connecticut side and in front of a restaurant where warning signs forbid auto parking. Officer Sheldon after watching the auto for several minutes placed a yellow ticket on the auto windshield, which directed the driver to interview the Pawcatuck officer before the car is moved. Two Rhode Island state police officers after obtaining a midnight lunch were confronted by the "ticket" as they were about to depart, but not before one of the officers unlocked the rear of the car and took out a riot gun and into the front seat with him. At the time there was a noticeable scattering of "observers" but Officer Sheldon, who has had previous experiences with being shot at approached the Rhode Island officers in the auto and secured from them a promise that they would be careful where they parked in the future and then took back his yellow card.

A public reception for newly-installed Rev. Harold R. Crandall, wife and family will be tendered them on Tuesday evening in the parlors of the Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church by the Ladies' Aid society and S. D. B. society.

Clark easterly by land of Ella T. Burdick and southerly by land of Jane P. Vars and the school house property, being the same as deeded to the Crumb Quarry Co., later the Sullivan Granite Co., by the heirs of the late Carrie M. Lewis, formerly of North Stonington, on May 31, 1920.

A congregation which taxed the capacity of the church auditorium assembled on Saturday when Rev. Harold R. Crandall of New York yesterday became pastor of the Pawcatuck Seventh Day Baptist church, Westerly. He succeeds Rev. Clayton A. Burdick. The new pastor was installed by officers of the Westerly church, assisted by the retiring pastor, Rev. Carroll Hill of Ashaway and Rev. William L. Burdick, also of Ashaway. Rev. William L. Burdick, who also is corresponding secretary of the Seventh Day Baptist Missionary society, read the annals of the local church and formally presented the church with its new pastor.

In behalf of other Westerly congregations and the Westerly Pastors' association, the Rev. Byron U. Hatfield delivered an address of welcome. A special musical program was presented by the choir under direction of Miss Jessie Utter.

The new pastor is a native of Westerly and for the last eight years has been pastor of a New York church. He is a graduate of Alfred college and Columbia university.

Sunday proved an exceptionally good day for the observance of The Feast of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel by the Italian parishioners of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, and the final features on the programme, a band concert and fireworks display took place at the High street Athletic field. The concert, by the Colonial band of Providence, postponed from 3 p. m. for the ball game of the Independents vs. House of David, at White Rock, was held at 7 o'clock, and the fireworks at 10 o'clock.

Observance of the Feast Day started last Thursday evening with a triduum at the church. Services were also held on Friday evening and last evening, and the feature speaker at them was Rev. Reginald Giuliani, O. P., of New York city.

Fr. Giuliani also delivered the sermon at the 10:30 o'clock solemn high mass this morning, and his brilliant oratory made a deep impression on his large congregation. The mass was followed by a religious procession, in which a statue of Our Lady of Mt. Carmel was carried.

The line of march, with police escort was as follows: Oak street to Tower; counter march to High street; Pierce to Pleasant to Canal streets to Industrial Drive; counter march on Canal street to Pleasant street, thence to Friendship street and back to the church, through High street.

Solemn Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was given at the church following the procession. The hymns for the service were sung by the Girls' Missionary society, while for the mass, a special programme was rendered by the church choir.

The Colonial band took part in the religious procession and also gave a street parade at 9 o'clock, receding the solemn high mass.

The special services this year in honor of the Blessed Virgin have been more largely attended than ever before, and large numbers took part in all of the events on today's programme.

On Sunday evening many thousands of spectators swelled the number of fete-day observers to watch and admire the exceptional pyrotechnical display at the Westerly playground field off High street, in and about which were parked thousands of autos, requiring special police details to prevent traffic jams.

Mrs. Aletsia Barr, Mrs. Esther A. Cooper, Miss Bridget Farrell, Mrs. Jennie Keegan, Mrs. Edna Smith, and Miss Annie Garlick, members of the Robert Brucker Auxiliary, No. 6, United Spanish War Veterans, attended the 18th encampment of the Spanish War Veterans, held at Newport Beach Saturday.

FIREWORKS AND JUVENILE COURTS

Action was taken by the state police association at its session in Bridgeport last week upon two matters which are bound to get more or less state-wide consideration.

The association believes that the time has come to put a stop to the indiscriminate use of fireworks on the Fourth of July and that all fireworks and pyrotechnics should be banned except such as may be used in a municipal display. It does this because of the many persons injured under the present arrangement and it will give its support to any legislation intended to accomplish such a result.

This action is in keeping with the stand which has already been taken by several cities in the state where fireworks have been banned. That regulation prevailed previous to the celebration this year in certain cities and it became effective immediately after the Fourth in others. It is the outcome of the safe and sane idea with the belief that this additional step is needed in order to accomplish the full object of that movement. Later on the organization may see the need of taking action that will support the effort which is needed in order to accomplish the reduction of the Fourth's fatalities caused by other things than fireworks.

Another matter on which the association was unanimous in its action was its decision to fight any move made by the juvenile court or so-called social workers who hope to curtail the power now in the hands of the police in regard to the handling of juveniles. The association does not stand alone in questioning the juvenile court and the wisdom back of the authority with which it is surrounded. The juvenile court was supposed to give those youngsters who get into trouble proper protection and a fair chance. It does, in many instances, but in too many cases it has simply created the impression in the juvenile mind that the law amounts to nothing. They have learned to tell the police that they are not afraid of them, that the police cannot touch them, that they can do as they please without fear of punishment. They have recognized and applied the protection of the court in their violations of law without producing any corrective results in many of those instances where it is so greatly needed. The theory of the juvenile court is beautiful, but it hasn't worked out so well in practice, and none knows this better than the police.

THE TREATY FIGHT

knowing that they can be seen if they will pledge themselves to secrecy and knowing what the president and those who have seen them have said concerning their contents, it is quite evident that they are intent more upon strife than upon getting the papers, the making public of which would be incompatible with public interest.

This is further disclosed in the Norris plan for a reservation providing that this government should not be bound by any secret understandings which may be embodied in the papers which the president declined to turn over to the senate.

In view of what the president has said, and what those who have seen the papers or participated in the conference have said, it is evident that such a reservation would be perfectly harmless, but the intent of it is clearly to cast a doubt upon the president's statement. It means, if it means anything, that the senator suggesting such a plan, and those who work with him, doesn't accept either the word of the president or the other senators. It amounts to an insult because the trouble makers in the senate cannot pry loose from the president those papers which should not be made public, papers which he has a right to withhold and which would give the senate no additional help in reaching a decision on ratification. It certainly reflects no credit upon its sponsor.

The special session is developing that same administration opposition which featured the previous session. There is a determination to do everything possible to prevent action, and even those who are in favor of the treaty are remaining away from Washington, or the session, to such an extent that the majority of treaty opponents must be embarrassed by the advantageous position which is thus given them through some parliamentary move to accomplish their purpose. Nothing would be more helpful to early action than a full attendance of the senate and a disclosure of the desire to get down to business.

BEAUTIFYING THE CITY

Beautification is a question which is raised periodically in most every city. Not all need the same thing, not all stand in the same relative position, but there is always something that might be done that would produce better appearances and by making the city more attractive make it the home of more people.

It is recognized out in Indianapolis, which is no different than elsewhere, that the people who have to work there have to live there and, while recognition is given to the fact that much has been done in the way of providing many attractions, which are valuable and appreciated, the Indianapolis News points out that people like to live in comfort and amid beautiful surroundings and a campaign for beautification of the city would yield rich returns. It suggests: "There should be greater care for our trees and a planting of new ones, even in streets supposed to be doomed to businessness—certain of our business street, for instance. Notable advances have been made in the beautification of private property. There are parts of Indianapolis that are a joy to the eye. The problem—and it is an easy one—is how to increase their number."

Beautification problems vary with cities. Some are without trees while others are noted for them. Some have delightful and well-kept parks, others can boast of little in this direction. Some have modern and well-kept streets which are examples for those desiring ways of improvement. In some cities there is a common effort to improve home lots, as if to keep up with or outdistance the other fellow. In others the absence of it is noticeable and too many are ready to destroy the efforts of the few.

Beautification is an effort in which every city should be interested for its own good advertising and no city that we can recall, including the Rose of New England, has been called to account for overdoing it.

THE PERFECT HIGHWAY

EDITORIAL NOTES

[illegible]

THE WORLD AT FIFTEEN

"I hate to think it," Ernestine confided, "but now that I consider the whole thing carefully I do believe my Aunt Helen worked the same trick on me that my mother's friends do when they want to keep one of their cooking recipes secret.

"'Why, certainly, Mrs. Adams,' I heard Mrs. McHenry say just as eagerly as though she were tickled pink when my mother asked her for the recipe for her fluffy lemon pie. 'I'll be delighted to send it to you.' Which she did, but my mother says she certainly must have left out the trick part that made it so different from every one else's lemon pies, because the pie we got out of the recipe was a thing which our Boston terrier wouldn't touch.

"My Aunt Helen certainly has a way with her. She visited us for a month and I tell you I was so absorbed in studying her technique that I simply was in a trance. Watch as I might, I couldn't figure out what she did nor how she did it. She acted just as natural as I am acting this second and yet the way all the young men haunted our house was nothing short of a crime. Dad said every time he picked up a sofa pillow or lifted a book from a table some young man or Aunt Helen's popped out.

"We had to be on dress parade every minute. If some young man wasn't bounding through the front door yoo-hooing for Aunt Helen another one would be strolling in the back way across lots with tennis rackets for two and a yearning expression. They used the piano and the radio and all the new magazines and were on hand for lunch and when dinner time came were always there looking too desperately hungry to turn out. If you will believe it there was so much candy around that it bores me.

"If Aunt Helen wasn't going out she was just coming in and she was the calmest, most untouched of any one. She never sat and gazed enthralled into a man's eyes the way Betty claims is sure dynamite; she never brushed things off their sleeves in a tender fashion and I never once heard her say admiringly that they were so big and strong and clever. In fact, she just ignored a lot of them, yet they acted as though they were grateful just to be allowed to breathe in her society. I must admit she had a devastating smile.

"Finally I got up courage and asked her how [illegible]

[illegible]

—that is, I was. Oh, didn't I tell you?

"Aunt Helen just laughed at me. She said, of all things—was I calling her a vamp at her age, and she said if she knew what to tell me she would, but that she just didn't do anything particular but go ahead and be herself and that all the young men were just fine friends and certainly put themselves out to give her a good time, and a lot of stuff like that, which was no help.

"So I asked her as a favor to look Bill over and give me some real advice and meanwhile I would begin to practice being myself, so I left Bill with Aunt Helen for a whole hour the next time he came over, for I knew in that time she ought to be able to classify him and tell me how to manage him. It didn't work out. H'm? Why, you see, ever since that hour's exclusive attention from my Aunt Helen Bill has been going around looking sort of dazed and blissful, and when he sees me his expression is merely 'remove yourself from my pathway, child.'

"He's only 18, but he's come six times since then to see Aunt Helen and she can't get rid of him. So she says. I'm just as surprised and disappointed in her as mother was about the lemon pies. I'm positive she could tell me, but she won't."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 13.—Howls of agony have been pouring in on Representative Bob Clancy of Michigan since the yachtsmen and fishing enthusiasts of his district discovered that their freedom to come and go in the lakes across the international line might be jeopardized.

What they are shooting at is the Hudson bill, known as the "border patrol act of 1930" okayed by a house committee.

They think, and Clancy agrees with them, that this attempt to tighten up the borders against smuggling, whether of liquor, dope or aliens, is going to make pleasure boating on the lakes a doubtful joy.

Want No Restrictions

The trouble arises over what pleasure boats and yachts of small tonnage would be required to do on leaving or returning to American waters. The types of vessels involved now go and come unhindered so long as they carry home no merchandise purchased abroad and bring in no passengers. They are not required to report at customs houses and the business of checking up on possible smugglers among them is that of the shore patrols.

Under the Hudson act, however, Clancy contends all pleasure craft, however, [illegible] must get clearance on departure and report their return.

"The bill would give more extensive authority to interfere with the movements of innocent citizens," he says. "That is the covert and furtive purpose of the bill."

By way of illustration Clancy produced a letter from Chris Smith, head of a boat building company of Algonac, Michigan.

"On the Canadian side of Lake St. Clair," it said, "there are some wonderful fishing grounds. It is very common to see 15 to 25 fishermen, all at one time, and all American, fishing there for pleasure. They would be 12 or 15 miles from a Canadian customs port for clearance.

"In my own case, during July and August I do a lot of [illegible] fishing, set [illegible] and move [illegible] the Canadian side [illegible] of noon and come back [illegible]. In case I had to clear from here before I went into Canadian waters and report back, the customs office would not be open that early and it would necessitate driving 14 or 15 miles to get to a Canadian office to report in or check out.

"On the whole, this law is going to be very cumbersome to a great many people. It is not only going to be a pleasure killer but is going to set the boat business back, [illegible] around the Great Lakes."

Tired

By way of general comment, the writer said Michiganders were getting tired of new laws.

"They have got it so mastered now that I do not believe we have an honest man left in the state that is [illegible] them all," he wrote.

And Mr. Clancy says that's the toughest [illegible]

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Learns More

Bit by bit is knowledge earned,
And thus the truth is slowly learned.
—Old Mother Nature.

Egret the White Heron was making himself quite at home at the Smiling Pool. It was his first visit there. Peter Rabbit and Jerry Muskrat had seen him arrive and, as they watched the great white bird come sailing in in stately fashion on those broad wings of his, they thought that somehow there must be something wrong with their eyes. That he was a Heron they knew instantly. He couldn't be anything but a Heron. However, neither had ever even heard of an all-white Heron, nor one with such beautiful plumes as they soon discovered Egret carried on his back.

Egret had explained that once upon a time members of his family used to come as far north, but that it was a long time since any of them had ventured quite so far. He had told Peter [illegible]

"I'm [illegible] you like them," replied Egret.

[illegible]

that no one else has such beautiful plumes. I have a smaller cousin who is handsomer than I. Yes, sir, I am forced to admit it. I have a cousin who not only has lovelier plumes than mine growing from the back but also has a beautiful crest on the back of the head. Those plumes of mine are straight and the plumes of my cousin turn upward at the end. I don't mean to be envious, but sometimes when I see that cousin of mine at this time of year it is hard not to have just a little envy."

"If he is your cousin, of course, he is a member of the Heron family," said Peter.

"Not only is he a Heron, but he is an Egret, which shows how closely related he is," replied the big white bird.

"If your name is Egret and his name is Egret, I should think you would be mixed up most of the time," said Peter.

"We are not," replied Egret. "You see, it is this way: I am called just Egret most of the time, while he is called Snowy Egret. That is because sometimes there is a little yellowish tinge to my plumes, but his are always pure white. Some people call me the Great White Egret and they call my cousin the Little White Egret. So you see it is quite simple. After all, I am much bigger than he. Besides, I have black legs and feet, while he has black legs with yellow feet. I have a yellow bill, while he has a black bill with just a little yellow at the base. Oh, he is a handsome fellow! His branch of the family suffered even more than mine from those feather hunters. It is a wonder that there is a single Snowy Egret left today."

"And just to think," spoke up Jerry Muskrat, "we didn't even know that there was such a thing as a white member of the Heron family. Had any one told me that some members of that family dressed all in white, I would have thought that that person didn't know what he were talking about."

Wise Parents

By Leigh [illegible] Green

"You and Sister-Marie always bring your crowd here, don't you, Jimmy?" Aunt Emmy-Lou inquired.

"We sure do. And we can make candy or play the radio, take up the rugs and dance or do anything we want to do. And Mom and Dad," he looked proudly and devotedly at his mother, "are always here to help share in the fun, and to think up something else to do. Oh, this mother of mine," he laughed as he lifted his dainty little mother off her feet, "is a peach!"

When Jimmy left, his mother told Aunt Emmy-Lou and me, "It all looks easy and simple. But you've no idea of the sacrifices we've made and the outside things we've given up to make the children love their home like this. You know what gadabouts Dad and I used to be? Well, my dears, I soon discovered the children were following suit. When they came home and found us gone they and their friends went romping off, too.

"'Well, Mom,' Jim said to me one day, 'I guess home is just a place to stay in while the automobile is being fixed.'

"Now that opened our eyes," the little mother went on. "Dad and I decided then and there that our children came first. We knew we'd have an up-hill fight winning them back. We started by staying at home in the evenings ourselves. We would casually say, 'Bring a few of your friends in for dinner tonight.' Then we'd join in the fun after dinner. We soon discovered the young people loved that kind of an evening. Deadly me, but we were happy over it."

"Well, it's fine not only for Jim and Sister, but for their friends as well," Aunt Emmy-Lou agreed.

"And for us," the mother continued. "When we saw we were getting such splendid cooperation we began trying harder than ever. We encouraged the children to take more interest in their rooms, in their home, and in their town. We're trying to teach them to be good future citizens, as well as home-makers and home-lovers."

And I went away thinking, "Wise parents."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Shelton Tack Company, Shelton.

Founded in 1836 by Edward N. Shelton, was located on the west side of Derby, then known as Birmingham, which in 1889 was consolidated with East Derby and known as Derby.

The Shelton Tack company, then known as the Shelton company, was one of the first to locate in the new borough. The manufacture of tacks by automatic machines had just begun and the Shelton company became a very flourishing enterprise. By 1870 the company's business outgrew its quarters and at the completion of the canal on the Shelton side of the Housatonic river by the Housatonic Water company, the Shelton company moved to Shelton. In their new location, which is the present site, business expanded rapidly and soon a very large domestic and foreign business was enjoyed, giving the Shelton company an enviable world-wide reputation. The manufacture of bolts for carriages, stoves and beds were added.

By 1890 the consumption of tacks and small cut nails had reached its height, but due to keen foreign competition and substitutions the industry began to decline in volume soon after. Overproduction and the large number of manufacturers in the business caused many companies to close up. The Shelton company managed to weather the hard times before the great war to be helped in 1914 by large orders to furnish the allies with hob nails for the soldier's shoes. The company was reorganized in 1917 and called the Shelton Tack company which flourished greatly during the period of the World war. In 1921 the business depression was keenly felt and in 1923 the business was sold to the present management.

Its products of tacks, nails, glaziers' points, staples, double-pointed tacks, basket hoods and rivets comprise several thousand different styles and sizes distributed and used by the hardware, shoe, harness, leather, trunk, basket, automobile, furniture and shoe manufacturers.

The Shelton Tack Co., which with its parent company in Baltimore, the Hall and [illegible] Co. and its sister organization in York, Pa., [illegible] are the largest manufacturers of tacks and nails in the world. Over 10 million small packages of tacks and nails are manufactured and distributed together with approximately [illegible] tons of metal used in the manufacturing.

Under its present officers, Marshall Holland, president; Edward J. [illegible] and secretary; Herbert S. Holland, vice president and treasurer; and Henry [illegible], superintendent, the business has had a very successful growth.

There are many economic reasons for the great reduction in the industry from a 10 million dollar business in 1890 to an eight million dollar annual business today. Wire nails have largely taken the place of small cut nails, basket manufacturers are using wire stitching machines, shoe repair men are sewing shoes instead of hand nailing. Carpets and mattings are little used in the modern home. Trunks are not used as extensively as before the manufacture of automobiles.

The manufacturers doing business today to any large extent are those who have studied the merchandising side of their business and carefully studied the manufacturing end, to be able to meet the keen competition.

The Shelton Tack Co. has recently added to its manufacturing products a complete line of tubular, split and solid rivets and has organized the Shelton Tubular Rivet Co., through which it markets its products. This company already is furnishing automobile accessory jobbers a complete line of brass and aluminum tubular, solid and split, brake-lining and clutch facing rivets together with a large production of tubular, solid and split rivets to the automobile manufacturer and manufacturing trade assembling small parts.

Larger quarters are being planned to take care of the rapid growth of business and tack manufacturing is again becoming one of Shelton's chief enterprises.

FIREWORKS AND JUVENILE COURTS

Action was taken by the State Police association at its session in Bridgeport last week upon two matters which are bound to get more or less state-wide consideration.

The association believes that the time has come to put a stop to the indiscriminate use of fireworks on the Fourth of July and that all fireworks and pyrotechnics should be banned except such as may be used in a municipal display. It does this because of the many persons injured under the present arrangement and it will give its support to any legislation intended to accomplish such a result.

This action is in keeping with the stand which has already been taken by several cities in the state where fireworks have been banned. That regulation prevailed previous to the celebration this year in certain cities and it became effective immediately after the Fourth in others. It is the outcome of the safe and sane idea with the belief that this additional step is needed in order to accomplish the full object of that movement. Later on, the organization may see the need of taking action that will support the effort which is needed in order to accomplish the reduction of the Fourth's fatalities caused by other thangs than fireworks.

Another matter on which the association was unanimous in its action was its decision to fight any move made by the juvenile court or so-called social workers who hope to curtail the power now in the hands of the police in regard to the handling of juveniles. The association does not stand alone in questioning the juvenile court and the wisdom back of the authority with which it is surrounded. The juvenile court was supposed to give those youngsters who get into trouble proper protection and a fair chance. In does, in many instances, but in too many cases it has simply created the impression in the juvenile mind that the law amounts to nothing. They have learned to tell the police that they are not afraid of them, that the police cannot touch them, that they can do as they please without fear of punishment. They have recognized and applied the protection of the court in their violations of law without producing any corrective results in many of those instances where it is so greatly needed. The theory of the juvenile court is beautiful, but it hasn't worked out so well in practice, and none knows this better than the police.

CONNECTICUT FAIRS

Connecticut fairs which have been operating for two years and receiving state aid number 23. In addition, there is the Danbury fair which operates without state aid, which has an attendance nearly equal the total of all the rest.

According to the Connecticut department of agriculture, "Connecticut fairs are passing through a period of adjustment to meet the changing conditions of today and those of the future. Larger premiums are being offered and special attention is being given to the boys' and girls' department where every effort is being made to interest, encourage and educate our future farmers."

That conditions are changing which are causing the various fair managements to consider well their enterprises is not a new disclosure. Fairs have been gradually dropping out of the schedule of things for a number of years. Eastern Connecticut has seen long-established county fairs drop one by one until there remain but two of the former half dozen. They have been replaced in part by the smaller grange fairs and roadside exhibitions which involve much less in the way of grounds, exhibitions and entertainments, and draw from a smaller territory. They are more in the nature of community gatherings with neighbors and former residents helping out.

It is possible that the readjustment with increased premiums and permanent improvements will make the fairs more successful. It is to be hoped that some method of reviving these once popular entertainments and exhibitions can be devised, but attendance is falling off and so are the receipts, the drop in attendance of 3,000 at one fair being "difficult to account for," according to the department of agriculture.

Conditions have changed and the population has changed. Those who were brought up to like and patronize fairs have gone. The automobile makes it possible for those liking fairs to get to the big ones without much trouble, while the present-day forms of entertainment, including the radio, are such that fairs do not have the attractions they did years ago.

THE TREATY FIGHT

Once again there is brought to light the senate's opposition to the president and its determination to cause all possible embarrassment. This is revealed in the debate concerning the ratification of the London treaty. Knowing that they cannot be obtained, knowing that they can be seen if they will pledge themselves to secrecy and knowing what the president and those who have seen them have said concerning their contents, it is quite evident that they are intent more upon strife than upon getting the papers, the making public of which would be incompatible with public interest.

This is further disclosed in the Norris plan for a reservation providing that this government should not be bound by any secret understandings which may be embodied in the papers which the president declined to turn over to the senate.

In view of what the president has said, and what those who have seen the papers or participated in the conference have said, it is evident that such a reservation would be perfectly harmless, but the intent of it is clearly to cast a doubt upon the president's statement. It means, if it means anything, that the senator suggesting such a plan, and those who work with him, doesn't accept either the word of the president or the other senators. It amounts to an insult because the trouble makers in the senate cannot pry loose from the president those papers which should not be made public, papers which he has a right to withhold and which would give the senate no additional help in reaching a decision on ratification. It certainly reflects no credit upon its sponsor.

The special session is developing that same administration opposition which featured the previous session. There is a determination to do everything possible to prevent action, and even those who are in favor of the treaty are remaining away from Washington, or the session, to such an extent that the minority of treaty opponents must be enheartened by the advantageous position which is thus given them through some parliamentary move to accomplish their purpose. Nothing would be more helpful to early action than a full attendance of the senate and a disclosure of the desire to get down to business.

BEAUTIFYING THE CITY

Beautification is a question which is raised periodically in most every city. Not all need the same thing, not all stand in the same relative position, but there is always something that might be done that would produce better appearances and by making the city more attractive make it the home of more people.

It is recognized out in Indianapolis, which is no different than elsewhere, that the people who have to work there have to live there and, while recognition is given to the fact that much has been done in the way of providing many attractions, which are valuable and appreciated, the Indianapolis News points out that people like to live in comfort and amid beautiful surroundings and a campaign for beautification of the city would yield rich returns. It suggests: "There should be greater care for our trees and a planting of new ones, even in streets supposed to be doomed to treelessness—certain of our business street, for instance. Notable advances have been made in the beautification of private property. There are parts of Indianapolis that are a joy to the eye. The problem—and it is an easy one—is how to increase their number."

Beautification problems vary with cities. Some are without trees while others are noted for them. Some have delightful and well-kept parks; others can boast of little in this direction. Some have modern and well-kept streets which are examples for those desiring ways of improvement. In some cities there is a common effort to improve home lots, as if to keep up with or outdistance the other fellow. In others the absence of it is noticeable and too many are ready to destroy the efforts of the few.

Beautification is an effort in which every city should be interested for its own good advertising and no city that we can recall, including the Rose of New England, has been called to account for overdoing it.

THE PERFECT HIGHWAY

While efforts are being made for greater safety in the highways and advice is being offered for careful driving at reasonable speed, road builders have been holding a convention out in Oklahoma. Among other things their discussion turned to the perfect highway and where there was high glee manifested some years ago over the two-lane highway, crooked as a ram's horn, with a hard surface, those good road builders were setting forth the perfect road of today as 100 feet in width, straight as a die and extending from coast to coast, on which speed of 100 miles an hour would be possible.

Trying to foretell what the future will produce is rather uncertain business. If all traffic is to be jammed onto a few main lines there is going to be need for 100-foot highways and then not get away from the congestion as the number of machines and trucks increases. It is to be expected that there will be more cars. The past has shown a steady yearly increase and, at the present time, there doesn't appear to be anything to stop it. More cars and more traffic will demand wider roads unless there are highway constructions which will permit of a better distribution of traffic and a shortening of distances by the building of new cross routes.

States which have found that speed is the cause of the too many accidents and fatalities will hardly view with complacency the talk about the boosting the speed rate to 100 miles an hour. That is a speed which few drivers, under the best of conditions, should undertake, and we shudder to think what the casualty figures from highway accidents would be under those conditions if we can judge from the results that are produced today. The experience in certain states has been that greater speed does not produce greater care.

THE WORLD AT FIFTEEN

"I hate to think it," Ernestine confided, "but now that I consider the whole thing carefully I do believe my Aunt Helen worked the same trick on me that my mother's friends do when they want to keep one of their cooking recipes secret.

"'Why, certainly, Mrs. Adams,' I heard Mrs. McHenry say just as eagerly as though she were tickled pink when my mother asked her for the recipe for her fluffy lemon pie, 'I'll be delighted to send it to you.' Which she did, but my mother says she certainly must have left out the trick part that made it so different from every one else's lemon pies, because the pie we got out of the recipe was a flop. Even our Boston terrier wouldn't touch it.

"My Aunt Helen certainly has a way with her. She visited us for a month and I tell you I was so absorbed in studying her technique that I simply was in a trance. Watch as I might I couldn't figure out what she did nor how she did it. She acted just as natural as I am acting this second and yet the way all the young men haunted our house was nothing short of a crime. Dad said every time he picked up a sofa pillow or lifted a book from a table some young man of Aunt Helen's popped out.

"We had to be on dress parade every minute. If some young man wasn't bounding through the front door yoo-hooing for Aunt Helen another one would be strolling in the back way across lots with tennis rackets for two and a yearning expression. They used the piano and the radio and all the new magazines and were on hand for lunch and when dinner time came were always there looking too desperately hungry to turn out. If you will believe it there was so much candy round that it bored me.

"If Aunt Helen wasn't going out she was just coming in and she was the calmest, most unconcerned of any one. She never sat and gazed enthralled into a man's eyes the way Betty claims is sure gunshot; she never brushed things off their sleeves in a tender fashion and I never once heard her say admiringly that they were so big and strong and clever. In fact, she just ignored a lot of them, yet they acted as though they were grateful just to be allowed to breathe in her society. I must admit she had a devastating smile.

"Finally I got up courage and asked her how she did it. I hadn't been doing so well with Bill and if I could learn what she did to manage her young men perhaps I might be able to make him—well, more sort of adoring, don't you see? Bill has such an offhand way of yelling in at me from his roadster, telling me to come along and shake a hoof—and nobody treats Aunt Helen that way. They run up the steps all barbered and polished and spick and span and ask breathlessly, please will she go to this and that with them.

"And I adored the expression in their eyes, sort of sad and yet hopeful, and as though never in their lives had they seen anything like her. I got my hair cut to look like hers and I practiced her smile simply for hours before the mirror, but it didn't work out. The first time I tried it on Bill he just stared and asked if I had the stomach ache or anything. I was furious with him, but he is the best looking boy in school and head of the team and I'm going to hang onto him—that is, I was. Oh, didn't I tell you?

"Aunt Helen just laughed at me. She said, of all things—was I calling her a vamp at her age, 25? She said if she knew what to tell me she would, but that she just didn't do anything particular but go ahead and be herself and that all the young men were just fine friends and certainly put themselves out to give her a good time, and a lot of stuff like that, which was no help.

"So I asked her as a favor to look Bill over and give me some real advice and meanwhile I would begin to practice being myself. So I left Bill with Aunt Helen for a whole hour the next time he came over, for I knew in that time she ought to be able to classify him and tell me how to manage him. It didn't work out. H'm? Why, you see, ever since that hour's exclusive attention from my Aunt Helen Bill has been going around looking sort of dazed and blissful, and when he sees me his expression is merely 'remove yourself from my pathway, child.'

"He's only 18, but he's come six times since then to see Aunt Helen and she can't get rid of him. So she says. I'm just as surprised and disappointed in her as mother was about the lemon pies. I'm positive she could tell me, but she won't."—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 13—Howls of agony have been pouring in on Representative Bob Clancy of Michigan since the yachtsmen and fishing enthusiasts of his district discovered that their freedom to come and go in the lakes across the international line might be jeopardized.

What they are shooting at is the Hudson bill, known as the "border patrol act of 1930" o.k.ed by a house committee.

They think, and Clancy agrees with them, that this attempt to tighten up the borders against smuggling, whether of liquor, dope or aliens, is going to make pleasure boating on the lakes a doubtful joy.

Want No Restrictions

The trouble arises over what pleasure boats and yachts of small tonnage would be required to do on leaving or returning to American waters. The types of vessels involved now go and come unhindered so long as they carry home no merchandise purchased abroad and bring in no passengers. They are not required to report at customs houses and the business of checking up on possible smugglers among them is that of the shore patrols.

Under the Hudson act, however, Clancy contends all pleasure craft, however innocent, must get clearance on departure and report their return.

"The bill would give more extensive authority to interfere with the movements of innocent citizens," he says. "That is the covert and furtive purpose of the bill."

By way of illustration Clancy produced a letter from Chris Smith, head of a boat building company of Algonac, Michigan.

"On the Canadian side of Lake St. Clair," it said, "there are some wonderful fishing grounds. It is very common to see 10 to 25 fishermen, all at one time, and all American, fishing there for pleasure. They would be 12 or 14 miles from a Canadian customs port for clearance.

"In my own case, during July and August I do a lot of pole fishing; get up and leave at 5 a. m., go down the Canadian side and fish until 10 o'clock or noon and come back home. In case I had to clear from here before I went into Canadian waters and report back, the customs office would not be open that early and it would necessitate driving 14 or 15 miles to get to a Canadian office to report in or clear out.

"On the whole, this law is going to be very cumbersome to a great many people. It is not only going to be a pleasure killer but is going to set the boat business back financially around the chain of lakes."

Tired

By way of general comment, the writer said Michiganders were "getting tired of new laws."

"They have got it so plastered now that I do not believe we have an honest man left in the state that is living up to all of the laws," he wailed.

And Mr. Clancy saw that his colleagues heard about it. Leave it to Clancy.

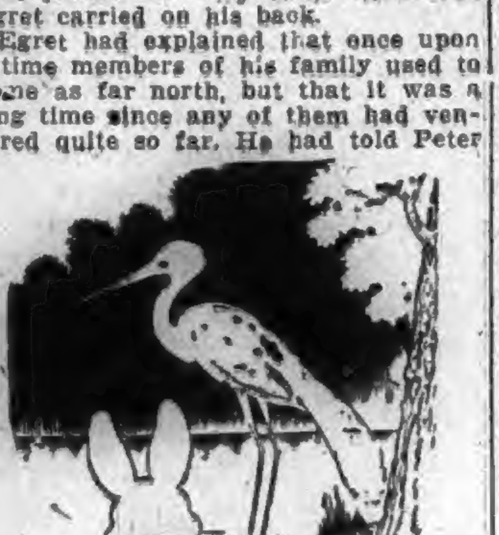
BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Learns More

Bit by bit is knowledge earned,
And thus the truth is slowly learned.
—Old Mother Nature.

Egret the White Heron was making himself quite at home at the Smiling Pool. It was his first visit there. Peter Rabbit and Jerry Muskrat had seen him arrive and, as they watched the great white bird come sailing in in stately fashion on those broad wings of his, they thought that somehow there must be something wrong with their eyes. That he was a Heron they knew instantly. He couldn't be anything but a Heron. However, neither had ever even heard of an all-white Heron, nor one with such beautiful plumes as they soon discovered Egret carried on his back.

Egret had explained that once upon a time members of his family used to come as far north, but that it was a long time since any of them had ventured quite so far. He had told Peter and Jerry how his family had been destroyed by feather hunters, who wanted those beautiful plumes for women to wear. It was a dreadful story. The mere thought of it made Peter shiver.



"I'm glad you like them," replied Egret

"I don't suppose," said Peter at last, "that there is any other member of your family with such beautiful plumes. Never have I seen anything like them. They are the most wonderful feathers that a bird could have."

"I'm glad you like them," replied Egret. "I think myself that they are rather nice. As I told you before, we Egrets have them only at this season. However, you are wrong in thinking that no one else has such beautiful plumes. I have a smaller cousin who is handsomer than I. Yes, sir, I am forced to admit it. I have a cousin who not only has lovelier plumes than mine growing from the back, but also has a beautiful crest on the back of the head. These plumes of mine are straight, but the plumes of my cousin turn upward at the end. I don't mean to be envious, but sometimes when I see that cousin of mine at this time of year it is hard not to have just a little envy."

"If he is your cousin, of course, he is a member of the Heron family," said Peter.

"Not only is he a Heron, but he is an Egret, which shows how closely related he is," replied the big white bird.

"If your name is Egret and his name is Egret, I should think you would be mixed up most of the time," said Peter.

"We are not," replied Egret. "You see, it is this way: I am called just Egret most of the time, while he is called Snowy Egret. That is because sometimes there is a little yellowish tinge to my plumes, but his are always pure white. Some people call me the Great White Egret and they call my cousin the Little White Egret. So you see it is quite simple after all. I am much bigger than he. Besides, I have black legs and feet, while he has black legs with yellow feet. I have a yellow bill, while he has a black bill with just a litle yellow at the base. Oh, he is a handsome fellow! His branch of the family suffered even more than mine from those feather hunters. It is a wonder that there is a single Snowy Egret left today."

"And just to think," spoke up Jerry Muskrat, "we didn't even know that there was such a thing as a white member of the Heron family. Had any one told me that some members of that family dressed all in white, I would have thought that that person didn't know what he were talking about."

"We are not the only White Herons," said Egret. "I came up from the South with some young cousins of mine who dressed in white. It wouldn't surprise me to see one or more of them over here, because I parted from them at the mouth of this brook."

YOUR HEALTH

Wise Parents

Helen Gregg Green

"Your room, Jimmy is very attractive," said Aunt Emmy-Lou.

"Yes, it's all my own. Every piece of furniture in it is mine, every picture, even the carpet. Why, Aunt Emmy-Lou, I selected the wall-paper. And mother makes me keep my room neat and clean, myself. I even straighten out the drawers. And Sis does the same in her room. But it's worth it—I have a fine place to read and study. And the boys like to come up here to talk things over."

"Jim is proud of his room," said his mother from the doorway.

"By the way, hasn't Cris Tobin a room very much like yours, Jimmy?" I asked.

"Yes, but much handsomer, Aunt Emmy-Lou. But he doesn't take much interest in his things. He doesn't have to take care of his room—and he's hardly ever in it. You see his parents are away most of the time. I don't believe he realizes he has a home, or knows how much fun you can have in one."

"You and Sister-Marie always bring your crowd here, don't you, Jimmy?" Aunt Emmy-Lou inquired.

"We sure do. And we can make candy or play the radio, take up the rugs and dance or do anything we want to do. And Mom and Dad," he looked proudly and devotedly at his mother, "are always here to help share in the fun, and to think up something else to do. Oh, this mother of mine," he laughed as he lifted his dainty little mother off her feet, "is a peach!"

When Jimmy left, his mother told Aunt Emmy-Lou and me. "It all looks easy and simple. But you've no idea of the sacrifices we've made and the outside things we've given up to make the children love their home like that. You know what gadabouts Dad and I used to be? Well, my dears, I soon discovered the children were following suit. When they came home and found us gone they and their friends went romping off, too.

"'Well, Mom,' Jim said to me one day, 'I guess home is just a place to stay in while the automobile is being fixed.'

"Now that opened our eyes," the little mother went on. "Dad and I decided then and there that our children came first. We knew we'd have an up-hill fight winning them back. We started by staying at home in the evenings ourselves. We would casually say, 'Bring a few of your friends in for dinner tonight.' Then we'd join in the fun after dinner. We soon discovered the young people loved that kind of an evening. Dearie me, but we were happy over it."

"Well, it's fine not only for Jim and Sister, but for their friends as well," Aunt Emmy-Lou agreed.

"And for us!" the mother continued. "When we saw we were getting such splendid cooperation we began trying harder than ever. We encouraged the children to take more interest in their rooms, in their home, and in their town. We're trying to teach them to be good future citizens, as well as homemakers and homelovers."

And I went away thinking, "Wise parents!"

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Shelton Tack Company, Shelton.

Founded in 1836 by Edward N. Shelton, was located on the west side of Derby then known as Birmingham; which in 1836 was consolidated with East Derby and known as Derby.

The Shelton Tack company then known as the Shelton company was one of the first to locate in the new borough. The manufacture of tacks by automatic machines had just begun and the Shelton company became a very flourishing enterprise. By 1871 the company's business outgrew its quarters and at the completion of the canal on the Shelton side of the Housatonic river by the Housatonic Water company, the Shelton company moved to Shelton. In their new location, which is the present site, business expanded rapidly and soon a very large domestic and foreign business was enjoyed, giving the Shelton company an enviable world-wide reputation. The manufacture of bolts for carriages, stoves and beds were added.

By 1910 the consumption of tacks and small cut nails had reached its height but due to keen foreign competition and substitutions the industry began to decline in volume soon after. Overproduction and the large number of manufacturers in the business caused many companies to close up. The Shelton company managed to weather the hard times before the great war to be helped in 1914 by large orders to furnish the allies with hob nails for the soldier's shoes. The company was reorganized in 1917 and called the Shelton Tack company which flourished greatly during the period of the World war. In 1921 the business depression was keenly felt and in 1928 the business was sold to the present management.

Its products of tacks, nails, glazier points, staples, double-pointed tacks, basket hooks and rivets comprise several thousand different styles and sizes distributed and used by the hardware, shoefindings, jobber, trunk, basket, automobile, furniture and shoe manufacturers.

The Shelton Tack Co. which with its parent company in Baltimore, the Holl and Mfg. Co. and its sister organisation in York, Pa., the York Tack and Nail Works, comprise the third largest manufacturers of tacks and nails in the world. Over 50 million small packages of tacks and nails are manufactured and distributed together with approximately 2500 tons of metal used in the manufacturing.

Under its present officers Franklin Holland, president; Howard E. Holland, secretary; Herbert S. Holland, vice president and treasurer; and treasurer; and Harry E. Rambo, superintendent, the business has had a very successful growth.

There are many economic reasons for the great reduction in the industry from a 30 million dollar business in 1899 to an eight million dollar annual business today. Wire nails have largely taken the place of small cut nails, basket manufacturers are using wire stitching machines, shoe repair men are sewing shoes instead of hand nailing. Carpets and mattings are little used in the modern home. Trunks are not used as extensively as before the manufacture of automobiles.

The manufacturers doing business today in any large extent are those who have studied the merchandising side of their business and carefully studied the manufacturing end, to be able to meet the keen competition.

The Shelton Tack Co has recently added to its manufacturing products a complete line of tubular, split and solid rivets and has organized the Shelton Tubular Rivet Co. through which it markets its products. This company already is furnishing automobile accessory jobbers a complete line of brass and aluminum tubular, solid and split, brake-lining and clutch facing rivets together with a large production of tubular solid and split rivets to the automobile manufacturers and manufacturing trade assembling small parts.

Larger quarters are being planned to take care of the rapid growth of business and tack manufacturing is again becoming one of Shelton's chief enterprises.

$5,000 DAMAGE SUIT OVER SHOOTING OF PET CAT

LEXINGTON, Ky., July 13.—(AP)—A dentist who shot a tomcat that disturbed his slumbers with noctunal arias on the back fence has been made defendant in a $5,000 damage suit brought by the pet's owner.

The suit, filed by Miss Mary Brent Hutchcraft against her next door neighbor, Dr. W. W. Taylor, alleges that the dentist inflicted on Jerry a "severe and dangerous wound" resulting in great trouble to his owner, who nursed him back to health.

Miss Hutchcraft's petition further sets out that "said cat by his attentive interest and affectionate manner in conduct towards her affords her great solace, pleasure and satisfaction, and that by the acts complained of she was damaged in the sum of $5.00.

Accompanying the damage suit was a petition for a restraining order to prevent the dentist from further molesting Jerry.

COMMISSION CLAIMANTS WERE WORKING WITH BOTH SIDES

Activity with both the buyer and the seller on the part of Michael Baldelli and John F. Murphy of New London is pointed out by Judge Allyn L. Brown in his memorandum of decision in giving a judgment against them in their suit for a commission from Rosario Giardino of New London in effecting a sale of the Norwich to Westerly bus line. The two plaintiffs sued for a balance of $1,500 on a claimed commission of $2,000 for selling the bus line.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Brown says:

The plaintiffs seek to recover of the defendant a claimed balance of $1,500 as the unpaid part of a $2,000 commission for the sale of the defendant's bus line. In their complaint the plaintiffs allege, and by argument have confined their claimed right of recovery and solely rely upon an express contract by the defendant to pay an agreed commission of $2,000, if the plaintiffs procured a customer to buy his bus line for $30,000. That the plaintiffs entered into negotiations with the defendant with relation to the sale of his line which terminated with the sale thereof to the New London Coach company for $30,000 is undisputed upon the evidence. The defendant, however, while both plaintiffs testify to the claimed contract, postively denies that he ever agreed to pay the plaintiffs $2,000 or any other sum as a commission.

Upon this flat contradiction of testimony it becomes essential to determine where the truth is. The burden of proof rests upon the plaintiffs. It is my conclusion that they have failed to sustain it. The appearance of the plaintiffs on the witness stand, together with certain subordinate facts clearly established by the evidence, satisfy me that their testimony that the defendant agreed to pay them a commission of $2,000 is not true.

The evidence discloses that the plaintiff Baldelli by virtue of his friendship or acquaintance with the defendant felt himself to be in a favorable position to approach him to obtain an option to purchase the bus line in question. This fact was known to Linn who was financially interested in the New London Coach Co., of which Baldelli was vice president, and who was desirious on behalf of this company to acquire the defendant's line. It was accordingly at Linn's request and pursuant to this purpose that Baldelli approached the defendant, attempted to get an option in his own name to buy, and carried on all of the negotiations which he did with the defendant concerning the sale of his line. The participation by the plaintiff Murphy was apparently confined to that of a voluntary understrapper for Baldelli, with enthusiasm engendered by at least a hoped-for possibility of obtaining some easy money at the defendant's expense. Nor was his hope unrewarded, for the undisputed evidence is that he subsequently did extract $500 from the defendant. In view of the whole situation disclosed by the evidence, and after observing the slow-thinking, ignorant, and inexperienced defendant, and the slick, shifty, nimble-witted and potentially domineering Murphy upon the witness stand, it is easy to understand how the latter wheedled $500 out of the former as he did. This payment, however, accordingly, has no such significance as one made on account as the plaintiffs contend.

Even though the defendant had agreed to pay the plaintiffs $2,000 as they claim, with their activity on behalf of both the buyer and the seller (defendant) without disclosure, it is difficult in view of the just and well established principles of law to perceive how the plaintiffs could be entitled to a judgment.

Judgment may be entered for the defendant to recover his costs.

Failing to pay a fine of $100 and costs, assessed him in the Griswold town court last week on a charge of drunken driving, Frank Pierce of Canterbury, an employe of the Benvenuti Construction company, was taken to the New London county jail here for a day's stay. MAJ. KING NEAR 98 VISITS GRANDDAUGHTER

Mrs. Miles H. Mann, Jr., of 366 Washington street has as guests her mother, Mrs. W. C. Welburn and her grandfather, Major William M. King of Ballston, Virginia. Major King is in his 98th year, having been born October 5th, 1832, at Livingston county, New York, on a farm near Geneseo. He enjoys excellent health and is most keen and alert for one of such advanced years. Major King, who is much interested in the Boy and Girl Scouts, considers the Scout organization one of the most important forces for the future of this country. He is a member of the board of trustees of Boy and Girl Scouts, Troops 101 and 16. The Scout library established by him in 1922 contains 500 books. An enthusiastic granger, Major King was the guest of Norwich grange at its meeting Wednesday evening at which time he gave a brief talk. He asserts that the grange is now recognized in Washington as the oldest and largest agricultural and home economics organization in the United States, having close to 1,000,000 members. A member of Potomac grange, No. 1, Major King was the first secretary, having succeeded Governor Colman as master in 1889. Potomac grange was organized in 1866. Honorable Norman J. Colman, the first secretary of agriculture, being its first master for three years, when he relinquished the chair to Major King who has been a member of the grange since 1872.

MAJOR WM. M. KING

Major King is associate editor of Farm and Fireside and Colman's Rural World, St. Louis, Mo.; was for 35 years in service in the United States department of agriculture, as chief of the seed division and as clerk in the bureau of statistics; is a Civil War veteran, being past post commander of George G. Meade post, No. 5, Grand Army Republic of department of Potomac. Major King has been a member of F. A. A. M. since 1880. He makes his residence with his son-in-law and daughter, W. C. Welburn, M. D., and Mrs. Welburn, Wilson boulevard and Ballston avenue.

Major King, during his stay of about one week in Norwich Town, has made a most favorable impression upon the many people he has met who consider him a "Grand Old Man" and a distinguished octogenarian, plus nearly eighteen more years of active life. On his personal card is his picture when at the age of 85.

He has been observed a number of times the past week in Norwich, having made the trip down town on the trolley unaccompanied. Following his custom of taking a walk every pleasant morning, he can be found almost daily resting just inside the Lowthorpe meadows arch-way on Washington street. This recreative spot, with all the season's grandeur in its trees and foliage, could not have been laid out better by a landscape gardener, stated Major King Saturday morning to new acquaintances who spent an hour with him at this location.

He is to return to his home in Virginia Tuesday morning, accompanied by his daughter, Mrs. Welburn.

ANSWERS SELECTMAN'S QUERY ABOUT NORWICH TOWN ROAD

At a meeting held on May 30 in the mayor's office, at which representatives of the Mason Monument association, Society of Founders of Norwich, Conn., and members of Faith Trumbull chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, met with the selectmen of Norwich, the town counsel, and others interested, one of the selectmen asked whether there had been any change in the road at the point in question or whether the road originally ran on the other side of the present Case homestead.

As the Society of Founders of Norwich and Faith Trumbull chapter are desirous of answering any reasonable doubts or questions concerning the First Burial Place of Norwich, his question is answered in a communication to The Bulletin from Mrs. Edna M. Rogers, chairman of the Founders committee and a member of the Faith Trumbull chapter committee on the first burial ground.

Mrs. Rogers writes as follows:

"The first burial place was on the original Thomas Post lot; the middle part of this lot, which contained the Post part of the burying ground, was sold in 1775, to Ezekiel Barrett; the front of the lot, on the Town street, was sold in 1777, to Aaron Cleveland. The lines are given as running 10 rods (165 feet) back from the Town street. The lines have not been changed in all these years, and in the survey made by Chandler & Palmer for the Society of Founders, the distance is still 165 feet from the Town street to the rear corners of the lot, now owned by the Hunters.

"This is one answer to the question as to any change in the street. It is answered still further by deeds in connection with the property long known as the Adam's Tavern place, and the lot between the Adam's Tavern place and the Cleveland (now Hunter) place. This latter place remained in one family for a hundred years.

"In 1786, the road in front of Adam's Tavern is called "the Town street, in successive deeds in the years 1798 to 1820, it is called "the main street leading from the court house to Bean hill, so called." Deeds of 1836, 1838, 1840, 1845, call it the main street or the Town street. In 1846 the lot between Adam's Tavern place and the former Cleveland house lot is called a piece of land "lying on the Town street." In the map of New London county published in 1854, this is the highway or street shown, thus showing that there has been no material change in the town or main street, at least on the southerly side of the road, in front of the original Post home lot.

"This 1854 map is drawn of course to scale. On it, is clearly located the first burial place of Norwich, and is marked "Old Burial Ground." The distance from the Town street to the burial place can be measured according to the scale.

"Surely the land records of Norwich and the map of the town made in 1854, are more worthy of consideration than any vague guess work of the present day, unsubstantiated by proofs."

Nervous, Tired, Felt Miserable

"After my baby came I was so nervous and tired that I felt miserable. One day a booklet was left at our door and after reading it I decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am now on my fourth bottle and I feel much stronger. Please publish this letter because the Vegetable Compound has helped me in every way and I feel sure that other women in rundown condition will pick up if they will only take a few bottles."

KING JONES SPEEDING HOMEWARD FOR REST AFTER NATIONAL OPEN CONQUEST

CHICAGO, July 13.—(AP)—The golfing clans, headed by the Emperor Jones, passed through here today in full formation in the retreat from the battle of Interlachen. Bobby, the all-conquering, enjoyed the first Sunday of rest in three years following an American open championship, making the most of it as his party sped south to Atlanta in a special car attached to a train due to roll in for the big home-town welcome tomorrow.

In fact this was the first time in four years that all has been quiet on the golfing front the day after an open tournament, with no playoffs to keep the main contestants on a Sunday field of combat. Jones had to play an extra 36 holes to decide each of the two previous tournaments. Today his supremacy was undisputed as a result of his sensational triumph on the 72 holes at Minneapolis, finishing with a total score of 287 to beat his nearest rival, the veteran MacDonald Smith, of New York, by two strokes.

It took two Smiths to give one Jones the fight over the Interlachen links. Mac Smith set the pace at the outset and, after a brief lapse, he was the one to make the greatest bid to overhaul the flying Georgian on the last round. Mac shot opening and closing rounds of 70, each two under par, but he sandwiched cards of 75 and 74 in between to spoil his chances of victory.

Horton Smith, the 22-year old Missourian, came along to set the pace for Jones and lead the field at the halfway mark, here, the tall blond professional had a sparkling total of 142, he made the best showing of his career in this tournament, but he, too, found the final day's pace a trifle too swift. Horton wound up with rounds of 76-74 for a total of 292 that moved him back to third place at the finish.

Bobby's 12th major tournament triumph, at home and abroad since he first won the American open in 1923 at Inwood, was perhaps his greatest. He shot his finest round in 11 years of competition in this event, a 68 on the third round that put all but Mac Smith to rout. He withstood the effects of one of the most torrid heat waves ever accompanying the event, where many competitors wilted. He rallied three separate and distinct times, when on the verge of disaster in the final round, to go up to the 18th hole and sink a 40-foot for a birdie with more than 10,000 spectators looking on, cheering the master's final brilliant gesture.

For the first time in about three months, Jones can rest now, with three major conquests on British and American links to his credit and the fourth in prospect for him in the American amateur championship at Philadelphia in September. Where the odds were 50 to 1 against him at the start, Bobby now has achieved the unprecedented by capturing three of the four main crowns of golfdom.

In eight years he has captured 12 of these blue-ribbon events to set a record that may stand for all time.

For the fourth time in the American open, the professional clans had to be satisfied by chasing Jones and collecting merely their share of the prize money. As the top-finishing pro. Mac Smith lifted $1,000 of the $5,000 distributed to 21 players. Two other amateurs, Johnny Goodman and George Von Elm, received gold medals for being inside the prize-winning group, tied for 11th position.

Horton Smith took second money, $750, and Harry Cooper, third, $650, but such stars as Leo Diegel and Walter Hagen collected barely enough to help pay their carfare. Diegel collected $80.25 and Hagen, one of the biggest disappointments of the tournament, exactly $47.50.

The distribution, after the first three awards to Mac Smith, Horton Smith and Cooper, was as follows: John Golden, $550; Tommy Armour, $450; Charles Lacey, of Philadelphia, $350; Johnny Farrell, $250; Craig Wood and Bill Mehlhorn each $137.50. Al Heron, of Reading, Pa., George M. Smith, of Chicago, Leo Diegel, and Pete O'Hara, each $80.25; Hagen, Charles Guest, of Detroit, Joe Turnesa, Bobe Shave of Cleveland, Mortie Dutra, Willie Hunter, Ed Dudley and Al Watrous, $47.50 each.

SHYMAS WIN BOTH GAMES FROM MONTVILLE

The Shyma club of Taftville took the Montville Independents over the bumps twice over the week end, coming out in front without much trouble by an 8 to 2 score Saturday at the Providence street grounds and then nosing out ahead in a tight pitcher's battle Sunday at Montville, 1 to 0.

A big lucky seventh inning stowed Saturday's game away when six runs clattered over the plate to break a 2-2 tie. Sunday, Sammy Raymond allowed the Indies but three hits while the Shymas themselves were held to six hits by Gero. The Shymas made 13 hits Saturday. Ulewicz's fielding was a feature on Sunday.

SAINTS BEAT ALL STARS WITH BUNTING ATTACK

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 13—A bunting attack in the eighth inning turned today's baseball game between the St. James team and the Danielson All-Stars into a runaway for the former club and they won out 13 to 2. The Saints, who were leading in a closely contested game up to that time by 6 to 2, suddenly started to lay them down and on eight hits and a misplay or two, soon had seven big runs and all hopes of catching them was lost.

Slowik, Szafranski, Socquet and Czupryna each had three of the 13 St. James hits. Taylor of the losers connected for a home run.

ORANGEBURG, N. Y., July 13—(AP)—Sammy Mandell, preparing for his lightweight title defense against Al Singer, on Thursday, boxed six fast rounds today before a crowd of 500, the largest number that yet has seen him work out.

The champion sparred two rounds each with Bobby Risdon, Negro lightweight, Vincent Valenti and Charlie Goodman. The champion's work today was designed for speed and he showed greatly improved form. After the workout, he went through four rounds of floor exercises and then hopped on the scales to tip the beam at 137, two pounds over the class limit.

VELVETMEN BEAT A-N CLUB IN OPENER

In one of the most interesting games played on Martin field this season J. B. Martin nosed out the Army and Navy by the score of 5 to 3 in the first game of their championship series Sunday afternoon.

Linder on the mound for the Velvetmen and Fisher acting in that capacity for the service boys, both turned in a mighty fine job of pitching, the former allowed two more hits, but was more effective in pinches.

Nap Liberty started the scoring in the first inning when he poled a homer over the left field fence. Finn evened matters up by hitting a terrific liner into deep left for the circuit, the Army and Navy added another in the fifth to take the lead. Lamory walked, Dugas hit to Magnum, who threw wild to second in an attempt to make a double play, Fisher grounded to Krauss and Lamory scored on the play. In the seventh the Velvetmen forged ahead. Eccleston was safe when Gibbs mussed up his grounder, Gaudette singled and Krauss doubled to score two runs. The following inning the Army and Navy drew on even terms by counting once, Finn doubled to open the inning, Lamory hit to Linder and in an attempt to touch Finn tripped and fell, both runners being safe. Fisher got a hit off Liberty's shins, Finn scored to knot the count at 3 all. Lamory was trapped off third to end the inning. J. B. Martin sewed up the game in their half of the eighth, Cimmy singled, Murphy tripled, Eccleston hit a long sacrifice fly into deep left and Murphy scored.

Nap Liberty fielded brilliantly for the J. B. Martin and Finn and Pepin divided the hitting honors.

MISS MADISON SHATTERS TWO MORE WORLD MARKS

VANCOUVER, B. C., July 13—(AP)—Helene Madison, sensational Seattle swimmer, chalked up two new unofficial world's records in the Vancouver amateur swimming club's meet here last night.

She was clocked in the 100 yard event for women in 59 seconds flat, which lowered her own unofficial time of 60.8 seconds. The recognized world's record is 60.9 seconds, held by Ethel Lackie, of Chicago.

In the 50 yard swim, she was timed at 26.8 seconds, compared with Ethel Lackie's official time of 27 seconds flat.

Eleanor Holm, of the New York Women's Swimming association team, swam the 200 yard back-stroke in 2:58.8. The official world's record, set by Marie Braun, of Holland, is 2:59.

CLEVELAND, July 13—(AP)—Cleveland defeated Boston in the second game of the series here today, 11 to 3. The game was called in the middle of the seventh inning because of rain.

The Indians sewed up the game in the first inning with five runs.

Scarritt was taken out of the game in the first with an injured finger. It was hurt when he attempted to make a shoe string catch of Jamieson's double.

One of the longest home runs made this season at League park was hit by Morgan to the deep center field.

MAX KAESCHE TO DEFEND TITLE IN INVITATION TOURNEY AT LOCAL CLUB

Max Kaesche of Englewood, N. J., winner of the 1929 invitation tournament of the Norwich Golf club, will return to Norwich this week to defend the Noyes Trophy which is emblematic of the title. Kaesche's entry was received Saturday by Earl Mathewson, chairman of the tournament and Kaesche assured Mr. Mathewson that he would certainly be here and also that he would bring a number of the ranking golfers of Jersey with him.

Another entry received on Saturday was that of Bud Geogahan of Middletown, one of the leading amateurs of the state. Geogahan has been one of the contenders for state honors for a number of years and he will be one of the Connecticut favorites to play for the trophy this year.

Nothing has been heard from W. C Lanman, former Yale star and member of the Sciota club of Cleveland, O., who has two legs on the cup. Lanman fell before Kaesche last year in the finals thereby saving the cup for another year, Lanman having two legs on the trophy. Whether Lanman will enter or not is unknown but it is expected that he will be here as his entry does not have to be in until the day of qualifying which is Thursday.

With over fifty entries already listed, not including the players from clubs in the vicinity of Norwich, it is expected that the field will be very close to 150. Manny Kaplan of New York arrived at the course on Sunday and shot a practice round in preparation for the tournament. The Mustard family of Willimantic, Jim, Bob and Bill, filed their entries on Sunday night. Others from Willimantic will be Dow Ahern, youthful ace, Ray Parker, Bob Remington, John Ahern, ers from out of the state will arrive and a number of others.

It is expected that a number of play today and Tuesday for practice rounds the course being free to contestants on Tuesday and Wednesday. The qualifying round will be on Thursday with match play on Friday and Saturday with the finals in the championship flight coming on Sunday.

The prizes this year are exceptionally fine, every prize with the exception of the two last flights being in sterling silver. Pewter is given as prizes in the last flights. The prizes will be on exhibition in the window of John Ferguson before the tournament.

N. L. ELKS TAKE 12-INNING BATTLE AT WILLIMANTIC

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13.—In the opening of a tournament at Recreation park here this afternoon, the New London Elks boys' baseball team defeated the local Elks boys' outfit, 12 to 8 in a 12-inning game. A large crowd yelled itself hoarse when the locals went to pieces in the 12th after holding their own in commendable manner. The lead had see-sawed back and forth during the early stages of the game.

In the seventh inning Gonzales went into the box and stopped the local hitting which had been going on freely off Petchark. At the opening of the 12th with the score, 8-8, Sutherlin of the locals, walked two men. He was replaced by Anthony, who passed two more, forcing the first run in. New London added two hits and Makara was called in from third base and retired the side after the visitors scored their fourth tally.

A feature of the game was a catch by Kelly of the locals, which stopped two runs, and spectacular work by Harrington, of the locals and Gonzales, also kept the fans on edge. Fay, another Thread City player, led the batters with four safeties.

The return game will be played at New London next Sunday.

GIANTS PUT STOP TO WINNING STREAK OF REDS

NEW YORK, July 13—(AP)—The Giants snapped Cincinnati's winning streak at seven games today by taking the opener of the series, 9 to 5. The Giants made 18 hits to eight for the Reds.

Both starting pitchers, Fitzsimmons and Frey, failed to last. Heving, who finished for the Giants, pitched some neat relief ball and got credit for the victory. Campbell, third Cincinnati pitcher, was charged with the defeat.

Harry Heilmann injured two fingers on his right hand in chasing Roettger's foul in the fifth. This seemed to be a signal for the Giants to start hitting for as soon as Meusel relieved him they piled up four runs to tie the score. Score:

FAST ACTION EXPECTED AT DANIELSON AMAETURS

(Special to The Bulletin)

DANIELSON, July 13—Amateurs who are to battle in the ring at the North Street arena here Tuesday night rested on their arms today. It is a fine thing about these amateurs, with their visions of future glory in the fistic world, that they train with greater diligence than many of the professionals who have made more or less of a mark for themselves, and are said to have "arrived."

These boys in the amateur ranks are on their way up, and forever trying to improve themselves and their skill. That has been in evidence here for the week past.

Sixteen of these coming boys are to appear Tuesday night in the eight bouts scheduled for the show. If it should happen to rain on fight night, the bouts will go over to the next night.

Some very clever amateurs, several of them only awaiting fall and the coming of the indoor shows to graduate into professional ranks, are to box here Tuesday night.

Louis Peloquin, a wiseacre of ring matters, has matched the boys in such manner as to give patrons the most for their money. There are no setups. Every boy that climbs through the ropes will have tough opposition awaiting him from the boy in the opposite corner. Willie Thibeault of Danielson fights Kid Tourney of Webster, Kid Forciet of Webster will have it out with Patsy Long of Worcester, and so on through a bill packed with potential fireworks, eight bouts in all.

GRAHAM WINS FEATURE RACE AT OUTBOARD MEET

GREENWICH, July 13—(AP)—Don Graham, Jr., of Yonkers, N. Y., won the free for all, covering a ten mile course, in 19 minutes, 43 1-4 seconds, at the annual outboard motorboat races, held today under the auspices of the Shore Island Beach and Yacht club.

Edward Hamptner of City Island, N. Y., racing his Wee Minneford, won the class A race and then raced his Miss Minneford to victory in the class B event.

BUSY WEEK IN CITY LEAGUE

Another week has rolled by and still no club in the City league has piled up a big enough lead to be stamped as a sure winner of the chase. The Thermos Bottle club still clings to the top rung in the league ladder but is ahead only because of the fact that it has played more games than the runner up, Polish Citizens. The Cits and Bottlers have both been defeated once but the latter have played six games against the Polish club's four.

By virtue of their defeat Friday, the Royals have dropped into a deadlock with the Italians for third place and the Smoke Shop and Ideal teams are knotted for last place. The official standing to date follows:

	Won	Lost	Pct.
Thermos	5	1	.833
Citizens	3	1	.750
Royals	2	2	.500
Italians	2	2	.500
Smoke Shop	1	4	.200
Ideals	1	4	.200

A busy week faces the six contesting teams as they enter into the fifth week of play, five games being listed for as many days. The Italians, after going idle for a full week, open tonight with the tail end, Ideals and on Tuesday the Smoke Shop and Polish Citizens renew their two year old fued. The Royals and Ideals work Wednesday and on Thursday the league leading Bottlers make their only appearance of the week, meeting the Italian club. The fifth and final contest of the week will be played by the Royals and Polish Citizens.

A glance through the above schedule will reveal that there are some important games billed and there is little question but that when next Monday rolls around the standing of the loop will be shaken up considerably.

By winning tonight the Italians will leave the Royals behind and on the other hand the Ideals can climb out of the cellar by upsetting the DeFronzo clan. The probable batteries for tonight's game will be: Italians, Lefty Lucier and Pete Tombari; Ideals, Buck Shahan and Jimmy Murphy.

SUNDAY LAW DEPRIVES CUBS OF EVEN BREAK

BOSTON, July 13—(AP)—The six o'clock Sunday baseball law in Massachusetts, was put to a test in the second game of a double header between the Braves and Cubs, here today, which officially reverted to the score at the end of the eighth inning, giving the Braves a 3 to 0 victory, after they had won the first game by a score of 2 to 1.

In the last half of the doubleheader, the Braves were ahead 3 to 0 at the end of the eighth. At that time it was 5:38, within two minutes of the deadline prescribed by the law which says that an inning may not start after 5.40. The ninth inning began and the Cubs knocked out four runs. The Braves had men on second and third with one out when a police lieutenant notified the umpire it was six o'clock and the game must stop.

A conference of officials was held, and it was decided that the official score was as at the end of the eighth, giving the Braves a 3 to 0 edge. Whether or not the Chicago team will protest remains to be seen. Scores:

FRENCH BEATS ELLIOTT IN TIGHT PITCHING DUEL

BROOKLYN, July 13—(AP)—Larry French stopped the forward rush of the Brooklyn Robins today, nosing out Jim Elliott 1 to 0 in a pitcher's duel although Pittsburgh got only four hits while the Robins piled up nine.

The only score of the game came in the seventh inning. Engle led off with a single, Finn was pulled over to second on a hit and run play and Hemsley hit a single through the hole sending Engle to third. The Pirate shortstop scored on P. Waner's infield out.

Brooklyn had many chances to score. Twice they left the bases filled. Poor base running crippled the Robin chances to win and French pitched extremely steady ball in the pinches.

ITALIANS PLAY WAY TO INTERZONE TENNIS FINALS

GENOA, Italy, July 13—(AP)—The potent racquet of Baron Humbert L. De Morpurgo carried Italy into the interzone finals of Davis cup tennis competition today for the second time in three years.

Playing in his finest form, the Italian ace swept Yoshiro Ohta of Japan off his feet in straight sets to enable the Italians to win the series, three matches to two. De Morpurgo, giving Ohta only three games all told, won by scores of 6-0, 6-2, 6-1.

Earlier in the day, Takeichi Harada, who had beaten Morpurgo in singles on Friday, conquered Georgio De Stefani in straight sets, 6-2, 7-5, 7-5, to deadlock the series at two victories apiece.

Italy's triumph qualified De Morpurgo and his mates for the interzone finals against the United States at Paris, Friday, Saturday and Sunday.

LAST WEEK PROVED SLUGGISH FOR BUSINESS AND TRADE IN GENERAL

NEW YORK, July 13—(AP)—Business has wallowed through another dull summer week, with some hangover of sluggishness from the Independence day week-end, and with continued uncertainty as to how much its dollar will buy.

The steel industry showed rather more than expected quickening after the shutdowns of the previous week, but renewed declines in commodity prices was a counter-balancing restraint in business generally.

The further shrinking of commodity values was less inclusive than during some weeks in June, but it embraced such commodities as wheat, cotton, pig iron, rubber, raw silk, hides and tin. Rubber established a new low at 12 1-8 cents. Large copper producers fell in line with the 11 1-2 cent price instituted by the custom smelters.

The feeling that the current recession may reasonably be expected to reach its nadir this month, or early in August, gained ground in banking and industrial and trade circles, but estimates as to when the seasonal autumn upswing will reach normalcy still vary rather widely.

Several motor plants are closing up for mid-year shutdowns. The Ford Motor company suspended operations last Friday, planning to resume July 28. Several motor manufacturers are announcing model changes, in the hope of stimulating fall buying.

Freight car loadings again fell off, and showed no sign as yet of getting above the levels of 1924, although carriers generally are looking for better earnings during the second half of the year.

NEW YORK, July 13—(AP)—Arrangements have been concluded between the Philadelphia Storage Battery Co., makers of Philco Radio sets, and the Automobile Corporation of America, whereby the automobile corporation's radio, Transitone, will be manufactured by the Philadelphia company.

The United States government has ordered from Cooperweld Steel Co., 3,000,000 feet of wire for use by the U. S. Air Service as airplane radio antennae.

Industrial activity in the United States during June experienced less than normal seasonal decline, Electrical World reports. The rate of general manufacturing activity in the nation as a whole was 2.9 per cent under May, whereas, the publication points out, a 4.8 per cent drop is normal for this period.

Treasury Balance.

WASHINGTON, July 12—(AP)—Treasury receipts for July 10 were $4,084,526.64; expenditures $13,802,074.10; balance $250,449,738.76.

Until the end of the eighteenth century, houses and streets were lighted by either tallow or oil.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Palace Popular Vacation Price.

The Palace theater invites the attention of the public to its announcement of a popular vacation price matinee every week from Monday to Friday. See adv.

Palace Theatre.

If you have never seen Will Rogers on the screen, or if you have seen him, but not in a Warner Brothers theatre, come to the Palace today or tomorrow where the great star is playing to capacity houses in "So This Is London." At the Palace you will be able to enjoy every moment of the comedy, to hear every one of Will's rich phrases as it should be heard. The Palace is the place to see a picture like this, or any picture in these days when perfect reproduction is demanded by discriminating movie patrons.

By this time all Norwich must know the riotous story of Will's journey to England. How he goes against his own wishes, how he is very seasick, how he doesn't like the English anyway, and how he gets to like them less and less when his son falls in love with one of them. It is priceless stuff. The picture itself is a gem of a story, and Will Rogers alone is a whole show. It is not so long ago that New York audiences used to pay top Broadway prices to get a glimpse of Will in the Follies.

Assisting Will in this, his greatest screen role, are Irene Rich, Frank Albertson, Maureen O'Sullivan, Lumsden Hare, Mary Forbes, Bramwell Fletcher, Dorothy Christie and other well-known stars. Altogether they combine to make this feature one big laugh after another, and it is well spiced with drama too and sweetened with a lovely romance.

Starting Wednesday the Palace will present for three days a splendid new double-feature program including "Good Intentions," the drama of [illegible]aster crook, starring Edmund Lo[illegible] and Marguerite Churchill and "Ch[illegible]n of Pleasure," starring Lauren[illegible] [illegible]ray, Wynne Gibson and others

Psalm 139:9-10

"If I take the wings of the morning and dwell in the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall Thy hand lead me, and Thy right hand shall hold me."

I will take the wings of morning,
And fly in the spirit afar,
To find the heavenly pastures
Where God's blessed Angels are.

I will take the wings of morning,
While I toil in my daily place,
For the soul knows naught of fetters
When it goes to seek Thy face.

If I take the wings of morning
Thou wilt enfold me with Thy care,
And Thy strong right hand shall lead me
Behold! I shall find Thee there.

"If I say, Surely the darkness shall overwhelm me, and the light about me shall be night, even the darkness hideth not from Three."

When I go into the shadows
Where light of life is burning dim,
I shall feel a love that follows,
I am not away from Him.

Yea, if even thru the valley
I to the depths of darkness go,
Is it there all fear dispelling
That I shall Thy presence know,

"But the night shineth as the day. The darkness and the light are both alike to Thee."

Wings of morning, darksome shadows
Alike are shining, clear to Thee,
Up to Heaven, down to Sheol,
I can never from Thee flee.

O light so blessed that shineth,
Bright even as the day,
Shine o'er my life, and in my heart,
An ever living ray.

—By Gertrude Bond Walker, in Boston Transcript.

Watermelon Time

Feelin' fine! Mo's den fine—
Jes' a-bubblin' over!
Best of cheer now am here—
Livin' right in clover!
All am right day an' night—
Eb'rything's sublime!
What's de reason? It's de season
Fo' watermelon time!

Nicest green ebber seen
On de watermelon;
An' dat red! All ain't said
When you's thro' a-tellin'.
You kin tell all am well
If it plunk like chime;
All de strife leave my life
In watermelon time.

—A. Phil Maurer, in The Pathfinder.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Dr. Young (enthusiastically, after examining patient)—I wish I had your heart, Miss Bloom.

Miss Bloom (shyly)—You may, dear doctor. I'm not engaged—Detroit News.

"My wife is unbearable!"

"Show your teeth once or twice."

"I did once and since then I haven't had any."—Hummel.

George—Yer ma give yer a spankin' las' night, didn't she?

Freddie—Yeh, when a feller gits in trouble there's allus a woman in the case.—The Pathfinder.

Diner—Waiter, do you make much in tips here?

Waiter—More than you'd think, sir.

Diner—That's what I thought.—Brooklyn Eagle.

"If you refuse me, I shall never love another!"

"That's all very well, but does the promise hold good if I accept you?"—Judge.

Mrs. Teawhiffle—Did you change the table napkins as I told you?

New Maid—Yes'm. I shuffled 'em and dealt 'em out so's no one gets the same one he had at breakfast.—Pathfinder.

Warren—"What's Levinson's business?"

Sidney—"He ran a junk shop until three years ago, when it became a 'second-hand furniture store.' Now he's a dealer in antiques."—Exchange.

Mrs. Gotcashe (engaging an orchestra)—What's the very best music you play?

The Leader—Um-well, I suppose the very best things we play are the Beethoven symphonies.

Mrs. Gotcashe—Very well; I want you to play a lot of those throughout the evening—one for each dance. I won't have anything but the best, you understand.—Exchange.

The salt in the human body is renewed every twenty-two days.

There are at least 500,000 feebleminded persons in the United States today.

A flashing beam of light, reflected to a locomotive from a mirror on the signal post, is the latest protection for railways in Germany.

Doctors at the Oldham infirmary, London, saved the life of a boy who had been carrying a penny lodged in his throat for three weeks.

Whistles and bells in cities are softer in tone if more tin is used in their manufacture according to a British specialist in metals.

An international telephone directory, listing 60,000 European subscribers who talk from one country to another will make its appearance in Copenhagen, Denmark, in June. It is the third edition of the Annuaire Telephonique International.

A mountain lion escaped from a cage after capture near Gunnison, Utah, accidentally killed himself a short while after his dash for freedom. A chain, trailing from his neck, caught on the limb of a tree as the big cat jumped, and the animal hung, suspended in the air, until strangulation stopped his frantic efforts to free himself.

A curious incident happened in a sawmill at South Paris, Me., when the saw hit something hard and spoiled all the teeth. A pair of horseshoes was found in the heart of a big pine which was eighteen inches in diameter. The tree was cut near a schoolhouse, and it is figured that a generation or so ago some one slid these horseshoes around the small pine, and the tree grew over and round them.

About 5,000 people who carried posters they could not read, walked slowly along the main streets of The Hague, Holland, recently. Wherever they passed, laughter died, and spectators were surprised by the odd spectacle. Those 5,000 persons were blind. "We, too, want our place in society," read one of the posters; and another, "Compulsory schooling for the blind child." The blind members of the Work for Invalids association wished to stir the public and the government into action on various bills that are to provide for blind persons in Holland.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Three hundred of Hollywood's most beautiful dancing girls add grace, action and color to "The New Movietone Follies of 1930," spectacular romance which is the current attraction at Warner's Broadway theatre.

Thousands of girls were given tryouts in the course of selecting the chorus ensembles of this big production. Three famous dance directors Max Scheck, Maurice L. Kusell and Danny Dare, supervised the selection and spent weeks of effort before definitely making their final decisions.

Choruses are used in four spectacular numbers, including "Movietonia," "Doing the Derby," "Emily Brown," and the sensational finale. Scheck staged the "Derby" and finale numbers, Kusell put on "Movietonia," and Dare directed "Emily Brown," a hot jazz number in which Marjorie White and Frank Richardson are featured.

The other featured roles of "The Movietone Follies of 1930" are ably enacted by such screen favorites as El Brendel, William Collier, Jr., Noel Francis and Miriam Seegar. Benjamin Stoloff directed the production.

Where the flowers gently wave,
Lies the one we love so dearly
In her lonely, silent grave.

SKIRT LENGTH HIATUS MAY END IN STYLES FOR WINTER

PARIS, July 13—(AP)—On the eve of the midsummer launching of winter styles, hemlines of afternoon and evening dresses seem to have reached a compromise agreement.

Afternoon dresses constantly are trending downward, while the movement of evening skirts is upward.

The two types of skirts now approximate the same lengths with only a slight hiatus of half a dozen inches still to be bridged.

Informal types of dinner dresses are doing their best to be "sensible." Many of them clear the ankles by a good four inches in the between-season models which dressmakers designed for special clients.

Afternoon costumes in their present straight-from-Paris form are predominantly black, white or black and white.

Skirtlines of afternoon dresses copy evening lines closely. Even hemlines fullness disposed below the knees and sufficient length to cover the calf of the leg are characteristic of the latest models.

BRIDGE EXPERTS TO PLAY IN INTERNATIONAL MEET

LONDON, July 13—(AP)—Arrangements have been completed for the first international bridge contest, between the United States and England, in September.

One of the smartest West End bridge clubs will be used for the competition, and an elaborate round of entertainment between rubbers has been planned for the visiting players.

Final decision on the personnel of the British team has not yet been made.

The American team, Mrs. Ely Culbertson, Theodore Lightner, Baron Von Zedwitz, and George Reith, chairman of the Knickerbocker Whist club of New York, will be chartered at the club where the contest is played.

MRS. HOOVER'S SOCIAL ACTIVITIES WILL BE RESUMED NEXT WINTER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, July 13 — Mrs. Hoover, owing to illness, official mourning and absence from Washington, has had but little opportunity to entertain but it is expected that when the winter season opens next December, she will be able to set the customary pace of white house social leadership.

But it will be with a new social secretary, to take the place of Miss Mary Randolph, who resigned this summer, after having served Mrs. Coolidge both as private secretary and social secretary to the wife of the president.

The new secretary is Miss Helen Greene of California, a graduate of the Leland Stanford university, so dear to the heart of the Hoovers, and a former dean of a woman's college.

Miss Randolph was familiar with the intricacies of Washington official life, through her own family associations, as was Miss Harlan, social secretary to Mrs. Harding, and who was the daughter of a former justice of the United States supreme court. It takes knowledge, poise, and tact to steer clear of shoals as secretary to the wife of a president, and both Miss Harlan and Miss Randolph were successful in so doing

Miss Randolph's most noticable fad was her love for what is known as "period costumes," and long before they came into vogue, she appeared at white house receptions in full skirts, long rare lace capes and the like, which were immensely becoming to her slender, youthful figure.

Tastes Differ

The vice president and his sister and hostess, Mrs. Gann, have closed their apartment at the Mayflower, and gone out to the country home of the Ganns, in the suburbs of Washington. The Gann gardens are very beautiful, for Mrs. Gann, is a home loving, open air loving type of woman, and takes great pleasure in "tending the garden" herself, with the aid of a capable gardner.

In fact, Mrs. Gann, though a social leader, and a splendid mixer, is very domestic. She makes beautiful lace, and uses it for trimmings for her table linen. She embroiders with great skill, and her apartment at the Mayflower is filled with home-made embroidery and lace, so beautiful that you think it must be imported from lace making countries

Mrs. Coolidge liked knitting best. Mrs. Hoover, knits and sews but is not as devoted to needle work of one sort or another, as was Mrs. Coolidge. Do you recall how one of the women democratic leaders rent the air with walls of woe, when she learned that Mrs. Coolidge had made herself a blouse out of cotton print, or something of that sort? The lady who made the out-cry felt that in itself, that was enough to show her unfit for the duties of "lady of the white house." And do you recall how Mrs. Coolidge laughed with great glee, when she saw the account of it in the papers?

We learn from friends who have seen the Coolidges in their new home, that Mrs. Coolidge is very happy in her garden, and on the splendid porches, and cool nooks, that mark the estate.

Mrs. Owens Goes Abroad

Representative Ruth Bryan Owens, is taking advantage of the end of the house session to run over to England for a visit. You know Mrs. Owens is the widow of an Englishman and nearly lost her seat in the house on account of her doubtful citizenship. But she won out, as everybody predicted she would. Mrs. Owen goes this time as a delegate to the Interparliamentary Union held in London. Her political enemies are just mean enough to ask "Which country will she favor?" as she has shown devotion to both England and the United States. Mrs. Owen is the first woman to be designated a delegate to the Union, and there is apparently no doubt but what she is duly qualified to act, and act with discretion and wisdom.

Dogs as Pets

Everybody in Washington is housing a pet dog. As yet no decided favorite breed has come to the front. But for the most part they are dogs of a size not smaller than the Boston bull, and in many cases what we would term out-of-door dogs. The lap-dog, so called, has never held a place in Washington's high official circles, spaniels coming the nearest to it.

Its been a sort of old home week in the white house and administration circles. Allan Hoover paid a long visit, running down to the Rapidan camp to see his mother. The vice president and the Gann's have had with them Mr. Curtis's daughter, Mrs. George of Kansas, whose two children were also of the house party out at the Gann country place.

Then, too, Ambassador Dawes, was a white house guest much of the time he was here on his brief home trip last week.

Science Acts To Make Home Safe For Mother, Children And Even Pa

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—To prevent mishaps such as happened to Mrs. Herbert Hoover when she suffered a strained back from slipping on a waxed floor of the white house, the U. S. Bureau of Standards is investigating the 24,000 accidents which occur yearly in American homes.

Forty per cent of such accidents, according to Dr. M. G. Lloyd, head of the "Safety of the Household" department which is making the investigation are caused by falls.

The Bureau of Standards has asked the club women of North Carolina to assist in the preliminary survey by making reports of all accidents occurring in their homes during the last year.

From the findings of these reports the bureau will make recommendations for prevention which will be presented to the General Federation of Women's clubs at its biennial convention in Denver, June 5 to 14.

Dr. Lloyd will suggest the attaching of small rugs to the floors to prevent falls. Rails to cellar steps will be another precautionary measure advocated as will hand holds on bath tubs. Many falls are due to slippery tubs.

Helping The Homemaker

By Louise Bennett Weaver

The Pre-Nuptial Party

The hostess, who is planning a party for a bride in this traditional nuptial season, desires to have a particularly attractive table as well as delicious refreshments.

Summer flowers arranged artistically in low bowls, in glass baskets or vases bring the beauty of the season to the table. If a shower for the bride is given, little gifts can be placed in a paper parasol and arranged in the center of table. A ribbon leading from the parasol to the plate of the honor guest denotes that the shower is for her.

The thoughtful hostess will advise her guests to bring inexpensive gifts to the shower, for often in the wedding season the friends of brides are overtaxed by gift giving. Recipe and kitchen showers are always acceptable to the new homemakers. A variety of cooking utensils and kitchen aids, inexpensive but useful, can be included in this type of shower.

Menus for Bride's Parties

Small articles for a kitchen shower for a bride, can be purchased for ten cents or less and will prove very useful. Included are apple corers, strawberry hullers, knife sharpeners, bread boards, gelatin molds, steel skewers, pot cleaners, asbestos mats, glass percolator tops, measuring cups and spoons, ball of twine, wooden spoons and pencil and pad.

FIRST BUSINESS WOMAN OPERATED PRINT SHOP

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)— Mrs. Elizabeth Timothy of Charleston, S. C. was the first business woman in the United States, research by the national federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs shows. Mrs. Timothy took over her husband's printing establishment in 1838.

Another pioneer business woman was Hannah Cole, who in 1814, operated a ferry across the Missouri river. Millinery and teaching were most often selected by the ambitious women seeking careers a century ago.

Long Glove Styles.

PARIS, July 13— (AP) —Long black gloves for wear with white or light pastel colored costumes are making a mid-summer bid for popularity.

There were mannequins from important dressmaking establishments wearing long black gloves at the fashionable race meets at Autueil and Longchamps recently

SMALLER THE SUIT, MORE THE ARGUMENT

JUAN-LES-PINS, France, July 13—(AP)—Newest bathing suits on the Riviera are so shy there's hardly enough left to argue about—a circumstance which, of course, is producing great argument.

Just when authorities had satisfied themselves that bare backs would do, with watching, a young designer introduced a suit which threatens to disrupt all the new rules.

Made for women who want to swim without getting wet, it has no back at all. The front is held up by pieces of courtplaster which do away with strings bathers have been wearing around their necks. All in all, a suit is about handkerchief size.

Now police are demanding bigger bathing suits.

URGES LONG SKIRTS TO AID AUSTRALIAN WOOL GROWERS

MELBOURNE, Australia, July 13—(AP)—Rev. H. Evans, minister of the Collins street Congregational church, wants to put Australia in long skirts.

He says an inch longer on to the hem of skirts would require millions of yards of textiles, so that if woolens were worn, the price of wool would advance, and—in the swish of a long skirt—Australia would be aided economically.

CIRCUS THRILLS DAUGHTER OF NICARAGUAN MINISTER

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—Maria Sacasa, daughter of the retiring minister of Nicaragua, saw her first circus in the capital just before departing for home.

Carefully chaperoned and in company with Maria Medina, daughter of the Bolivian minister, she drank pop and lemonade, fed the elephants peanuts and laughed at the antics of the clowns.

CHILDREN'S BOOK WRITER WOMEN GEOGRAPHER HEAD

WASHINGTON, July 13 —(AP)— Frances Carpenter Huntington, daughter of Frank G. Carpenter, who gained fame through his travel articles, will act as president of the Society of Woman Geographers when the president, Mrs. Harriet Chalmers Adams, goes abroad in September.

Mrs. Huntington has just returned from six months in France. Her two girls, Joanna, 9, and Edith, , help their mother in her writing of children's books by criticism.

Fox Heads Furs for Fall.

PARIS, July 13—(AP)—Fox, particularly of the silver variety, is the fur of the immediate future, according to style makers.

There are luxurious neckpieces of two or three fox skins for wear with afternoon costumes and equally luxurious fox collars and trimming bands on the newest evening wraps.

Some trained evening wraps are bordered at the hem with bands of baby fox.

Short bands of fox finish long panels at the back of some of the new evening coats. Other coats have big cuffs of fox on three-quarter length sleeves.

Chinese Aid Women Workers

SHANGHAI, July 13—(AP)—Emancipation of women in China has been extended to the post office. Authorities hope to fill certain clerical positions with women workers. The new plan grants women the right to compete with men in open examination for post office positions.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

If olive oil is to be taken internally add a pinch of salt to the wineglass of oil and it will prove much more palatable.

Wrap a cracked egg in a piece of wax paper, the kind in which bread is purchased, and the contents will not bubble out while it is boiling.

If you spread newspapers over the table where you prepare fowl or make pies or cookies, they catch waste and save much cleaning up.

If the tag comes off the end of the shoe lace, press a little melted paraffin or black sealing wax around the end of the lace and shape it to form a tag.

Serviceable dish towels can be made of cotton crepe cut into one-yard lengths. They require no hemming, nor is it necessary to iron them.

To prevent a crust forming on leftover mashed potatoes, shape the potatoes into a roll and moisten the top with milk. Place in a bowl, cover and store in the ice box.

If it is desired to save butter when making pastry, mix a wine-glass of salad oil with water to each pound of flour, and stir this thoroughly into the paste.

If a cup of vinegar is poured over the outside of the windshield, allowing it to trickle down the glass from top to bottom, it will prove very effective in a heavy rain.

Keep piano keys white by rubbing them occasionally with a cloth dipped in alcohol, and then dry with another cloth. Do not allow any alcohol to get on the varnish as it is a varnish remover.

Sirloin of beef should be cut in very thin slices; cut with the grain of the meat, and serve if possible a portion of the upper part and a little tenderloin with each helping.

Boil two or three onions thoroughly, and the water in which they are boiled will clean painted woodwork very effectively, leaving the surface clean and glossy; no soap is required.

If overdraperies darken your rooms, have the poles extend far enough outside of the window casings to hang the draperies on. When windows are small the draperies hung in this way make the windows look much larger, and at the same time permit more light to enter the rooms.

WASHING BERRIES.

If you place a perforated cork over your cold water faucet when washing berries in a colander, the water will make a fine spray and will not crush the berries. This is good, too, for washing lettuce or other vegetables.

DARK KITCHEN.

Your dark kitchen will emerge a dazzling thing of light beauty of you paint the walls a gloss apricot and use greens for furniture and pots and pans.

SALT CELLARS.

In warm weather the tops of your salt cellars are very apt to become corroded. Place them in vinegar for several hours and the dirt and corrosion will disappear.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

A thorough alcohol rub given a patient compelled to lie in bed for a long period, will prevent bed sores.

Corn meal is much used as a dry shampoo. Allow it to remain on the hair a half hour, then brush it out thoroughly. The meal absorbs the grease. Powdered orris root may be used in the same way.

When a mattress has been lain upon for a long time by a patient his body makes an impression on it. Instead of turning the mattress it is a good idea to substitute one from another bed. It will feel new and more comfortable for the time being at least.

Wrinkles around the eyes are often the result of lack of sleep and rest. Eight hours of sleep is the required amount. Massage the wrinkles with a good cold cream on the finger tips, letting the movements be from the inner corner of the eyes outward and then upward.

REMOVING SPLINTERS

When a splinter has gone deep into the flesh try extraction by steam. Heat a wide-mouthed bottle and fill it two-thirds full of hot water and place under the injured spot. The suction draws the flesh down when a little pressure is used and the steam in a few minutes removes both splinter and inflammation. This is particularly good when the splinter has been in for some time.

TINTS FOR NAIL TIPS

Individuality has captured even the finger-tips of the fashionable miss. Blue, black, green or purple make-up for nails has now become the fashion for headliners in chic.

It is not all crimson that nails are being painted. For the lady whose personality suggests a background of black lacquered walls and ebony flooring, there is the further startling gesture of inky nail tips!

There is blue nail polish—for a Roman holiday, perhaps; green for an emerald celebration; and purple for a royal evening. Such color polishes are on sale in our fairly conservative America. They are recommended for wear, however, only by the individual of unusual chic or reputation.

DULL WHITE JEWELRY

New jewelry ensembles for summer include necklaces and bracelets of multi-shaped beads in a dull, dead white composition which are extremely smart when worn with colored frocks, white gloves and shoes.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Wooden shoe buckles are in accord with wooden jewelry.

The striped linen dress has arrived along with dresses of satin striped chiffon.

White goat and pigskin gloves bear evidence to the vogue of white accessories.

Chanel makes an evening gown of printed chiffon of bright green sprig on a dead white background.

Evening wraps prefer the short length. Velveteen makes some of the smartest. Satin ones are good, too.

A red and white pin dotted foulard has its coat and skirt yoke made of matching plain red material.

Off-the-hair hats are very new. They have shallow crowns and are to be worn poised carefully atop one's shining locks.

TENNIS SUITS

The latest tennis suits have shorts and skirts tuck-in blouses. You can take off the skirt for tennis and put on the skirt for country club wear afterwards.

TWO-FACED HAT

Many hats that flatter this spring are two-faced! Milliners have realized just how charming pinks, soft blues and other colors can be against the face with black or other dark tones on top.

ORGANDIE SLEEVES

A pink handkerchief linen dress, cut princess, with very full, flaring skirt and pointed V neck, has tiny puff sleeves of white organdie, tied half way to the elbow with narrow bands of pink linen.

COTTON VOGUE

On of the sweetest of summer dresses is a cotton print coat frock of blue and pink on a white background, made like a redingote, with six pearl buttons fastening the double breasted front.

UTILITY FELTS

Packaway hats for travel come in lighter-than air felts now. A blue one has a narrow self banding the edge laced with its own felt to make an embroidery-looking edge.

BLUE OVERALLS

It is smart to be rural this summer. The very latest garden suit and beach togs are blue overalls, worn with smart little organdie or batiste short sleeved tuck-in shirts.

PIN DOTTED SILKS

Dotted Swiss silks they are called for the dots are no larger than those seen in the old favorite swiss. Little jacket suits made of these are quite as good looking as they are practical and are being bought by the smartest of debutantes and young matrons. With them are worn frilly lingerie blouses.

LAUNDRY HINTS

When ironing, keep an atomizer filled with water handy for the spraying of any dry spots that may need further dampening.

When it is inconvenient to press silk dresses on the wrong side, tissue paper may be used between the garment and the iron.

A flannel cloth dipped in sweet milk and rubbed on a pure soap will clean gloves and avoid the unpleasant odor of benzine.

When sending soiled garments to the dry cleaner, search for the bad spots that might escape his notice and then outline them in white thread. The thread will attract the cleaner's attention and it is easily removed afterwards.

PAPER WEIGHT

Quite appropriate for a paper weight is a large elephant made of shining brass.

PADDED TOP

Unusual tops for bridge tables are made of quilted black sateen sprigged with tiny colored flowers.

SHOES

New shoes will feel lots more comfortable if the insides are thoroughly dredged with talcum powder.

WHITE FLIES

White flies, which so frequently infest house plants, may be exterminated by immersing the top of a plant in a solution of water and whale-oil for about 10 minutes.

MAKE BOY'S ROOM PRACTICAL

Do not use dainty decoration; spare your boy feminine frills in furnishings; he'll do the rest. A sitting room effect is what many wise mothers plan for the boy's room and this is usually popular with the boy himself, as he likes to have a place where he can take his boy friends and the dog and not be reminded to "keep off that nice white bedspread, now!"

A good, comfortable, wide cot of metal, with mattress, covered with a practical dark couch cover, is greatly preferred by most boys to the regular bed. Schools and colleges always furnish their domitories with cots instead of beds.

Sister Susie will enjoy dainty flowered wall paper in her room, as will mother and even grandma, who likes dainty things. But spare the boy any effect of feminine frills.

Give him a good practical paper in tan, yellow or light brown tones, or gray if the room has a lot of sunlight; gray and green are cool colors, however, so avoid them in north or east rooms that receive less sunlight. An oatmeal or cartridge papers is always a good choice for the boy's room, or one of those excellent papers that so well imitate Japanese grass cloth.

Let the boy tack up as many pictures, pennants, posters and athletic trophies as his heart desires, and drape tennis nets and boxing gloves and baseball bats over the place.

Give him a dark, practical rug, a comfortable bed and chair, a bureau or chest of some sort to hold his things, and a good background of clean, cheerful wall paper, and let him carry out his ideas of artistic decorations, not yours.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Women in the United States are creating more than 600 patents a year.

Members of the Marvel Crosson Glider club of Los Angeles, Calif., an all-feminine group, will not even permit men to do mechanical work on the sailplanes.

Among the important subjects to be discussed at the National Conference of Labor Women, held in London, England, June 3, 4 and 5, was equal pay for equal work.

The oldest postmaster in the United States in point of continuous service is credited to Mrs. Ada B. Nafew, of Eatontown, N. J. She recently completed her 39th year in the postal service.

Miss Gladys Pyle, who is serving her second term as secretary of state of South Dakato, is a candidate for the republican nomination for governor at the May primaries. Four men already are in the race.

An average of 500 patents are issued to women in the United States each year by the patent office. One-half of these inventions pertain to domestic appliances and articles for personal wear or use.

VINEGAR A HANDY FLUID

Vinegar may not catch flies, but it is a handy help around the house, for all that. Vinegar will clean windows, and windows given a vinegar bath are not hard to polish. Vinegar and kerosene, equal parts, is all that need ever be used on woodwork. Vinegar to clean and kerosene to polish.

Vinegar and salt will polish brass and copper and will also clean the glass flower vases like magic. We all know about the pesky ring when our vases are washed in soap and water. Use vinegar and salt and it will varnish. A cloth moistened in vinegar will clean the enameled table and never leave a streak. There is nothing better than hot vinegar packs for sprains and bad bruises.

DRESSING TENT

A portable tent for dressing consists of a very large square canvas umbrella placed upright in the sands. From the sides hang four long strips of canvas that are attached by loops to the umbrella and form a perfect dressing room.

RECIPES

Lemon Snow Pudding: One tablespoon granulated gelatin, four tablespoons cold water, one cup boiling water, two-thirds cup sugar, four tablespoons lemon juice and two egg whites, stiffly beaten. Soak gelatin and cold water and stir five minutes. Add boiling water and stir until gelatin has dissolved. Add sugar and lemon juice. Mix well and allow to stiffen a little. Beat until frothy. Beat in egg whites and beat three minutes in cold place. Roughly pile in glass cups. Chill. Surround with custard sauce.

Delicious Dish: Mix thoroughly one pound of ground beef, one pound of ground pork, add two tablespoons of chili powder, three eggs, and salt to taste. Then add about a heaping tablespoon of flour, or enough to make the mixture stiff enough to mold with the hands in the shape of oysters. Place in a baking pan, into which one large can of tomatoes has been poured. Bake for one hour.

SIMPLICITY RULES IN THIS INFORMAL GROUP

The decorative chaise-longue invites relaxation.

By Elsie Drew Kennedy

This charming group for the boudoir or informal living room combines all the luxury and sophisticated allure of Louis XV furniture with a simplicity of arrangement that is typically modern.

The decorative scheme centers about the chaise-longue, on which the fatigued beauty of the French court spent many hours of relaxation.

Rest now is even more essential to beauty than in those leisurely times, so this chaise-longue offers an irresistable invitation for the busy modern woman to forget the press of her engagements and pause for a quiet, refreshing hour.

Around it in arrangement are grouped a convenient candlestand table and a practical as well as decorative screen.

The very color scheme—a mellow rose and dusty greenish blue with occasional touches of clear, light yellow—suggests repose through its soft nuances. The walls are painted a misty aquamarine with a border section below the decorative chair rail painted in a slightly darker shade of the same color.

The woodwork is painted a deep cream shade and the solid tone rug repeats the blue-green color in a deep, grayed tone.

In this rather neutral setting, the chaise-longue, upholstered in an antique shade of rose brocatelle, glows like a jewel. Of course walnut is the wood used for its gracefully curved frame and cabriole legs.

The three-fold screen, painted on canvas, in cream with a blue decoration, is typical of the period. Its design is elaborately romantic in the manner made popular by such court painters as Francois Boucher.

The lovely candlestand table of gleaming walnut with its unusual base is placed at the left arm of the chaise-longue to support the lamp and to hold books and such sundries as chocolates, flowers and a gay little cloisonne cigarette box.

The lamp itself illustrates how cleverly the twentieth century can be combined with the eighteenth. Its graceful column base that lifts the light just above eye-level is in perfect harmony with the other furnishings, and its drum-shaped shade is decorated with a delicate scroll and flower motif in rose and blue.

On the wall, in original grouping, hang three hazy French landscape prints in soft colors with yellow frames. This refreshing touch of yellow is repeated in two of the satin pillows that fill in the back of the chaise-longue. The third pillow is covered with rose satin in a shade that matches the upholstery.

SMOOT'S BRIDE IS FOURTH 'ALICE' IN IMMEDIATE FAMILY OF SUPERIOR

The bride (left) of Sen. Reed Smoot (inset) will be the fourth Alice in his family circle. The others are his granddaughter, Mrs. F. H. Chambers (center), his baby great granddaughter, and his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Harold Reed Smoot (right).

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—Alice seems to be a popular name in the household of Sen. Reed Smoot.

Before Senator Smoot's recent marriage, there were three Alices in his immediate family. Now they will welcome a fourth in his bride, who was Mrs. Alice Taylor Sheets of Salt Lake City.

"Alice the first" is the wife of Senator Smoot's son, Harold Reed Smoot. They live in Washington. Mrs. Smoot is a close friend of Mrs. Edward E. Gann, sister of Vice President Curtis.

The second Alice is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Smoot. Her elopement and marriage to Frederick Howard Chambers of Washington when she was 17 caused a stir in capital's society circles.

The senator's granddaughter gave up a brilliant debut to wed the man of her choice.

The third Alice is the baby daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chambers.

Senator Smoot's first wife died more than a year ago in Washington. His bride was the widow of a bishop of the Later Day Saints church.

Guiding Your Child

By Mrs. Agnes Lyne

Uphill Work

Unless from his cradle days a child has much better than the average training, many of the things which he must learn to do as he grows older will run counter to habits which he has already formed, as well as to his natural impulses.

It is an unusual child who has not some such common fault as dawdling, resistance to some part of his routine, a tendency to nag, quarrelsomeness, or a negative and stubborn attitude.

Nearly every child has at least a few serious faults. It is when we are working with these after they have become firmly established that we are likely to grow impatient and find the whole business of child-training uphill work.

Trying to break a child of any established fault is likely to be a slow process. It is well to remember that any progress we may hope to make depends first upon our sympathetic insight into the reasons for misbehavior and next, and perhaps most important, upon the friendly attitude which we have established with the child in the past.

Whenever we are trying to make a child conform in some necessary way we must make him feel not only the pressure of authority, but also our essential friendliness. To insist upon obedience without this element of good will is to multiply and intensify every difficulty.

A child of spirit will engage in a contest of wills whose outcome is doubtful. Every point that we do gain is won against the current of his nature.

Under such circumstances the best which we may hope to achieve is a certain degree of external conformity which has little in common with real education.

LONG DAY DRESSES NOT FOR SUB-DEBS

PARIS, July 13—(AP)—Short skirts again are jeune fille in the upper circles of French dressmaking.

Not for many a month has shortness of skirt had anything to do with length of life.

Daytime skirts as long as her mother's are considered poor style for the sub-debutante.

The debutante should also watch her hemline and not allow it to measure past the top of the calf for street and morning wear, says Paris.

Rules for the length of formal afternoon frocks and evening dresses are practically the same for debutante and matron.

POTS AND PANS WIN D. A. R. SCHOLARSHIP FOR GIRL

WASHINGTON, July 13—(AP)—Pots and pans, needles and thread, won for Mary Campbell of Washington state the first homemakers' scholarship offered by the national D. A. R.

She will enter the Washington state college of agriculture this fall.

She won in a competition with 400,000 when the D. A. R. officials here suddenly decided to endow a Homemakers' scholarship only a few days before the recent 4-H club national encampment in Washington.

SEVEN WOMEN IN CANADA HOUSE RACE

TORONTO, Ont., July 13—(AP)—Canada's general elections this year have brought out more women candidates than ever before.

Seven women have already been nominated for seats in the house of commons—two liberals, three farmers, one independent-conservative and one labor candidate.

More will likely be in the field when nominations close July 31. Three of them are single, four married.

In the last elections only two women sought seats.

AUTOMOBILE SAVED FROM PLUNGE INTO RIVER

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 13.—A slim guy rod about one inch thick tonight checked the wild plunge of an automobile operated by Jabez Bigelow of 95 Bayard lane, Princeton, N. J., and bearing his wife and two daughters, aged 11 and 8 years, from the Columbia avenue bridge into the Willimantic river 25 feet below, after the machine had been hit by an alleged drunken driver. The New Jersey car, a coach, came to rest with the motor hanging off the bridge and the top pinned against the rod. The occupants escaped injury except Mrs. Bigelow, who sustained a cut on the nose. The other car figuring in the accident, which occurred on the bridge about 10:30 o'clock, was an Oakland coupe, driven by Henry Skelly, 28, of South Coventry, who was arrested by Deputy Sheriff Harvey Collins of Columbia on a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor. The Oakland traveled some 20 feet after the collision and came to a stop on the bridge. The machines collided as they met on the span, Bigelow being headed from this city for his home and Kelly being on his way to this city with Joseph Clark, also of Coventry, as a passenger.

At police headquarters the injured woman was treated by Dr. Nathan Spector, who also examined Kelly to determine his condition. Kelly is to be arraigned in the Columbia town court Monday forenoon. Officers John Killourey and Joseph Lariviere of the police department were dispatched to the scene of the accident.

WEEK TO JULY 5 LEADS IN FATAL AUTO ACCIDENTS

More fatal accidents were reported to the state department of motor vehicles during the week of June 29 to July 5, than in any previous week this year, it has been announced by the department. Fourteen fatal accidents resulted in 15 deaths, the department reported, the figures being four greater in each instance than in the corresponding week in 1929.

The total number of reportable accidents also took a jump during the period, which included the holiday, 410 accidents of which 206 occurred within city limits, being reported. In the corresponding week of 1929, 479 accidents of which 250 were within city limits were reported.

NORWICH TOWN

MISS ALICE J. BUCKLEY GOES ABROAD FOR VACATION

A former Norwich Town young woman, Miss Alice J. Buckley, sailed from New York on the S. S. Lapland, Friday evening, for several weeks' stay abroad. Miss Buckley will spend some time in France, Switzerland, Holland, Germany and London. While in Germany she will visit Munich, Coblenz and will witness the Passion Play at Oberammergau. In Switzerland she is to visit Lucerne, and when in Holland Amsterdam will be the objective. Miss Buckley, who quite recently visited her former home at Norwich Town, expects to return to New York Aug. 16. Although she held a very fine position on Ellis Island for a number of years, for the past few years Miss Buckley has been with the National Poster Art Alliance corporation, her office being at 65-67 East 56th street, New York. This corporation deals with outdoor advertising, requiring much travel on Miss Buckley's part.

Francis Wright, of Washington street, was a guest over the week-end of Mrs. Mary Dunderdale, of Harland road, who with members of her family are passing several weeks in a cottage at Misquamicut, R. I. He was accompanied by his aunt, Miss Mary Sullivan, who motored to the beach from Norwich.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Welmont, from Ware, Mass., moved recently to the lower apartment of Mrs. William H. Geer's house, pleasantly situated on Washington circle. Mr. Welmont is boss weaver at the Falls mill.

Deputy Commissioner Stivers Speaks

At the meeting Friday night of the John Mason troop 2, Boy Scouts, connected with the Methodist Episcopal church, Deputy Scout Commissioner James H. Stivers of the New London council gave a talk. To the accompaniment of crashing thunder, Mr. Stivers told the 16 Scouts many interesting facts about the semaphore signal code and how to easily fix the letters in their minds. Mr. Stivers has been in active scout work for 17 years. Just as he began to talk the lights went out, but he continued to illustrate his talk in the dim remaining daylight. At the close of the talk there was no doubt that his promise of teaching 18 letters in seven minutes had been carried out. Under the direction of Senior Patrol Leader Donald Olsen the boys gave Mr. Stivers a hearty Boy Scout cheer. The scoutmaster, Rev. George Warren Potter, filled in the game period by telling the boys in the darkness a true ghost story. The meeting closed with the Scout Oath, benediction and the playing of Taps by Bugler Edward Jordan. Just as the meeting closed the lights came on.

Cubs Hike to Howe Farm

Eleven Wolf Cubs belonging to the pack connected with the Methodist church who had earned a hike by faithful attendance at the June meetings, took a trip to Edward Howe's farm, Saturday morning. The Cubs were accompanied by four Boy Scouts, Assistant Cub Masters Edward Jordan, Edward Gallagher, Frederick Ross and Scout Donald Waterman and by Scribe Edward Eccleston. The hike followed the regular meeting of the cubs in the mornings. The cubs on arriving at the farm assisted the scouts in making a camp fire where they roasted their frankfurts. Beside the hot dogs the hikers had rolls with honey, and cup cakes.

After lunch, races were run off. John Gibbs was winner in the cub races, while Edward Gallagher won in the scout races. As the boys were leaving the farm they gave Mr. Howe a Boy Scout cheer and a Wolf Cub cheer for his hospitality. The hike was in charge of the cubmaster, Rev. Mr. Potter.

STATE LETS CONTRACT FOR ROAD FROM NORWICH TO JEWETT CITY

Low bidders on the 15 new highway construction and reconstruction jobs, upon which the Connecticut highway department received sealed proposals on July 7, have been announced by Commissioner John A. Macdonald.

The largest projects in this group are the paving of about 5 1-2 miles of concrete between Manchester and Rockville, and the laying of about five miles of concrete in the town of Lisbon between Norwich and Putnam. New construction in the towns of Middlebury and Woodbury and the completing of approaches for the new 675-foot bridge over the Housatonic river at Cornwall are also important items in this group of projects.

The awards to low bidders as announced include the following:

Town of Lisbon—About 25,583 feet of concrete on Route No. 12, M. A. Gammino Construction Co., $253,553.90.

Towns of Manchester and Vernon—About 29,100 feet of concrete on the Manchester-Rockville road, M. A. Gammino Construction Co., $167,403.75.

Town of Eastford—About 8,510 feet of waterbound macadam on the North Ashford-Kenyonville road, Thompson Construction Co., $43,845.95.

Towns of East Haddam and Haddam—A three-span 215-foot encased girder bridge over Salmon river on the Haddam Neck-East Haddam road, F. Arrigoni, $70,680.90.

The highway contract in Lisbon, which is referred to previously, covers the road from Norwich to Jewett City on the so-called river road. The contract begins at the city line on Boswell avenue, just beyond St. Joseph's cemetery, and runs to the Sylvandale section of the town of Lisbon, where it meets the present work connected with the viaduct and bridge into Jewett City.

At a number of points in the present road where there are curves there will be cuts into banks or other changes to improve the sight line, but two principal changes from the present highway location will be as the road leaves Norwich avenue in Taftville to meet the bridge at the J. B. Martin Co. velvet mill and as the road leaves the other side of the bridge.

The double trolley track, now in Boswell avenue and running up to Norwich avenue in Taftville, will be replaced by a single track which will be in the center line of the highway.

As the new layout leaves Norwich avenue it passes behind the several buildings on the right of the present road so that it goes through the grand stand on the Martin baseball field to come to the bridge. On the other side of the bridge the new layout deserts the present highway, running off to its right and does not rejoin the present road till it reaches the top of tunnel hill, where it again leaves the present road as the course carries it closer to the railroad and across the low ground to meet the present highway a considerable distance farther on. This cuts out the curve to the north of tunnel hill.

HENS AT STORRS ARE BEHIND LAST YEAR'S TOTAL

The total production for all the 1,000 birds under competition in the 36th week of the Storrs' laying contest was 4,291 eggs or a yield of 61.3 per cent.

This score represents a lay of 208 eggs more than the corresponding week last year. Production to date has been pushed to 157,257 eggs as compared with 159,910 for the same period a year ago.

During the week Peetoocee Poultry Plant's pen of White Leghorns from Telford, Pa., climbed into top position with a lay of 61 eggs. Another pen of Leghorns entered by Alfred J. O'Donovan of Katonah, New York, finished the week with 60 eggs.

Going further north we find that Edward N. Larrabee's Rhode Island Reds from Petersboro, N. H., holds third place with 59 eggs. Three pens of different varieties namely, Toivonen's Leghorns from Girard, Pa., Homestead Farm's Reds from Newtown, Conn., and R. C. Cobb's Barred Rocks from Littleton, Mass., all turned in tally sheets with 58 marks each for the week.

All the leading pens in the principal varieties have been clinging persistently to their honor positions with the exception of two pens in the Rhode Island Red section. Homestead Farms from Newtown, Conn., that have been plugging along steadily since the first of November have finally taken fourth place thus replacing D. Otis Day of Westford, Mass.

The leading pens to date of the principal varieties are as follows:

White Wyandottes—The Locusts, West Cornwall, Conn., 1796. Jack Wrennall, Barton, Nr. Preston, Eng., 1616.

Barred Rocks—R. C. Cobb, Littleton, Mass., 1899. R. Walter Bishop, Guilford, Conn., 1773. Pratt Experiment Farm, Morton, Pa., 1761.

White Rocks—E. H. Rucker, Ottumwa., 1692. Adam F. Polti, Hartford, Wis., 1549. Kalerok Farm, Westford, Mass., 1468.

Rhode Island Reds—Edw. N. Larrabee, Peterboro, N. H., 1988. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 1951. F. S. Chapin, Longmeadow, Mass., 1906. Homestead Farms, Newtown, Conn., 1893.

White Leghorns—Toivonen Leghorn Farm, Girard, Pa., 2171. Steelman Poultry Farms, Lansdale, Pa., 1928. Hanson's Leghorn Farm, Corvallis, Ore., 1884. Hollywood's P. Farm, Woodinville, Wash., 1875. Bournedale Farm, Millertown, N. Y., 1858.

BEEKEEPERS OF STATE MET AT BANTAM APIARY

The Connecticut beekeepers held their annual field day Saturday with a large gathering from all parts of the state, meeting at the home of Eugene G. Converse in the borough of Bantam in Litchfield county. Many pictures were taken of the group present and of hives of working bees and of frames of brood, bees and honey, at the apiary of Mr. Converse while the beekeepers were examining the apiary and equipment.

In addressing the meeting the president, T. E. Babcock of Norwich, said that we are all meeting here as beekeepers on the same plane and spoke of the greater interest taken in apiculture and hoped this meeting in the western part of the state would stimulate those beekeepers not now members of the association to join it. There is a reciprocal benefit both to the association and the beekeeper who joins and a meeting so well attended must have a good result.

Mr. Converse, the host, welcomed all present and said that he had for a long time hoped that he might be able to entertain his fellows of the same business as he carries on. Mr. Converse proved a very entertaining and hospitable host.

After the trip to Mr. Converse's apiary the company assembled on the shores of beautiful Bantam lake for their basket lunch. The program continued with several speakers who responded with five minute talks on honey, the honey flower, sweet clover and other nectar bearing plants, fruit growing and generally on apiculture, horticulture and agriculture as one intertwines with the other. Among those were A. W. Yates of Hartford, E. G. Converse, Litchfield; H. W. Coley, Fairfield; A. A. Adt, Cheshire, and Rev. S. A. Icick, and Allen Latham, Norwich, S. E. Bunnell, Winsted; A. E. Crandall of Storrs, Mr. Atherton, county agent for Litchfield county, and Mr. Morris of Bantam.

Community songs, solos and duets were sung to the great enjoyment of all present, lead by Mrs. Muttart and Mrs. Richards of Norwich. Several humorous readings were given by Rev. Hugh Shields of Ridgefield. All returned home feeling pleased with the day of recreation.

MAINTAINING WATCH HERE FOR DESTRUCTIVE INSECTS

The furore raised by the appearance of the Japanese beetle in Connecticut has made people in this section alert to discover its first appearance around here, as well as to spot the Mexican bean beetle and European corn borer, with the result that about three dozen specimens have been brought to the county farm bureau office in this city for identification, but so far none of the three species named have been found.

The farm bureau gives out the following description of each of the beetles to assist in maintaining the watch against them:

The Japanese beetle in the adult stage varies from five-sixteenths to seven-sixteenths of an inch in length and from three-sixteenths to nine-thirty-seconds of an inch in width. The upper surface of head, thorax, abdomen and legs are a bright and shiny metallic green with wing covers duller and coppery-brown. The wing covers do not project to the end of the abdomen. The abdomen shows five lateral spots on each side and two posterior spots composed of white hairs. The under surface generally, including legs, is dark metallic green and the body bears short gray hairs. It attacks about 200 different kinds of plants including practically all of the economic crops in this area.

The European corn borer has a larstage is about one-fourth of an inch longer than broad and has a smooth, hard shell characteristic to the lady beetles to which family it belongs. In color it is pale brown or buff and each wing cover bears eight black dots, which vary in size and shape and different specimens. In some specimens the spots are so large that they almost run together.

The European corn borer hwas a larva an inch or less in length, white, gray or pink in color, marked with very small black dots, with the naked eye one might call a fine stripe. Its head is of a mahogany color and on the second segement there is a dark colored ring, there is also a sizable dark spot on the last segement.

Many are confusing the common stalk borer for the European corn borer. This insect is not seriously injurious and is commonly found on many garden crops, flowers, and even weeds.

When it is full grown it is one and a half inches long and distinctly striped, length wise, one of the strips extending forward up on the side of the head. There is also a dark girdle around the front half of the body. This is the common stalk borer and not the European corn borer.

VERSAILLES SUNSHINE CLASS BANQUET AND ENTERTAINMENT

Wednesday evening, at the home of Mrs. George W. Cole, in Versailles, the Sunshine class of the Methodist Episcopal church, held a banquet and entertainment which marked the close of the semi-annual class contest.

The dining room was prettily decorated with flowers and the national colors, and the following menu was served by those on the losing side, Mrs. George W. Cole, chairman: Fruit cup, chowder, roast lamb, peas, mashed potatoes, cold slaw, pickled beets, rolls, pineapple salad, cake, wafers, ice cream and coffee.

Two playlets, "Madam's Hat Shoppe" and "Days Long Gone By," furnished by those on the winning side. Mrs. John Hargreaves, chairman, proved very novel and most entertaining. Those taking part in the entertainment showed considerable talent.

Mrs. Wm. G. Frohmander, of Knoxville, Tenn., a former member, and Mrs. J. Manley Shaw, were guests of the evening.

MENTAL HYGIENE INSTITUTE IS IN ITS THIRD WEEK

The mental hygiene institute being held at Connecticut college at New London closed its second week of study Saturday. A trip was made in the afternoon to Middletown to visit Long Lane farm and the state hospital for the insane.

Last week the students visited the state farm for women at Niantic and next week Saturday they will go to the Norwich State hospital and to the Mansfield State Training school and hospital.

Due to the increased enthusiasm in the work going on, the institute registration has increased to about 100 as compared with 67 who were registered at the opening. Of the original 67 students, 24 are from New London, one from New York, one from Rhode Island and the rest from the following towns and cities in Connecticut: Bloomfield, Bridgeport, Derby, East Haddam, East Hampton, Forestville, Groton, Hartford, Lebanon, Middletown, New Britain, New London, Niantic, Norwich, North Canton, Plainville, Portland, Waterbury, Waterford, West Haven, West Hartford, Windsor, Winsted.

Men prominent in the mental hygiene movement have been obtained to take charge of the lectures. Dr. James L. McCartney, director of the institute, spoke Friday on the laws governing Mental Hygiene Problems and Resources for Meeting Them.

Dr. Roy L. Leak, superintendent of Connecticut State hospital, Middletown, discussed the Methods of Committing a Patient to an Institution.

Robert C. Deming, supervisor of adult education, state board of education, spoke on The Immigrant and Mental Hygiene problems there concerned.

Saturday morning Hester B. Crutcher, executive secretary, Connecticut Society for Mental Hygiene, spoke on the Theory and Practice of Social Work, and Kenneth L. Messenger, commissioner child welfare, Hartford, spoke on the subject of Dependent Children.

COURT ORDERS REMOVAL OF CLAIMED SPITE FENCE

In an injunction and damage suit brought for $15,000 which came before Judge Allyn L. Brown in chambers here Saturday, Judge Brown granted Jane V. Plumstead of Old Lyme, an injunction against Fred B. and Minnie A. Greene, husband and wife, also of Old Lyme, which carried the court's order for the Greenes to remove a fence and two outbuildings from their property and they are also not allowed to erect a building within 50 feet of the boundary line.

Miss Plumstead conducts "Jane's Waffle Shoppe" at Old Lyme and in the suit she has brought against the Greenes she alleges that they have prepared to erect an unnecessary and unsightly fence with malicious intent to annoy her and injure her in the use of her property. There are also other claims of acts done to injure the plaintiff's property and business.

CONTINUANCE IS GRANTED IN LEDOUX LIQUOR CASE

John LeDoux of this city was tried before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson in his office in the Thayer building Saturday morning after the accused had previously given himself up. He has been sought by the federal men since July 2 after the raids on the "key" club at 90 Water street and the beer-making plant in the rear of 204 West Main street, alleged to be owned by him and his brother, Ernest. His case was continued to July 23 and he was released under bonds of $1,000, which were furnished.

John's brother, who was charged with violation of the national prohibition act relative to the dispensation of liquor, had his case dropped Saturday morning. He was ordered released by Commissioner Mathewson.

In the raid the federal men seized 220 cases of home brew beer at both places and also a Dodge truck, which was used by the two men in their alleged wholesale business.

SCOUTING FOR JAPANESE BEETLE IN NEW LONDON

Field scouts of the United States department of agriculture, plant quarantine and control administration, in co-operation with the appropriate authorities of Connecticut, began scouting operations for the Japanese beetle in New London Saturday. A crew of a foreman and three scouts has been assigned by the department of agriculture to cover the area in and about that locality.

These men examine the preferred food plants of the beetle or other foliage on which the adult beetles are likely to be found. To do this it is necessary to enter the yards of residences and other premises in which plants may be found. The scouts are in uniform and are furnished with identification cards which will be exhibited upon request. The scouts will not molest any plants or property on the premises and will make their survey with as little inconvenience to the property owner as possible.

PROCESS MAY DOUBLE THE PRODUCTION OF GASOLINE

Standard Oil Co. of N. J. and 16 Associated Companies Are to Produce Hydrogen For the New Process—They Propose to Use the Hydrogen Contained In Natural Gas Or In Gas Manufactured At the Refinery—Serious Obstacles Have Been Overcome By Scientists and Technologists.

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—The Standard Oil Company of New Jersey and 16 companies associated with it in the use of a process by which gasoline production can be doubled will produce the hydrogen for the process in their own refineries as a by-product, it was announced today.

Frank A. Howard, vice-president of the Standard Oil of New Jersey, said the hydrogen would be taken from coal gas, natural gas or refinery gas, depending on which by-product is most available at the individual refinery. In the past commercial hydrogen has been almost prohibitively expensive.

The process by which the production of approximately twice the amount of gasoline from a given amount of raw oil is to be accomplished was explained today by Edward F. Chandler, New York engineer and chemical expert. It begins on crude oil, he said, where the present "cracking" process stops.

"By hydrogenation it is possible," Chandler said, "actually to manufacture gasoline from heavy oils which cannot be handled by the cracking process.

"Gasoline consists of carbon and hydrogen. In the heavy oils there is not sufficient hydrogen, therefore in order to manufacture motor gasoline from these oils, it is necessary to add hydrogen.

"This is not as simple as it may seem. Chemists and engineers have been working on the problem for years During the last 15 years many patents have been issued to inventors in this field. Doubtless the most intensive worker in this line is Dr. F. Bergious, the German chemist. His process was originally designed for obtaining oil from coal.

"In experimenting he found that if a mixture of coal and oils was subjected to high pressure and high temperature while confined in an atmosphere of hydrogen gas, most of the coal was converted into oil. He then directed his attention to the production of motor gasoline from heavy petroleum oil by his hydrogenation method.

"He found that when oil in the liquid state was heated to a temperature of from 850 to 1,000 degrees Fahrenheit, under a pressure of from 100 to 280 times that of the atmosphere, in the presence of hydrogen, very little coke and gas was formed, and a large yield of light oil was obtained.

"Work on this process, under the direction of Dr. Bergius and aided by the scientists and technologists of the German I. G. Farbenindustrie, has been in progress for a number of years and many features developed have not yet been made public. Serious obstacles have been met and overcome.

"It has been found that the presence of a 'catalyzer' aids in causing the hydrogen to join with the carbon present in the oil. A catalyzer is a substance capable of causing a chemical reaction to take place more readily merely by its presence. There is no change in the catalyzer and it is used over and over again. Metallic nickle, for instance, is well known as a hydrogenation catalyst.

"The ultimate success of the hydrogenation process depends upon finding a source of cheap hydrogen. Dr. Bergius proposes to use the hydrogen contained in natural gas or in gas manufactured at the refinery. There is considerable work also being done in low pressure hydrogenation, and owing to the physical difficulties encountered when employing very high temperatures and high pressures, this line of development opens up some very interesting possibilities."

MILLIONAIRE SHOT DEAD IN COURT ROOM IN LOS ANGELES

LOS ANGELES, July 14.—(AP)—Angered by the sight of the man for whom he blamed loss of his fortune Frank D. Keaton, real estate dealer, today shot and killed Motley H. Flint, millionaire, in the Los Angeles county hall of justice.

Keaton fired three shots as Flint, brother of the late United States Senator Frank P. Flint, left the witness stand in a $250,000 damage suit.

"This fellow ruined me. He ruined me," exclaimed the slayer. He threw the weapon at his victim and surrendered.

Flint, financial advisor to motion picture leaders and former Los Angeles postmaster, was one of 17 prominent men recently acquitted of usury conspiracy charges in connection with the loss of millions of dollars in the collapse of the Julian Petroleum company. He was awaiting trial on a charge of violating the state corporate securities act.

Keaton said a sudden rage, caused by the loss of savings entrusted to Flint, caused him to shoot.

"I put all my money in First National bank stock and it went down a hundred points," he explained. "I had 4,000 shares. I didn't mean to kill him. I came down town looking for a job. I heard of this case. I came to the court room and sat down. Just when I saw him coming through the gate in the railing, something hit me all at once and I shot him.

"I've had that gun in my trunk for 35 years. Just as he came in front of me, I decided to shoot. I hadn't seen him for seven or eight years." He said he had known Flint 18 years.

WIND TOO HEAVY FOR AMERICA'S CUP YACHTS

NEWPORT, R. I., July 14.—(AP)—There was a breeze of wind today and the candidates for the defense of America's cup against Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock V found themselves unable to race.

The two heavy weather boats, Yankee and Whirlwind, were paired but the match ended shortly after the start when Whirlwind lost the headboard of her mainsail. Yankee, sailed by Charles Francis Adams, secretary of the navy, did not seem to mind the bad going, but when Whirlwind withdrew there was no purpose in continuing the match and the boats returned to their moorings in Brenton's cove. Whirlwind was skippered by Landon K. Thorne.

BANK'S ARMORED CAR HELD UP IN BROOKLYN

NEW YORK, July 14.—(AP)—Forcing an armored truck to the curb at a crowded intersection in downtown Brooklyn, four men in a large touring car held up the messenger and driver today and escaped with $18,000 in cash and $5,000 in checks.

David Farrell, the driver, and Miller Foulke had obtained the money from a Sheffield Farms company branch and were taking it to the Kings County Trust company when the robbery occurred.

NINTH GANG SLAYING IN DETROIT IN TEN DAYS

DETROIT, July 14.—(AP)—Henry Topancey, 30, alleged member of the Moceri-Licavoli gang of hoodlums, was shot and killed and Louis Salvio, 36, also believed by police to be a member of the gang, was probably fatally wounded about 5 p. m. today in an outbreak of gang warfare.

Topancey was the ninth gangster slain here in ten days

Salvio and Topancey were shot by three men who drove up while they were sitting in an automobile near the Belle Isle bridge. Salvio was taken to receiving hospital where examination showed he was shot in the right kidney and abdomen. He refused to name the assailants.

Topancey has a long police record here. He was arrested last winter after the shooting of Inspector Henry J. Garvin, then head of the police crime and bomb squad Police were unable to connect him with the wounding of Inspector Garvin, and he was released.

The Moceri-Licavoli gangsters are known as rum runners and beer racketeers.

CHANGES IN EXECUTIVES OF THE BRISTOL COMPANY

WATERBURY, July 14.—(AP)—Three nephews of the late W. H. Bristol were elected to executive positions at a special meeting of the board of directors held here today to name a successor to the late president of the Bristol company. Howard H. Bristol, former vice president, was elected president and Carlton W. Bristol, was named to succeed him. H. L. Griggs was elected second vice president.

Other changes in the executive posts include the naming of S. R. Bristol, secretary and treasurer, and Harris Whittemore, Jr., assistant treasurer. Mr. Whittemore has been treasurer, but relinquished the position, while S. R. Bristol has been secretary.

POPE WARNS UNITED STATES TO BEWARE OF BOLSHEVISM

VATICAN CITY, July 14.—(AP)—The pope today solemnly warned the United States to "beware lest bolshevism spread in America at this moment of financial depression and unemployment."

The warning was conveyed during a private audience to Monsignor James H. Ryan, rector of the National Catholic university, Washington, D. C.

Evidencing dislike for bolshevism, and at the same time showing remarkable knowledge of conditions in the United States the pope said, "This is just the ripe time for the spread of bolshevism. The people of the United States do not realize how far it has spread already nor completely what its spread means."

PLANE IN ATTEMPT AT RECORD FLIGHT WAS OVERLOADED

SYDNEY, Australia, July 14—(AP)—An admission that the plane used by Hook and Matthews in their attempted record flight from England to Australia was overloaded is contained in a letter received by the mother of Eric Hook, dated London, June 2.

The Australian airman, who is now lying injured and possibly dead in the Burmese Jungle, then wrote:

"We will carry sufficient petrol for 10 hours flying, and this sadly overloads our little bus."

His find, which was of Spanish gold pieces probably buried long before the advent of the Mexican republic, was valued at $50,000.

Six Lives Lost When Little Sloop Capsized

Lone Survivor Tells Story of Tragedy Off the Coast of Massachusetts.

BOSTON, July 14.—(AP)—Five young men and a girl sank to death, in the bitter cold wind-tossed brine of the Atlantic last night and early today, after they had clung for hours to a little sloop that had capsized in a sudden squall a few miles off Scituate.

One lone survivor, Baden Garceau, of Scituate and Boston, clung to the tumbling wreck for hours after his mates had disappeared and was saved by the mackerel seiner St. Rita, which brought him and the body of the girl to Boston.

A tentative list of the dead, provided by the survivor, acquaintances and relatives, includes:

Willis Earle, 27, Kansas City; Walter Kay Labire, 28, Youngstown, Ohio; John Blower, 25, Pittsburgh, Pa.; Betty Munsell, 19, Watertown, Mass.; David Gierasch, 27, Concord, Mass.; Charles Hall, 23, Greenbush and Cambridge, owner and skipper of the knockabout Nomad.

The closing hours of the tragedy were enacted after G. Abeel Hall and John Hall, father and brother of Charles, pressed a coast guard boat into a search for the craft and later had obtained the services of three coast guard destroyers and two seaplanes.

After Garceau had been landed at Boston by Frank Favalora, captain of the St. Rita, he went with his father, Albert Garceau, a Boston lawyer, to the office of the harbor master, where he told his story.

"We started out in Hall's sloop from Scituate at 5 o'clock, yesterday," he said. "Two others who had planned to go with us found they could not get away.

"On the way to the pier we met Gierasch and the girl and invited them to go along. The boat was an 18-foot knockabout. We went out five miles and decided to return.

"We got back about three miles when a squall came up and capsized us. The mainsail was up and the sheet tied.

Five of the party climbed onto the keel and two of us into the rigging. Those in the rigging were Hall and myself. Gierasch became panic-stricken. He screamed and threw the others of the party into a panic.

"Gierasch went overboard twice and I hauled him back each time. Gierasch went over a third time and as he did so he grabbed Blower by the leg. I then went overboard and rescued Blower but Gierasch was swept away and drowned.

"The waves then washed Blower off and he was lost. The next to go was Earle, who was clinging for his life to the keel. Labire clung on until midnight when he was forced by the rushing water to relinquish his hold and was drowned.

"During this period of time we saw the New York boat go by and a coast guard boat about half a mile away.

"Following the disappearance of Labire, there remained only Hall, the girl and myself. The girl was calm and clung with Hall to the keel while I stayed in the rigging. Eventually, the girl collapsed and was swept off the keel but Hall saved her. Later the girl and Hall were forced off the keel and I went to the rescue of both.

"Finally, Hall lost his hold and disappeared.

"At about 6:30 today, the girl, despite her valiant efforts to cling on until a vessel should come to our succor, gave up the fight and floated away from the bobbing craft."

ALONE IN WOODS, PINNED BENEATH PLANE WRECKAGE

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 14.—(AP)—Frank Goldsborough, daring 19-year-old aviator who recently established a junior trans-continental record, lay pinned in the wreckage of his airplane somewhere in the woods west of here tonight while a posse was trying to find him.

A large group of men with a doctor and a nurse scoured through the woods in search of the plane with Donald Mocklei, Goldsborough's companion, attempting to retrace his steps through the forest. Mocklei was with Goldsborough when the plane struck a tree top while flying in a fog. Part of the plane stayed in the tree while Goldsborough was pinned in the cockpit as it fell to the ground.

After trying to extricate Goldsborough, who was still alive, Mocklei set out for Bennington. He wandered for five hours before finding aid.

Senator Nye Annoyed RuthHannaM'Cormick

By Efforts to Link Her Name With Republican Factions In Cook County.

CHICAGO, July 14—(AP)—Ruth Hanna McCormick, the first woman ever to be nominated to the United States senate, told the senate campaign funds investigation committee today that if "The patronage machine system" were removed from senatorial primaries, one of the main causes of large campaign expenses would be removed.

Her comment was part of a 7,000 word prepared statement which she read at the opening of the inquiry into her expenditures in defeating Senator Charles S. Deneen for the republican nomination last April.

Defending the expenditures of $262,572 of her own money and $67,314 by her friends in her behalf, Mrs. McCormick interpolated the observation that she was "willing to believe" that her opponent's campaign cost twice as much.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the committee, asked Mrs. McCormick if she believed that charge could be substantiated by evidence, and she replied that "it will be substantiated if your inquiry reaches down into the precinct organizations." At the request of the senator, she gave him the names of Roy O. West, republican national committeeman; Jacob Allen and Thomas Healey, Deneen campaign leaders, as the men who could tell most about the senator's race, and was assured they would be heard by the committee.

Mrs. McCormick appeared annoyed by Senator Nye's persistent effort to link her name with various other republican factions in Chicago and Cook county and emphatically told the senator she had testified under oath that she had no alliances with any group or organization.

Mrs. McCormick read from an extended statement which she had prepared showing that aside from the $252,500 she spent from her own funds, the only additional money spent in her behalf to her knowledge was $67,200 various friends and relatives had contributed to three organizations of volunteers who worked in her behalf.

The senatorial nominee compared her campaign's expense with the expenses of the last presidential campaign, and cited figures by comparison in three-fourths of the states. She said her campaign was $557,000 less costly than the presidential campaign in Illinois.

During her testimony, Mrs. McCormick asked if she would be allowed the privilege of cross-examining the numerous witnesses and was informed she would be permitted to do so.

Aside from Mrs. McCormick, who was before the committee virtually the entire day, the only witnesses heard were A. D. Lasker, millionaire Chicago advertising man, and three of Mrs. McCormick's down state workers. Mr. Lasker testified the only contribution he had made to the senatorial campaign was a check for $2,000.

This sum was included in the $67,000.

SENATORS IN AGREEMENT ON LONDON NAVAL TREATY

Republican Leaders Are In Accord On a Modification of the Norris Resolution—Agreement Deletes Preamble Calling Attention to the Refusal of President Hoover to Give the Senate All the Notes Exchanged Between the Powers—Modified Reservation Was Declared Acceptable to Its Author and Friends of the Pact—Advocates of Treaty Are Confident of Early Ratification.

(By Francis M. Stephenson.)

WASHINGTON, July 14—(AP)—An agreement seemed assured tonight among the London treaty advocates on the Norris reservation and leaders looked confidently to early ratification of the naval limitations agreement as a result.

Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, author of the reservation, said he was willing to strike from his resolution the preambles reciting the failure of President Hoover to give the senate all of the notes and data relating to the London conference.

His reservation provides that the United States shall not be bound by any secret agreements or understandings which may exist outside the actual terms of the treaty.

Inasmuch as President Hoover and Senators Reed, republican, Pennsylvania and Robinson, democrat, Arkansas, of the delegation to London, had asserted no secret understandings were involved in the treaty, some administration forces were opposing the reservation.

Hoover, after a round of conferences today participated in by Chairman Borah of the foreign relations committee, Senators Reed and Robinson and Watson of Indiana, and McNary, of Oregon, the republican leaders, a general understanding was reached tonight on the modified Norris resolution.

Senator Norris accepted the elimination of the preambles and also modified his reservation to recognize the exchange of notes recently among the powers on replacements of cruisers.

Meanwhile President Hoover was busy lining up a quorum. Four republican senators who have not hitherto been in attendance at the special session reached the chamber today. They were:

Senators Gould, Maine; Pine, Oklahoma; ean, New Jersey and Greene, Vermont, all republicans and all listed as advocates for the pact.

In addition to 52 who answered the opening roll call, the following later appeared; Pine, Greene, Walsh of Massachusetts, Dale, Vermont; Hatfield, West Virginia and Copeland, New York.

Despite a determined fight against the pact by forces under the leadership of Senators Johnson, of California and Moses, of New Hampshire, both republicans, treaty proponents were confident tonight of early ratification, probably next week.

Senator Robinson of Arkansas delivered his address for the pact today and tomorrow the other senatorial delegate to London, Senator Reed will speak. From then on the treaty proponents intend to leave the debate to the opposition, content they have the votes for ratification.

Police here said Cole implicated Edward Walden, of Bridgeport, Conn., in connection with the store robbery. Walden was a senior at the university at the time. A warrant was issued for the latter and a deputy sheriff left today for Attleboro, where he is employed, to return him here to face charges.

Cole was charged with taking $400 in goods and $200 in cash from the store.

Mitchell, according to officials, confessed he struck Miss Lillian I. MacDonald, 20, a payroll clerk in the stationery concert which empoyed both, with a grate shaker after she had repulsed his advances and then burned the body in the furnace. Joseph P. Connellan, Mitchell's counsel said his client did not "remember" making such a confession.

The stepfather choked and struck her, the officer was told, and the girl went into the house, got a pistol and returning, began firing at random. One shot hit Sears in the chest and he died in a few minutes. The girl's mother and a 10-year-old halfbrother witnessed the tragedy.

CONN. CO. ASKED TO COVER RAILS IN MAIN STREET

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 14 — The Connecticut Co. will be requested to properly cover its abandoned trolley rails on Main street immediately in accordance with a resolution introduced by Alderman William E. Webber and adopted at the July meeting of the board of alderman tonight. The rails in question are embedded in the block paving of the business district of Main street and are all that remain of the seven-mile line formerly conducted to South Coventry. It was pointed out that the rails had remained a source of danger and inconvenience since the line was abandoned some years ago.

The council voted the construction of a concrete sidewalk and gutter and fence in the city yard on upper Main street, formerly the carbarn of the Connecticut Co. By resolution, the assessments made by the committee for sewers installed on Mayo, Lafayette, Willowbrook and Wilson streets were ratified and made payable Sept 2. Charles and Davis streets were ordered accepted as city thoroughfares.

TAXPAYERS VOTE TO STAND PAT ON AUDIT QUESTION

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 14—A definite policy to stand-pat on the present status of an audit of the town books and to endorse its faith in the present committee selected May 1 to select the auditors was adopted at a meeting of the Taxpayer's Protective association held in the town hall tonight with an attendance of about 150. The meeting was held in preparation for the special town meeting which will take place next Friday evening and which will be the third such meeting to take up the matter of an audit.

The association was also asked tonight to vote for Justice George E. Hinman as moderator of the forthcoming meeting. Dr. George E. Wilcox president of the association, presided at tonight's meeting and dissected the warning of the forthcoming town meeting in an effort to disclose "infinite cunning in its wording." Dr. Wilcox, who is also a member of the committee named May 1 to select the auditors, charged that, at that meeting, the selectmen were not only authorized but instructed to sign the contract to be drawn up between the committee and the auditors, which public duty they have openly neglected to perform. He stated that the committee had considered the offers of nine auditors and selected on a ballot that of Walter A. Musgrave in the belief that he was best equipped to do the work. The contract was presented for signature to First Selectman W. A. Buck about May 10 and, some nine days later, an opinion on it was published by Town Counsel Arthur T. Kelly. The contract has never been signed and is now in the town safe. The audit, President Wilcox said, was to cover a period of ten years.

The matter of taking legal proceedings to force the selectmen to sign the contract was considered at the time but it was learned that the proceedings could not be completed in time to show the condition of the books before the town elections next fall. In tearing apart the warning for next Friday night's meeting the president of the T. P. A. pointed out that the second clause called for an examination of the financial condition of the town as against more specific wording of a thorough audit and examination of all town books as provided in the resolutions adopted May 1.

The new warning leaves the power of signing the contract entirely with the selectmen, according to the speaker in that it provides that a proposed new committee merely select the auditor. The chairman said that the committee, of which he is a member, and which includes in its membership Attorney William A. Arnold and Henry A. Buckley, had been subjected to many scurrilous remarks and several letters of light nature as well as undesirable publicity because of his efforts to carry out the wishes of the taxpayers of the town. Chairman Wilcox concluded with a statement that he was not seeking any compensation or political honor for his efforts to show the true condition of the town's books and finances. Attorney Arnold arose to say that unfavorable rumors of the town's bad condition spread over a period of at least six years and that the citizens should therefore consider the importance of the words, thorough audit, as was adopted in a resolution at the last special town meeting. He stated that the local banks refused to loan the town a single penny with the result that money must be borrowed at a higher interest rate out of town. He charged the failure to levy an adequate tax rate from year to year as being responsible for much of this condition.

Remarks were also made by Henry A. Buckley third member of the committee, and A. L. Gelinas pleaded for a large turnout next Friday night. In reply to a question by Arthur E. Morrill, Chairman Wilcox said that in due time the T. P. A. would meet to propose or endorse the candidates for the town election in the fall and that a strong effort would be made to replace those politicians who have attempted to thwart the work of the association, especially as regards the town audit.

Signs of Prosperity

Apparently the period of business depression has not struck Colchester according to statements made by a number of local merchants. In addition to two chain grocery stores here, there are twelve independent grocery establishments nearly all of which report good business during the past few weeks. Lunch stand proprietors also do good business, having the patronage of motorists passing through here daily over the Hartford-New London and Norwich turnpikes. The Cohen Bros. dress factory is now working full time on orders for fall and winter trade. I. Cohen, one of the partners, asserts that his summer dress orders have been nearly double those of last summer and he expects an unusually heavy rush of orders for winter dresses during the coming weeks. The Levine and Levine Cloak and Suit Co. reopened last week after a short shut-down and their large force of machine-workers is hard at work making up coats for the fall and winter trade. There is also an unusual amount of building going on about the town, several new houses and barns having been built in the past few weeks and a number of others are in course of construction. Local dealers are all handling large quantities of lumber and building material. One lumber dealer has been doing such a heavy business the past few weeks that extra trucks were hired to supplement the three trucks ordinarily used in transporting goods to the out-lying sections of town. Carpenters and painters are all busy at different points about town. Many of the carpenters have work enough to keep them busy until the last of October.

Balance Due on Fireworks

Colchester Fire Co. held a well-attended meeting on a recent evening, Chief H. F. Brown presiding. The resignation of Raymond F. Shea, a member of the company, was reluctantly voted accepted. Chief Brown was elected delegate and Treasurer Friedman alternate to the annual convention of the Conn State Firemen's association to be held at Bridgeport, August 15 and 16th. Reports submitted by the committee in charge of the July 4th fireworks fund showed that there is still nearly fifty dollars needed to cover the expense of the mammoth fireworks display. In order to make up this shortage, a committee comprising Samuel Friedman, H. F. Brown, Augustus Gregory and Rudolph Fedus was appointed to arrange for a benefit dance to be held in July.

Harold H. Bailey returned Monday from a week end visit with friends in Paterson, N. J.

A largely attended surprise party was held Sunday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. I. Cohen on South Main street in recognition of the twenty-fifth anniversary of their marriage. Y., a vocal solo by Daniel Goldberg, of Colchester and a vocal duet by Miss Fay Slavkin and Jack Broder, of Colchester. The house was decorated with green and white streamers and flowers. Sandwiches, cake, ice cream, punch and wine were served during a social hour. About a hundred friends and relatives were present, including people from New York, Hartford, Boston, Colchester and New Haven.

Mr. and Mrs. Cohen were married July 13, 1905, in New York and came to Colchester about fifteen years ago. Mr. Cohen is one of the partners of the Cohen Brothers' dress factory. He is a member of the Oliver Woodhouse lodge, No. 51, K. of P., Colchester Fire Co., and the Lions' club and is one of the borough burgesses. He is prominent in the activities of the local Zionist organization. His wife is a prominent member of the Pythian sisters. STATE POLICE ARREST SEVERAL IN PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 14.—This morning state officers of the Danielson barracks, operating in the town of Plainfield, ordered drivers of several cars to make court appearances for violations of the motor vehicle code. Jeraid Wolf of Jewett City was found to be driving a car without having an operator's license. Stanley Zanchura of the same town and a minor was found to have failed to file proof of financial responsibility, as is required of minor drivers of tender years. Louis Leo of North Grosvenordale was without an operator's license. Frank Fernin of Charleston City, Mass., was another driver who had no operator's license. All of these men will go to court in Plainfield.

In Brooklyn yesterday Ralph Elpinship of Norristown, Pa., was arrested by State Officer Elton Nolan for speeding. Another arrest for speeding, in Hampton, yesterday, was that of Edward Smith of North Windham by State Officer George Martin of the local barracks.

This week Friday brings the garden party to be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert S. Field in Brooklyn in the interest of the fund for the Day Kimball hospital's nurses' home. The affair is to start with a supper at 5 p. m.

The amount desired is $25,000. It is understood that upwards of $4,000 of this amount already has been obtained. Affairs of various sorts have been held or are to be held in various communities in the eastern part of the county, which the hospital has served so well for so many years. These events are scheduled for various dates during the remainder of July and in early August. One of them is a dance to be held at Wildwood park next week.

Today Coroner Arthur G. Bill started his inquest in the case of the crew of the little gasoline-driven section car that plunged off the New Haven road track at Wilsonville Friday morning, killing Frank Persichino, 43, of Webster instantly and so seriously injuring the foreman, Thomas Lynch, 50, also of Webster, that he died Saturday at the Day Kimball hospital in Putnam. Coroner Bill did not get far with the inquest today, for only one of the three remaining members of the crew, Stanley Kalwanzyk, Webster, was able to come here and testify. The other survivors have not sufficiently recovered from their injuries as yet to come here.

Shortly after 10 o'clock this morning the first motor vehicle accident of the week in Danielson occurred at the junction of Main street and Westcott road, the outlet to Providence. Wilfred Perry of Norwich was northbound in Main street with a Chevrolet car as Thomas Fletcher, Fall River, was coming west through Westcott road. The cars crashed near the junction point and swung over and hit a car owned by Delia Plantier, Danielson, that was parked in front of the Crystal Water company's building. There were no personal injuries, but the cars were damaged, Perry's more so than the other. State Officer John Murphy, who checked up the accident, ordered Perry to appear in the town court here Tuesday morning to answer to a reckless driving charge.

Plans are going forward for the annual field meeting and picnic of Quinebaug Pomona grange to be held at the Highlawn farm of Albert Anthony at Mansfield Hollow. The committee in charge is made up of Elmer Green, chairman, Plainfield; Minnie Sharpe, Putnam grange; F. W. Page, Brooklyn grange, and the master and secretary of Pomona grange. Much of the order of the day will be along the lines followed at such events for several years past, but there will be some surprises for those attending that will be entertaining in great degree.

Thursday afternoon of this week members of the Sunday school of the Congregational church at Brooklyn are to have an outing at Roseland park in Woodstock.

Major Albert Warren, U. S. A., has been spending a few days here with his mother, Mrs. Emma Warren, and his grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. William A. Burrows. Major Warren has been on duty at Honolulu the past few years and will return there for another year of service. He is a graduate of the United States Military academy at West Point, where he entered after finishing at Killingly High school. When he was advanced to be major a considerable number of years ago he was one of the youngest officers of that rank in the army.

It appears that this is to be a year of record making among vegetable growers in territory hereabouts. Last month there were stories of early peas and beans coming into the market. Now, in mid-July, sons of Michael Espinosa of the West Side, are showing turnips that weigh upwards of two pounds each and also ripe peppers. These boys for two or three years past have won numbers of premiums exhibiting in the vegetable department of the Brooklyn fair. As usual, they have a wide variety in their home garden this summer.

Corporators of the Brooklyn Savings bank are to meet Wednesday to elect trustees for the ensuing year and also officers of the institution. This bank, located on the West Side and in Danielson since 1913, was organized in 1872, and its business home was in Brooklyn, in the building now used as a library during all the years until centers of population changed so as to warrant removal here, this to be followed by rapid growth of the bank.

Mr. and Mrs. Nathan D. Prince are at Oak Bluffs for a few days' vacation.

Of special interest to exhibitors in the women's department at the Brooklyn fair to be held in late September is the ruling of the commissioner of agriculture that canned products, clothing, needlework and reed or basketry work must have been canned or made within the past twelve months. Notice to this effect will be included in the forthcoming premium lists. It is a matter in which the management of the fair has no option but to obey the ruling. Early notice is being given relative to the matter in order that it may be generally known about well ahead of this year's annual exhibition.

Recently considerable repair work to buildings has been done at the fairgrounds.

Motorists given tickets by state officers after a checkup of their cars for defective equipment are required to have the defects corrected, making affidavit to the effect before a notary public and then file the information with the state police commissioner's office in Hartford. Numbers of such tickets have been given out here recently and also in surrounding towns.

Mrs. Alexander Martin returned to New York today after visiting here with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bill.

Having spent a week here with grandparents, Town Clerk and Mrs. Frank T. Preston, Miss Ruth Young returned to Providence with her mother, Mrs. Earl Young.

Edward H. Bacon has been named as administrator of the estate of his father, Charles H. Bacon, who died during June.

Miss Vivian Beausoliel of Central Falls is spending a vacation of a week with friends in Danielson and vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Dayton of Broad street have gone to South Norwalk for a visit with relatives.

The case of Michael Bolinski to have come up in the town court this morning was continued for a week. Bolinski, arrested by a state officer Saturday evening, faces a charge of operating a motor vehicle while he was intoxicated, as a second offender. He will be represented by counsel.

This week's meeting of the Danielson Rotary club is to be held at Camp Woodstock, the members spending the afternoon there visiting the Y. M. C. A. camp.

Though numbers of people have kept a careful lookout in the vicinity of Broad street the strange animal seen there Saturday morning by Robert Cudworth has not since been reported.

The cottage colony at Alexander's lake is now a large one, with many spending the entire summer season at the beautiful resort.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Abbott of Providence left here this morning with their motor car en route to the Pacific coast. They have numbers of Danielson friends who wished them well on the eve of their departure.

Only two more weeks remain of Killingly's financial year, which closes July 31. Very successful administration during the year forecasts a favorable financial statement in early August.

Officers and members of the Service battery are now on the second week of their tour of duty at Niantic. The outfit, remaining a day after other batteries of the 192d field artillery leave camp, is expected to return here on Sunday.

A car bearing a North Dakota registration rated farthest from home of the "foreign" cars noted here today.

PUTNAM

BRINGS $10,000 DAMAGE SUIT AGAINST HEBERT

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 14—It was disclosed this morning that Deputy Sheriff Charles E. Ayer of Dayville has served a summons in a $10,000 damage suit brought against Nelson Hebert of Grosvenordale by Frank Bologna, a barber and resident of this city. The action of Bologna grew out of an automobile accident which occurred on September 20, 1929 on Mechanics street. Hebert was the operator of a car involved in an accident with a car owned and operated by Albert Latici of Florence street. Bologna was an occupant of the Latici car and was severely injured when hurled out of the vehicle as the crash took place. In his action Bologna claims he was permanently injured and as the result of the wounds sustained, he has been handicapped in carrying on his work in the barber shop which he conducts on Main street. The writ is returnable in the superior court in Putnam on the first Tuesday of September. In all probability the case will go to trial at some time during the September session of civil court.

Latici brought suit against Hebert during the May term of superior court and was awarded a verdict by Judge Arthur F. Ells, presiding magistrate.

Richard "Dick" Mahoney, A. B., a brother of James F. Mahoney, Connecticut resident manager of the Interstate Theatres corporation, crashed into the special features section of a well known Massachusetts newspaper Sunday. Dick, who is equally as popular as his well known brother, although helplessly crippled as the result of infantile paralysis, was a member of the class of 1930 at Clark university, Worcester, graduating with a bachelors degree in arts. His achievement was undoubtedly one of the most colorful and unusual events in the history of the university. Dick accomplished his goal without the aid of hands or legs as he suffered the loss of the powers of both his upper and lower extremities when stricken as a child.

Since his graduation, Dick has returned to Putnam and is living with his brother Jim. Dick like his estimable brother has mastered the knack of making friends and since coming to Putnam his circle of friendships is continually expanding.

The inquest was held at the office of Arthur G. Bill county coroner at Danielson and was continued after Karwowski had testified.

It was learned this morning that Thomas O'Brien, Jr., and Harold Chandler other members of the crew, are confined to their beds recovering from injuries sustained when hurled to the ground as the car left the tracks. O. C. Watson, a resident of Mt. Misery, was in Wareham, Mass., Sunday where the same circus that showed in Danielson July 11th, was putting up its tents. Monday he was much interested to read in The Bulletin about the strange and altogether terrible critter that had terrorized the people of the neighboring borough. He is now able to clear up beyond the question of a doubt, the true identity of the strange animal which has been reported there. Mr. Watson, who was traveling in a car bearing Connecticut numbers, was asked by one of the circus managers, if he came from anywhere near the eastern border of the state. Upon his answering that he did, the showman divulged a tale. Said he, when we were over there last week, in some unaccountable manner, our very valuable and ferocious female whangdoodle escaped from its closely guarded cage, and made off into the woods. It is now understood that a large reward is offered for the animal's return to the show. The chief trainer declared that it was a rare cross between a wharf rat and a kangaroo. Which fact readily accounts for the long hairless tail and hind legs much longer than the front, as described by Mr. Cudworth. The whangdoodle's main diet is made up of house cats, which establishes proof why the borough felines were so frightened at its appearance. There is no mistaking the female whangdoodle for every evening at exactly 8:10 by the watch, she may be heard loudly moaning through the forests for her first born. No reward will be forthcoming if the returned animal is found to be perforated with buck shot.

Cecile Liberty was discharged Sunday from the private hospital in Westerly where she underwent a major operation.

Terry McGovern is carrying on the business with Ed Blake an expert assistant.

Connecting With Highway.

The M. A. Gammino Construction company had gangs of men Monday establishing the grade levels where interesting streets come into the new cement highway.

A considerable drop is being made at the west end of Palmer avenue, at which point, the state road is more than a foot below the level of the avenue. The work which is to be done by the state, of putting in new cement side walks at several main street points will begin before long. There is a possibility that injury may be done to pedestrians at several of these sections when the cement is broken out, and left open to the curb.

There were but 11 days during June that were without rain in this section. July is furnishing plenty with over an inch in the first 14 days.

POETRY

The Plumber

Down in a corner crouching in a cellar,
Striking in the darkness a fragrant snake,
Jabbing down the oakum, mumbling bits of hokum,
Jabbing all the oakum that the joint will take;
Squatting in the cob-webs, scaring sullen spiders,
Humbling himself before the proud outsiders,
Fumbling and mumbling, rising up and stumbling,
Fumbling in the shadow for his lost dividers! . . .
Back in a cavern underneath a stairway,
Flattened in the blackness a tom-cat glows,
Glowering at the plumber, swearing at the plumber,
Eyeing the newcomer with the cobwebbed nose.
Down on his knees by the torch that roars,
Roaring at the lead in the cast iron pot—
Soaring tongues of red, tongues white hot
Bellow at the lead in a burning spot.
Here kneels the plumber at his shrine—
Winter, Summer,
Humbling, mumbling, fumbling in the shadows;
Bowing at his altar, mindful of the Nation,
Worshiping obscurely the goddess Sanitation.
The tom-cat glowers and the spiders sulk
Awaiting the departure of the solitary hulk.
Still he keeps a-pounding, pounding down the lead—
Pounding down the lead, bowing down his head,
Mindful of the living, thoughtful of the dead.

—Paul E. Tracy, in Poetry.

Love's Dearest Moment

Love's dearest moment is not when the bands
Are clasped in marriage and the world looks on,
Nor yet when all the importunate world has gone,
And flaming passion like the archangel stands
Between two souls, and welds with fire the hands
Of impotent human law; nor when alone
Upon the morrow they and love are one,
Triune and chrismed, pure, as God commands.
It is not in the many morrow's track
While love by loving grows more rich and wise
Till age counts up love's wondrous, wondrous sum,
Love's dearest moment is far back, far back—
When first they looked within each other's eyes,
And in the silence knew that love was come.

—Beatrice Harlowe, in Harper's Magazine.

ROBINSON AND THE TREATY

Senator Robinson has gone on record as supporting the London treaty and has given his reasons for it. Even though he is the democratic leader in the senate, this is only what was to be expected.

Senator Robinson was named as one of the delegates to the London conference. He took an important part in the negotiations. He knows all there is to be known about the treaty. He has signed it and it is to be supposed that he will support it. Furthermore, it is to be expected that he will urge any and all of those over whom he has special influence to do likewise.

Even though he is numbered among those who have from time to time made up the coalition and offered opposition to administration measures and desires, he has a personal interest in the treaty. He was made a delegate to the conference that the democrats of the senate might have a representative in whom they would have confidence. He knows all that is in the papers about which an effort has been made to create such a wrong impression and he has advised the senate that they involve nothing that would throw any new light on the treaty.

Although the move for the treaty was started in a republican administration, he knows that it should be dealt with in a non-partisan manner, that the effort to block what the country seeks should not be encouraged and that his labors should be directed to getting and keeping as many of those over whom he maintains a leadership in Washington until action is taken. No one should be more active in blocking any of the moves by the insurgent element for postponement of the vote or the loading down of the treaty with a lot of bothersome reservations.

It was in keeping with such a spirit that he expressed the hope that the treaty debate would not develop personal or partisan hostility or antagonism. That was no more than was to be expected of him. How he could take any different attitude is difficult to see. He knows whereof he speaks when he gives reasons for approving the treaty and he has a personal interest in the favorable outcome.

CRIMES BY MANIACS

It was only a few days ago that a Connecticut man in a federal hospital for mental trouble made his escape, returned to his home, spent the night with his family, took them on a picnic the following day and then proceeded to throw them one by one from the precipitous mountainside at New Haven.

Closely following that is the case of a New York man who had been at a New York state hospital for the insane for three months. He was released, or placed on parole, by the institution at the request of his wife and sister, went to the latter's home four months ago and returned to his own home three weeks ago. There had been signs of increasing moodiness and this depression increased until he took his 14-months-old son to the roof of the apartment house and leaped off with him, causing the boy's death and his return to the hospital under charge of manslaughter.

It was claimed at the hospital that the man had been doing well and that he was "in the same status as several hundred other patients we have on our parole list."

According to developments, these men should never have been permitted outside of the institutions to which they had been committed because of their mental condition. One case was without the approval of the authorities and the other was with and, in view of the developments, New York has reason to wonder how many others of those several hundred patients "in the same status" with the second man are a menace to their families or others.

It isn't to be supposed that the authorities expected that he would do any such thing when they allowed him to go. The wife and the sister could not have anticipated any such outcome from their request to release him. Their desire to have him home, in the belief that he was better, was natural, but it has been demonstrated that, while he might have been doing well in the institution, he was not in a condition that insured safety to himself or others at large. Neither was it possible for the family to so care for him that he could be prevented from acts of violence. It is hard to turn down pleas of relatives, but the demands of safety should not be overlooked. Taking chances under such conditions is serious.

WHEN PINCHOT RUNS

Whenever Gifford Pinchot gets into a political contest he encounters difficulties which are different and bothersome. He frequently not only defeats himself but also the cause for which he is working.

In his try for the United States senate as a dry, he was responsible for the election of William S. Vare, a wet, by insisting upon a three-cornered contest and opposing Senator Pepper, a middle-of-the-roader as far as the wet question was concerned. That deprived Pennsylvania of one of its representatives in the senate for a long period of time because the senate conducted a long investigation of the Vare election and refused to seat him.

This year Mr. Pinchot sought the republican nomination as governor. He desires to return to the office which he formerly held. There were all kinds of complications in the primary without the wet question playing a very prominent part but which resulted in the nomination of Mr. Pinchot. Immediately his opponent raised the question about illegal ballots in Luzerne county, where it appears they had been perforated. In that county Mr. Pinchot had a commanding lead, all of which will be taken away if the perforation is found to make them unlawful. Uncertainty as to when a final court decision will be reached on this question has caused the former governor to anticipate adverse results by placing his name on an independent ticket. This situation appears to have been caused by an effort in Luzerne county by the Pinchot forces to insure a fair vote, but in a county where the Pinchot support appears by the results to have been overwhelming and, therefore, the perforation of the ballots seemingly unnecessary.

It is inevitable with such a development that there should be a splitting of the republican forces. There will naturally be those who will stand by Mr. Pinchot wherever his name appears, those who will back the wet opponent, who happens to be a democrat, and those who will support any candidate who may head the republican ticket if the perforated ballots are thrown out. Pennsylvania is such a strong republican state that there may be no danger of a democrat winning, but the complications are characteristic of those fights into which Mr. Pinchot throws himself.

JAPANESE BEETLES

Considerable interest is being disclosed in this vicinity over the Japanese beetle. There is no desire to find that they are already well settled in this part of the state, but there is an interest in finding out what they are and whether such beetle-like bugs as are found are the ones against which serious opposition should be manifested.

Thus, it must be said to be a healthy interest. It indicates a determination to put up a fight and to make an early start. It evidences a recognition of the fact that any fight that is made will be the easier if begun promptly on the discovery of the presence of the pest.

No matter what the pest is, those who are in danger of suffering the effects of their depredations have good and sufficient reason for looking well to their own protection. If the beetle has reached this vicinity, it is well to know it, to be on the lookout for it and to give it such a reception that there will be less chance for it to cause serious devastation than there would be by waiting until its ravages had become so noticeable that there could be no mistaking it. If beetles discovered are not of the Japanese variety and are not a menace no harm has been done in displaying a curiosity concerning them. If they are the pest, then no further signal is needed for getting busy and taking all reasonable steps for their eradication.

Like all nuisances, it is much easier to put up a successful fight against the beetles when they first make their appearance than by waiting until they have done their work and are moving along for new fields to conquer. It is, by all means, a good idea find out if you are harboring any of the pests and if you are to waste no time in giving them so warm a reception that their stay and ravages will be effectively curtailed.

BADLY FOCUSED LIGHTS

Now that the automobile owners of New York state have been authorized to equip their cars with 32 candlepower lights instead of 21, it will be interesting to note what effect this will have upon highway driving in Connecticut. New York cars are everywhere and the new order means that we may expect stronger headlights when they are faced.

It is no secret, of course, that the stronger headlights do not of themselves mean glaring lights if they are properly focused, but it should call for giving greater attention to such regulation. In all probability little attention would be paid to the difference in the light if they were adjusted so as to have their rays downward onto the roadbed instead of going out horizontally or up into the trees. It is onto the road that the light should be thrown. It is there they help the driver and do not bother the person at the wheel of the machine coming from the opposite direction, but stronger lights directed into the eyes of those going the other way will prove a menace without helping the driver of the car possessing them.

In the interest of increased safety, New England is to have an inspection of cars to see if brakes, lights and other equipment are as they should be. There are occasions when light tests are made for the purpose of checking up on them, and it is not improbable that the New York cars with their stronger lights will encounter considerable trouble if they are not so focused as to meet requirements.

Such inspections are worth while for the maintenance of car equipment, for lights get out of adjustment without difficulty and often without the knowledge of the driver. The more check-ups the better the chance of keeping down the bright and bothersome lights, no matter from what state the cars come.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

(Special to The Bulletin)

WASHINGTON, July 14.—Connecticut, as one of the few states where the convention system of election of senators has not yielded to the primary will feel special gratification in the fact, that it cannot come under the criticism that has fallen on the rest of the senate, for "lowering the standard of its representatives in the United States senate through popular elections."

Former President Coolidge has set his seal of disapproval on the primary nomination and popular election of senators in no uncertain terms.

The records made by past and present Connecticut senators and representatives do not come under the Coolidge ban.

In a recent current comment, by Mr. Coolidge, as published daily by a newspaper syndicate, he forsakes his usual cautious attitude of expressing opinions regarding matters pertaining to controversial government matters, and makes open condemnation of existing election methods. The comment has attracted tremendous attention at the capital.

Referring to the adjournment of congress, Mr. Coolidge said in part: "It will be subjected to considerable criticism, most of which will be useless. With the direct primaries in most states, and the popular election of senators, the present perversion of legislation is unavoidable—a combination of senators destroyed party responsibility without substituting any of the virtue of independence, with a resulting loss to good government."

Political leaders of both parties take the ground that a nation-wide confidence exists in Mr. Coolidge and his political wisdom, so the unflinching attitude he takes against the present method of election of United States senators, by primary and direct vote, cannot help influence results in states where the primary system is even now hanging on by its gills, as is the case in Massachusetts, New Hampshire and several other New England states, Connecticut and Rhode Island being the only New England states where the primary is not used.

Shipstead of Minnesota is the only legitimate non-party man in the senate. He has no party affiliation; he is registered as a farm-labor senator, but that title seems to be elastic, and no one questions his official right to vote as he sees fit. Shipstead is big, blond and a lover of out-door life. He is of Nourse ancestry, stands firm against the world court, the league of nations and the London treaty; Shipstead is quiet in manner, but blazes into flame when speaking against the measures he disapproves. He is a marked contrast to the men of the so-called insurgent group, with whom he often stands, and he enjoys the unusual prestige of not being tied to the apron string of any political party, so can stray from one political pasture to another, without giving just cause for complaint.

Former Governor John H. Bartlett of New Hampshire, now chairman of the international joint commission, dealing with matter concerning the Canadian boundary, has recently sailed for a summer in Europe, taking Mrs. Bartlett with him. The last time we saw Mr. Bartlett, he was trying to find his way out of the wrong social pew, and explain to Senator Metcalf of Rhode Island, how it happened that he was acting as host at a reception Senator and Mrs. Metcalf were giving in honor of the visiting D. A. R.'s of Rhode Island.

Senator Metcalf and Bartlett are personal friends, and it happened this way.

When the D. A. R. congress was in session last April, Senator and Mrs. Metcalf entertained their state delegation at a large tea given at one of Washington's fashionable hotels. At the same day and hour, in the same hotel the New Hampshire congressional delegation to be assisted by Mr. and Mrs. Bartlett were entertaining the New Hampshire D. A. R. delegation. The two receptions were given in adjoining parlors of the hotel.

Bartlett was late in arriving, and seeing a crowd in the Rhode Island room, mistook it for the affair he was supposed to sponsor. Moreover, he peeked around a bit, to make sure, and saw a New Hampshire woman pouring coffee. That settled it. In walked the former governor, and seeing Metcalf in the offing, greeted him cordially and remarked "I am mighty glad you dropped in to see us." Metcalf countered with "Glad you could come," with a strong accent on the "you," adding "Whose party do you think this is?" "Why, my party," said the governor. "No, it's my party," said Metcalf, laughing, "you belong two doors farther down the lobby." Bartlett scanned the group of women. There was no Mrs. Bartlett visible. Bartlett grinned, greeted Mrs. Metcalf, then went to the big room adjoining, only to be greeted by his wife, "Why John, how is it you are so late?" as he took his place in the receiving line, along with Representative Hale and other members of the Granite state delegation.

Senators, members of the house and many a man high in political circles have some pet superstition, even though they do not wear it tagged on their sleeve. Even hard boiled senators are on the list. We have in mind that concerning the Virginia fairy stone, as an amulet sure to ward off disaster and bring the wearer good fortune.

Coming through the senate lobby one day, wearing a fairy stone amulet pendant from a chain, a New England correspondent met Senator Swanson of Virginia, and said, "Mr. Senator, do you recall when you gave me that, to bridge me over some troublesome situation to be met in the newspaper world?" "Yes," said Swanson, "and I always carry one in my pocket," producing a duplicate. Just then along came Senator Fletcher of Florida, who glanced at the two amulets, and called out, "Hey, there, Swanson, I lost mine — this looks suspiciously like it!" "I'll give you another," said Swanson, "we can't take any chance on your reelection."

One of the most distinguished of the New England senators, Moses of New Hampshire, is reputed to always turn a penny over in his pocket, when he sees the new moon. Yet you would find it a tough proposition to name three less impressionable men than Swanson, Fletcher and Moses, if you searched the senate through.

The fairy stone and its tradition as to origin are centuries old. In Patrick county, Virginia, and said to exist in no other place, are found small brown deposits in certain gravel banks, always found in the form of a cross. Sometimes a Greek cross, some times a Roman cross, but always perfect, and beautifully formed. They vary in size, usually about an inch long.

They are the Virginia luck stone, the F. F. V.'s wear or carry them, and the Negroes put their full faith in them.

The tradition runs like this. On the morning of the crucifixion of Christ, the fairies, which dwelt undisturbed in the Virginian hills, wept over the supreme tragedy; their tears moistened the minerals in the gravel bank and moulded the deposit into the form of a tiny cross. The tradition has never died down; and though, like Egyptian Scarabs, there are many imitation fairy stones, manufactured for sale, the genuine fairy stone of Virginia holds fast its place of honor in amulets, outplacing any other southern luck piece and coveted by all who want to be on the safe side, where superstitions are concerned.

The fate of the London treaty is still in the lap of the gods. No one can safely predict the outcome. It's almost as much a matter of doubt as whether or not Chairman Houston will resign from the chairmanship of the national republican committee.

A SPECIAL OCCASION

"When I tell you," exclaimed young Mrs. Mathews to Mrs. Browne, president of the College Hills Saturday Afternoon Sewing circle, "what happened to me last Saturday you will cease to wonder why I was not at the regular weekly meeting. My dear, at that momentous afternoon my whole life and that of my husband and children was completely changed and we will never be quite as excited again. Why wasn't I at the meeting, you ask. Why, indeed?

"You probably think I forgot all about it. On the contrary, I laid careful plans not only to be there but to be early, as I wanted to ask Mrs. Logan for her frozen fruit salad recipe which I intended to use as a very special dinner on Sunday.

"Not only was I rushing to get to the sewing circle but I was making elaborate preparations for Sunday dinner, to which I had invited Dick's employer, Mr. Armstrong, who never before had been in our home and upon whom Dick and I wished to make the best possible impression. There was a vacancy in the east which had not been filled and Dick aspired to be given that post.

"I arranged to have Betsy, who works for me on Wednesday, come in to serve dinner and to have the children eat upstairs, but I would do all the cooking and preparing, and to that end I bent my most strenuous efforts. But in order to get as much done as possible in the short time at hand I doubled up on my work and decided to launder the best tablecloth and napkins (which had not been used for ages), and the baby's hand-made wool stockings while the pies were baking and the vegetables steam cooking on the stove.

"You know what a woman looks like in the morning after she has dressed and fed two children, washed dishes, baked pies, scrubbed vegetables and now is scrubbing clothes on a washboard. My hair was stringing about my face, which was innocent of powder and perspiring from the heated kitchen; my apron was floury from the pies and rusty from the washtub, and my sleeves rolled to the elbow.

"And I was happy to know that everything would be so spick and span for my receiving Mr. Armstrong next day!

"I had finished my little washing, had already hung the big tablecloth on the clothesline and was back at the tub fishing around for the napkins and baby socks when I was petrified to hear a loud peal from the front-door bell. What should I do? Indeed, there was but one thing to do. I must stay away from that door, and whoever was there in all probability would soon go away, taking for granted there was no one home.

"I was rejoicing at my strategy in remaining in the kitchen when suddenly there came, to my horror, the sound of masculine voices in the hall, and an instant later a face poked itself into the tablecloth, which was hanging right across the hallway door. A moment later the face in the tablecloth became extricated, moved around the corner, and I beheld my husband, closely followed into the kitchen by the most distinguished-looking individual I'd ever seen.

"'Nancy!' cried Dick, quite oblivious that he was committing a domestic outrage. 'This is Mr. Armstrong.'

"'Mr. Armstrong!' I gasped.

"'He dropped me off here,' said Dick, 'so he could find out where to come tomorrow. He goes near here anyway on his way home.'

"My dear," sympathised Mrs. Browne, "did you get a divorce or drown your husband in the washtub?" Mrs. Mathews laughed.

"I longed to do both," she said, "but the next moment my wrath was changed to joy. Mr. Armstrong was marvelous. He came right over and shook my hand and took up the little sock I was holding. 'It seems only yesterday,' he murmured, 'that my Charlie was wearing socks this size, and now he's vice-president of our company. My wife always washed out his baby things herself, too.'

"And, my dear," finished Mrs. Mathews excitedly, "next day when he came to dinner he told Dick he'd decided to appoint him to that post in the east and we're all leaving Thursday. So now you know why I wasn't at the Saturday afternoon meeting and why I probably won't be there again for a very long time!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 14 — Who remembers that once popular ditty of the early 90's which went:

"Oh, the Midway, the Midway, the Midway Plaisance,
"Where the naughty girls from Egypt
——" etc., etc.

It celebrated on a nationwide scale the glories of the so-named pleasure center of the Chicago world's fair, the Columbian exposition.

And it did much, also to spread the fame of Sol Bloom of Pekin, Ill., San Francisco and Chicago, en route to New York and to congress. For Representative Bloom bossed the building of the Midway.

Bigger Job.

That was a big undertaking; but it rather fades into insignificance beside the job on which Bloom now is working—with U. S. Grant, 3rd, army engineer and grandson of the famous general—as executive officer of the commission of which the New York representative is the most active member.

It's the "George Washington Bicentenial Commission" appointed by congress to arrange adequately for the commemoration in 1932 of "that greatest of all historical events," as the act states it, the birth of the father of his country.

It is to be not a single celebration, but a year of nationwide celebrations beginning on Washington's birthday anniversary in February and running through to Thanksgiving. The capital of the nation merely will be the central pivot of it all, as Bloom and his fellow commissioners see it.

Million Pictures.

It would take columns to indicate all that is already being planned by the commission. Here are just a couple of samples.

A year or so ago while in France, Bloom picked up a French four-color print of George and Martha Washington. He's a collector along that line.

And whether that $15 outlay started it or not, every school room in the United States will have a 12-color Washington picture on its walls when 1932 rolls around.

There are one million school rooms in this country, Bloom figures.

Another plan in the making is a Washington movie with an historically accurate scenario. Professors of history already are at work upon that project, under the commission's direction.

And these are just ripples on the surface of the things the commissioners and the colonel with the historic name are thinking about.

A YANKEE ABROAD

By DEWITT MacKENZIE

Carol's "Mystery Host"

LONDON — The "mystery man" of events which led to the coup d'etat which placed Carol on the Rumanian throne, lives in Godstone, England, deep in the Surrey woods in a rambling, straggling estate called Oakhurst Court.

Carol spent part of his exile there receiving mysterious visitors and idling away his time waiting for political events to shape themselves for his return to Rumania.

During all those eventful times his ever faithful shadow, host, protector and major domo was one Barbu Jonescu, wealthy, suave, mysterious.

When Carol was asked by his government to leave England he was followed to Belgium by Jonescu, who spent much of his time with the then royal exile.

What may or may not be significant is the fact that the late King Ferdinand once decorated Jonescu with the Order of the Crown of Rumania. Yet Jonescu's first appearance in England was as a waiter in a restaurant.

Fancy Dress.

Jonescu came to England about the middle of 1915 from Paris. He took a job as a waiter in a West End restaurant serving Rumanian coffee, although he obviously was of a higher station in life.

Clad in a gorgeous silk costume consisting of a blue robe, jacket and sash embroidered with an elaborate floral design, he soon became known as "Barbu" to the ultra-fashionable society people, politicians and army officers who frequented the restaurant. He was on friendly terms with many of them.

After 15 months in the restaurant he let it be known that he really was an engineer by profession, and he soon was placed in charge of a special department in a British ammunition factory.

His next move was to marry a beautiful Belgian woman and take up residence at Oakhurst Court. Then Prince Carol came to spend some of his exile in the silent house there in the woods. Other mysterious visitors came, too, and among them, Madame Lupescu. Most of the visitors went as mysteriously as they came.

Close Friend.

Then when Carol went to Belgium, Jonescu dropped out of sight for a while. But he had just returned to England from Belgium when Carol flew from Belgium to Rumania and his throne.

Now Jonescu is dropping out of sight again, but he says he is in constant touch with Rumania and royal circles.

Who is he and what is his connection with the Rumanian government? His smiling answer to this question was:

"I am a close friend of the king; my connection with the government is purely unofficial."

YOUR HEALTH

Constipation.

By R. Manning Clarke, M. D., Los Angeles.

(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

To say that you are constipated is like saying you live in the United States—a bit indefinite. There are many different causes of this condition, and if correct living and simple measures do not relieve you, it is best to consult your physician for a check as to the causes that underly the state in which you find yourself. These causes include (1) lack of bulk. When you eat such foods as milk, eggs, cereals, etc., there is a very small residue left to provide bulk to the stool. On the other hand, in celery, lettuce, spinach, cabbage and many other vegetables there is a large residue left, composed of cellulose, undigested woody and fibrous material that makes a large stool.

Such whole grain cereals as unpolished rice, wholewheat bread and cereals are helpful in the same way because they include the bran of the cereal. Without a proper amount of such bulk no normal person can keep up proper elimination. The bulk by distending the bowel provides a stimulus that is other wise lacking.

(2) Lack of Fruit. Fruits also provide a very stimulating bulk of fiber and seeds. In addition to bulk value, fruits provide acids that are splendid natural stimulants to the bowel activity. Their presence in normal amounts is necessary to every normal individual who would have and maintain good elimination.

(3) Lack of Fluids. Neglecting to drink sufficient water and fluids in foods is another reason for sluggish bowel activity. The water content of the blood never varies in health. On this account if we take too little water, nature takes it from the other tissues to maintain the constancy of the blood volume, and the bowel and the bowel movement suffer with the other tissues.

(4) Lack of Fats. Fats, especially the dairy fats, have a special influence over the bile. They make it very much more active. They also thin it and cause it to drain out of the liver, gallbladder and bile ducts more rapidly. Bile is laxative and also has an activating influence over the "intestinal juices" lower in the tract. On this account the dairy fats ; milk, cream and butter are essential for the good health and elimination of the gastrointestinal tract. This is especially true of thin and exhausted people.

(5) Lack of Rest. There are many people who are nervously exhausted and as a result the nervous impulses reaching the gastrointestinal tract are of such low grade that they are entirely insufficient to produce results. Many of these cases are relieved by putting them to bed or at least arranging their activities so as to keep them in proportion to their ability to carry on. In many cases a few minutes a day of relaxation and healthy exercises will be valuable. If the load of responsibility and work you are carrying is too much for your nervous resources, or is fatiguing routine, it is one of the causes of your constipation.

If in any of the above factors you are careless or unwise, prescribe for yourself a change of habit and see if that relieves the trouble. But if you are living up to all of these things, and still have trouble consult a good internal medicine physicians for accurate diagnosis of your condition.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

A Misleading Name

A name quite often may deceive;
Be sure you know what you believe.
—Old Mother Nature.

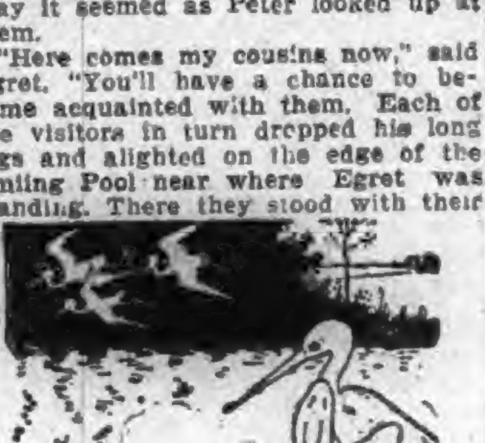
Peter Rabbit was all excited. But he was soon to be still more excited. He had made the acquaintance of Egret the Great White Heron. Egret had told him that he had a handsomer cousin, who also dressed wholly in white—Snowy Egret; also called the Little White Egret. Also, Egret had said that there was still another of the Heron cousins who dressed in white and that when he had come up from the sunny South, some of these white cousins had come with him. He ad parted from them at the mouth of the Laughing Brook where it entered the Great River.

"I do wish," said Peter, "that those white cousins of yours would come up here to the Smiling Pool. How I should like to see them!"

Hardly were the words out of Peter's mouth when Jerry Muskrat squeaker, "Look, Pete, look, over toward the Big River."

Peter looked. Winging their way straight toward the Smiling Pool came three big birds that Peter recognized at once as Herons. And they were white, all white. At least, that is the way it seemed as Peter looked up at them.

"Here comes my cousins now," said Egret. "You'll have a chance to become acquainted with them. Each of the visitors in turn dropped his long legs and alighted on the edge of the Smiling Pool near where Egret was standing. There they stood with their necks stretched up after the fashion of all Herons when they alight. Peter fairly gazed, for it was a wonderful sight to see four such big birds all in white. Peter noticed at once that Egret was the biggest. Also, he saw that the three new arrivals had black bills, while the bill of Egret was yellow. He also noticed that the legs were rather greenish. Now that they were so close, he saw that two of the three had a few bluish markings, which would not be seen at a greater distance.



"Look, Peter, look, over toward the Big River!"

"These are my cousins, the Little Blue Herons," said Egret to Peter and Jerry.

"Who did you say they were?" Jerry muskrat asked; and his face wore a puzzled look.

"Little Blue Herons," replied Egret.

Jerry rubbed his eyes and pretended there was something the matter with them. "I guess I need new eyes," said he.

There was a funny look of surprise in the eyes of Egret. "Why do you need new eyes?" he asked.

"So that I may see correctly," replied Jerry. "Now, those cousins of yours look to me to be all white, but you say that they are blue."

"Nothing of the sort!" declared Egret. "I didn't say they were blue; I said they were Little Blue Herons."

"Do you mean," spoke up Peter, "that they are the children of Longlegs the Great Blue Heron?"

Egret shook his head. "Of course not!" said he. "The children of Longlegs the Great Blue Heron never were white in their lives. These are the children of Little Blue Heron and that is why they are called Little Blue Herons. Little Blue Heron is no bigger than they are now."

"And is he dressed all in white, too?" asked Peter.

"Of course not!" replied Egret, beginning to get a little impatient. "They wouldn't call him Little Blue Heron if he were."

"Then why do they call these Little Blue Herons, when they are white and not blue at all," demanded Peter. "I'm getting all mixed up."

Stories That Recall Others

Unselfish

Johnny accompanied his mother to the grocery store. After she had given her order the grocer presented Johnny with a bag of candy.

"Oh, what do you say, Johnny?" asked his mother.

"I've a little sister at home," said Johnny.

And He Did And She Did

She was 80.
He was 45.

She was starting across the street where heavy traffic seemed to be bearing down on her with a crumpled body under the wheels, serious injury or death, the only possible result.

He touched her gently on the arm, "There comes an automobile. Watch out or you'll be hurt." And he stepped to the curb out of harm's way.

"I have two eyes and I am in my right mind. You mind your own business and I'll mind mine," came the curt reply with its utter lack of appreciation.

And he did and she did.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Standard Machinery Company, Mystic

In 1848 the Randall brothers—Isaac, William P. and Silas B., together with William P. Smith, Nathan Chapman and Leonard W. Morse, founded the Reliance Machine company, which up to the time of the Civil war did a large business in the manufacture of cotton gin machinery and kindred supplies. Their trade being principally with the south, they became embarrassed by the large amount owing them by their Southern debtors at the outbreak of the war. The demand for their output having entirely ceased, they were forced to find some other line of business and at great expense fitted their plant for the building of marine engines.

Having a few years before added to their plant a boiler shop, they were prepared to undertake the complete outfitting of steamers so many of which were built at Mystic during the war. At their boiler shop were built boilers for the gunboat "Varuna," which so distinguished herself under Commodore Boggs at New Orleans. The Reliance company furnished the boilers and engine for the sloop-of-war "Ossipee" built at Kittery navy yard, and also fitted out among others the "Fanny", the "Delaware", the "Ann Marie", and the "W. W. Colt".

Though doing a large business, the company never recovered from the blow received at the outbreak of the war and in the summer of 1864 was forced to make an assignment for the benefit of its creditors. An incident connected with the failure caused great excitement in Mystic. Messrs. George Greenman & Co. had a steamer lying at the boiler shop wharf waiting for her engine, which was completed and stood in the erecting department of the Reliance works. It was reported that the company was to make an assignment on Monday, and, as the Messrs. Greenman claimed to have advanced the price of the engine they sent a gang of men to the shop on Sunday and took possession of it, removing it to a storehouse near the wharf.

A number of the creditors of the Reliance company were stirred with indignation at this violation of the Sabbath and incidentally with fear of losing the value of the machinery, so they appealed to the officers of the law to stop the outrage. The local deputy-sheriff, after listening to both sides of the controversy, concluded as the Greenmans were Seventh Day Baptists they had a perfect right under the law to work on Sunday, and so he declined to interfere. Then the county sheriff, Judge Richard A. Wheeler, was appealed to and he hastened to the scene; but he arrived at the same conclusion as did his deputy, and so the engine remained the property of the Greenmans.

The assignees of the company, Messrs. James Gallup, Hiram Appleman and Nathan G. Fish, brought the business to a prompt conclusion and on the 20th of December the plant was sold. The Mystic Pioneer of December 10th, 1864, notices the sale as follows: "The sale of the Reliance Machine company's establishment on the 20th instant will be the largest amount of property ever sold at one auction in eastern Connecticut. The works are now in operation and everything in good shape for a continuation of the business. The boiler shop will be sold separately on the same day." The Pequot Machine company, headed by C. B. Rogers of Norwich, took over the plant and conducted the business for about a year and a half, when they sold out to the Cotton Gun company.

The Mystic River Hardware company was formed April 10, 1866 "for the purpose of manufacturing hardware and agricultural implements." They succeeded to the business of the Cotton Gin company and in 1871 we read of their business that "it is a joint stock company of which George Greenman is president; Charles Grinnell, treasurer; Lon Weston, secretary; George Grinnell, bookkeeper and Leonard W. Morse, Jr., superintendent. The average number of hands employed is 100."

The output was the Gullett improved patent steel brush cotton gin and also a large proportion of all of the cotton gin materials used by southern manufacturers. In addition they made a large line of bookbinders' machinery, the Mystic pump, otherwise known as the glass cylinder pump, and the People's improved coffee mill.

In 1873 the name of the company was the Sanborn Machine company, which was later changed to the Standard Machine company. In 1904 Charles E. Wheeler purchased the entire plant and business from Thomas E. Stillman and replacing the old building with modern brick type, continues to carry on the business of manufacturing bookbinders machinery, with his two sons, Norton C. Wheeler and John D. Wheeler. Of late years the business has expanded to include the manufacturing of presses for molding shellac compositions, celluloid, bakelite and other synthetic materials, cold moulded materials and rubber. Automatic machines have also been developed for the cutting and seaming of sheet rubber and making of celluloid buttons.

This plant equipped with modern foundry and machine shop also does considerable contract work on all kinds of medium sized machinery. The officers of the company are, Charles E. Wheeler, president and treasurer; N. C. Wheeler, secretary; John R. Wheeler, superintendent.

THREE NORWICH TEACHERS RETIRED BY STATE BOARD

Three Norwich teachers are in the list of 26 in the state who were placed on the retired list by the state teachers' retirement board at its meeting on Friday. These were Miss Florence E. Fellows and Mrs. Elizabeth B. Davis, both teachers in the eighth grade at Broadway school, and Miss M. Janie Leach, principal at the county home school.

Miss Fellows has been 55 years a teacher, Miss Leach 35 years and Mrs. Davis 32 years.

Mary S. Waterman, for more than 61 years a teacher in the public schools of Hartford, was retired at this meeting of the board. She had served the longest of any teacher yet retired.

Others in this part of the state who were on the list were the following: Mary B. Comstock, Lyme, 18 years; Louise W. Danielson, Killingly, 27 years; S. Nettie Johnson, Griswold, 48 years; Robert R. Brubeck, New London, 16 years; Frances Strickland, New London, 52 years; Helen M. Champion, New London, 40 years.

BUSINESS DEPRESSION HITS COURTS OF THE STATE

The courts of the state collected less fines in the fiscal year of 1929-1930 by a considerable margin than in the previous fiscal year, if the fines collected for violation of motor vehicle laws may be taken as any criterion. The decrease of $19,343.69 in fines by motorists may well indicate that receipts in the state at large are generally smaller than last year.

For the fiscal year ended on June 30, 1930, the state courts had collected $324,271.92 as compared with $343,615.61 for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1929, according to reports made to the state motor vehicle department. This was $33,746.65 in excess of the receipts from the same sources in the year 1928-1929, which amounted to $290,525.27.

While the number of arrests reported for motor vehicle violations has not materially decreased, the records indicate there were more cases presented during the last fiscal year than in the previous year. The decrease in receipts is taken to mean that the offenses alleged in court were not generally as serious as during the previous year.

15 MI. PER HOUR MAKES STEAM SHOVEL SPEEDER

Fifteen miles an hour may not be excessive speed in some localities or for some classes of vehicles, but when one is operating a steam shovel weighing 17 tons over the state drawbridge at Saybrook it is sufficient to have a state policeman arrest the driver and hold him for court on a charge of reckless driving. A speed of from 15 to 20 miles an hour across the bridge is alleged.

The steam shovel is owned by Bridgeport contractors and early Saturday morning it was being driven from Rhode Island to Southport where a state highway construction job is in progress. After it had crossed the bridge at Saybrook the state police discovered it was being transported over the state highways without a permit for such transportation and it was held up until the permit was secured. The permit was issued Monday and the shovel proceeded, but not before the driver made arrangements for appearance in court at Old Saybrook to answer to the reckless driving charge.

EXTORTION ATTEMPT ON FRANKLIN STREET STORE KEEPER IS FOILED

Simeon Rosano's move to call the police by telephone from his store at 103 Franklin street when a stranger demanded money from him there about 4 o'clock Monday afternoon foiled a clumsy attempt at extortion and the unknown stranger dashed from the store and escaped.

Sergeant Myron O. Morgan, who reached the store shortly afterwards and learned that the man had run around the corner of Willow street and up towards Broadway jumped into a taxi cab and rode up Broadway as far as the Soldiers' monument, but saw no traces of the fugitive. The officer had with him a couple of children who believed they could pick the man out if they saw him again.

A description of the hold-up man, who claimed he was a detective, was given to the police as follows: Dark complexion, about 29 years old, 5 feet, 4 inches, wearing light gray hat and blue suit.

Mr. and Mrs. Rosano, whose home on Palmer avenue extension was burned to the ground on the night before the Fourth, were in the store when the strange man entered, passing Mrs. Rosano, who was standing near the door talking to Mrs. Nelkin.

Stepping up to Mr. Rosano, the stranger handed him a letter and greeted him with, "I want the money."

"What do you mean?"

"I want the money for the fire?"

"Who are you? What is your name?" Mr. Rosano asked.

"Never mind my name. I'm a detective."

"Where's your badge," demanded Mr. Rosano, as he put his hand on the lapels of the man's coat to look for a badge.

"Never mind the badge. Give me the money," the hold-up man responded, but Mr. Rosano had kept his hold on his coat and started to drag him towards the table where the telephone was. As the man broke loose and started to get away, Mr. Rosano shouted to his wife to shut the door, but the stranger pushed past her, knocking her down as he did so, and both Mr. and Mrs. Rosano raised the alarm by shouting for the police. As soon as he gained the street, the hold-up man quickly disappeared around the corner.

Police Chief George Linton at once dispatched Sergeant Morgan to the Franklin street store when he got a telephone call from Mr. Rosano of the attempted hold-up and the police kept up their work through the night under direction of Capt. Thomas Murphy in scouring the city for some trace of the hold-up man.

It was learned that the name signed to the letter was that of a man named Dempski, who has been employed by Rosano in installing the oil heaters for which he is agent. It is also understood that the hold-up man appeared at the Rosano store last Saturday with a threat that they were going to "get" him because of the fire and that Dempski was with him at the time the alleged threat was made.

According to an investigation made by the state police, the Rosano house fire was caused by Fourth of July celebrators, who drove past the house in an automobile about an hour before the blaze was discovered, which was about midnight. The Rosano family had left the house earlier in the evening and no one was at home when the fire broke out. The loss was between $6,000 and $7,000 on the building, on which there was $3,500 insurance, it is understood, and only $500 insurance was carried on the fixtures and furniture.

The cornerstone was laid in the name of the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Our Redeemer, which will be the incorporated title as soon as they enter their new house of worship.

TWO LEAGUES FORMED IN CITY PLAYGROUNDS

On Monday morning, at 9 o'clock, the regular bi-weekly meeting of the local playground staff was held in the recreation office, with Superintendent Earle E. Brigham presiding. Matters of a routine nature were discussed and settled and the gathering was allowed to make suggestions informally as to the possible means of improvement of the various play centers.

Two leagues have already been formed by the superintendent for the purpose of affording an incentive to keen rivalry on the part of the children. Cups are annually awarded to the playgrounds winning the league championship in baseball, volleyball, track, and dodgeball, and to these is, of course, added the pennant which is emblematic of all-around supremacy and which is given to the play center accumulating the highest total of points.

The play leaders were notified Monday morning of the desire of the recreation authorities to continue the diversified program of activities for the children begun last year, which includes not only participation in the four major playground sports, but also in other types of athletics suited to in the varying ages of the children, and in the production of plays, pageants and minstrel shows.

Each instructor is now allowed to arrange with other centers in the staging of some of the minor sport contests upon sending proper notification to the superintendent. These matches are permitted to further encourage a spirit of competition and to assist the play instructors in acquiring points which are so necessary to the winning of the playground pennant.

PRONOUNCED EULOGY AT CHARLES TRANKLA FUNERAL

Rev. Dr. Whitney Bishop of Lansing, Mich., formerly of this city, of which he is a native, made the address last Wednesday afternoon in Grand Rapids, Mich., at the funeral of Charles Trankla, 72, who left Norwich 45 years ago to establish himself in the Michigan city.

Rev. Dr. Bishop spoke as follows:

Owing to Dr. Merriam's absence from the city, I have been called to preside over these last services in honor and memory of your esteemed townsman and fellow citizen, Mr. Charles Trankla. As a former pastor of his, this is perhaps not unfitting. Yet I fancy there is a reason underlying this just mentioned.

Mr. Trankla and I were born and reared in the same New England city, a small city in eastern Connecticut, so beautiful for situation and inherent loveliness that its wide known appellation was "The Rose of New England." There were also stalwart citizens living in those days, known and respected for their energy and forcefulness throughout the commonwealth. A high type of political, educational and religious life was manifested by them. Abraham Lincoln leaned hard on Governor Buckingham and Governor Buckingham lived in Norwich. Lydia Sigourney wielded a facile reputation as a writer. Professor William Hutchinson at the old academy was an educational landmark for all the vicinage. Daniel Coit Gilman, a son of Norwich, was president of Johns Hopkins university, which the forbearers of the Dwights of Yale and of Grover Cleveland rooted in the soil. Even though I have lived in varied habitats, my boyish impressions that "there were giants in those days" has only been confirmed.

I know that these early surroundings had their due weight of influence on Mr. Trankla and that he often reviewed them in memory. I think I am not shooting wide of the mark in saying that Mr. Trankla saw regularly a copy of The Norwich Bulletin during all the years he has been absent from his native heath. And this in no sense implies that his life and energies were not joyously and gladly given to this, his adopted city. It means only that the homing pigeon instinct was strong in him, stronger in him than in many, and that he had both the time and the desire to think of old friends, recall old scenes, and ruminate on early environment and impressions.

After leaving school and serving an apprenticeship in the old-fashioned dry goods firm of Hyslop, Porteous & Mitchell, Mr. Trankla trekked west, following the advice of Horace Greeley, as so many New England boys have always done. He selected as the scene of his life's activities a city beautifully situated on a river, as his native city had been. Here he entered a commercial life with the quiet efficiency and persistent determination that was in his blood.

The record runs, I believe, 45 years. Forty-five years in the same business at the old stand, nearly all of the time as manager and much of the time as owner. Forty-five years of industry, of integrity, of progress. For with the expansion of the city came the corresponding expansion of the trade. As these years of business experience have passed, Mr. Trankla has seen the high road of business prosperity, the low road of business depression, and the misty flats between, there the times come and go. Through it all he has stood staunchly at the helm, piloting the old landmark of the Boston store to the harbor of security and approval. As one of the substantial builders of the community he has always had honorable recognition from his co-workers, whether in store or bank, and this substantial concourse of comrades and the visible floral tributes of the hour are witnesses of their esteem.

Our friend was not unmindful of those groups of folks in voluntary and comradely organizations such as lodge and church, and to them lent his presence and assistance, although he was not aggressive along these lines. He was not given to display, to ostentation, to over-much self-seeking. He was a quiet, poised, rather reserved, thoughtful man whose chief delight was in the home atmosphere amidst kith and kin and old friends. It was a dark day for him when his life-companion went on before. But the balance was partially restored in the still continuing and loving ministrations of a devoted family household.

And now the advancing years have brought the final and inevitable separation. There is a massive solemnity as well as a poignant sorrow when a worthy human personality leaves us for the Great Adventure. Only in imagination can we keep pace with him. Our experience ends just where his begins. No Virgil is at hand to conduct us into El Paradiso. We have to compose ourselves and peer across the Great Gap as best we may. Still it is not all dark. I had a baby daughter when I was one of you. One night we started to go down stairs hand in hand to the darkened hall-way below. We had taken only the first step when she stopped, softly disengaged her hand from mine, and pointing down stairs complained tremulously, "Daddy, a' dark, a' dark." I took her in my arms and proceeded. The little body quivered, but at the bottom of the stairs I threw the switch on and the lower hall-way was flooded with light. A gurgle of delight was the babe's instant response. Is it too great a stretch of the imagination to conceive of the All-Father turning on the light as His sons and daughters go down the stairs? Jesus with His high knowledge assumed that such would be the case. He did not argue it, He did not dogmatize about it, He simply assumed it. "In my Father's house are many dwelling places. If it were not so, I would have told you." The consolations of philosophy, the visions of seers and poets, the trend of evolution, as well as the starry declarations of the New Testament are meant for such parting hours as this.

Twenty years ago there lived on one of your avenues an aged man well along in the '80's. He kept a diary. In that diary he recorded his deepest thoughts from year to year. Most of these thoughts were profound and intelligently expressed. Before his funeral services, his daughter placed the diary in my hands. I perused it with growing interest. One of his ripe conclusions was this—"When I was a boy I was taught that I was a body and somehow or other possessed a spirit. I now see how utterly inadequate such a conception was. I am a spirit, and I have a body!" So be it. To the materialist and to the mechanician human life is merely the functioning of body cells; thoughts are merely brain cells reacting to outside stimuli; and character is only behaviorism responding to environment. Doubtless there is partial truth in this concept. But that it is the full-arched truth, arching the unseen vistas which stretch out before our continually progressing feet seems to me to be negatived by both facts and imagination.

There is a witness of the spirit within man. The age-old query of Job, "If a man die, shall he live again?" is answered by the poet's inner ecstacy, "I am immortal, I know it, I feel it." The men of electrons and cosmic rays are inclined to minimise this witness, but the Great Hearts understand. Cried Hopefull to Christian as they entered the last reaches of the Jordan, "I have touched bottom, and it is good." There is a genuine substance to the right kind of faith. Victor Hugo, master of prose, blew on a silver bugle his last thoughts. "You say the soul is nothing but the resultant of bodily powers. Why, then, is my soul more luminous when my bodily powers begin to fail? Winter is on my head, but eternal spring is in my heart. For half a century, I have been writing my thoughts in prose and in verse: History, philosophy, drama, tradition, satire, ode and song. I have tried all. But I feel I have not said the thousandth part of what is in me. When I go down to the grave I can say like many others, 'I have finished my day's work.' But I cannot say, 'I have finished my life.' My day's work will begin the next morning. The tomb is not a blind alley; it is a thoroughfare. It closes on the twilight, it opens on the dawn."

No earnest, upright, conscientious, hard-working man ever lives in vain whether it be in the marts of trade or in the atmosphere of the professions, whether in humble station or in the seats of the mighty. "Whatever is excellent, as God lives, is permanent." We bid farewell, for a season, to our quiet, unassuming, yet effective comrade, but we will not forget. Forty-five years of constructive application, of substantial integrity, of home and community loyalty, have woven themselves into the warp and woof of this local commonwealth. "O man, what doth the Lord require of thee but to do justly, to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?"

The funeral was held at Mr. Trankla's home, 113 Packard avenue, the active bearers being veteran employes of the Boston store, of which Mr. Trankla was owner. These were John L. Zant, Anthony Worm, Martin Seymour, J. Rietberg, Joseph Cornelisse, Harry A. Bean, John Docksey and Herbert Williams. The honorary bearers were Joseph H. Brewer, Dudley E. Waters, Charles H. Bender, John K. Burch, Alvan D. Crimmins, Martin J. Dregge, Lee M. Hutchins, S. A. Morman, D. C. Steketee, William M. Wurzburg, Paul Steketee and William F. Keeney. Burial was in Oak Hill cemetery. Mr. Trankla's death occurred on Saturday night, July 5, at Blodgett hospital, where an emergency operation for acute appendicitis had been performed early Friday morning. A sharp decline was noted in his condition Saturday evening and oxygen was used in an effort to extend life.

At the bedside were his sisters, Miss Hattie Trankla of 113 Packard avenue, S. E., with whom he had made his home since the death of his wife 17 years ago, and Mrs. J. A. Mohrhardt; his daughter, Mrs. C. Raymond Viele, and her husband, and his grandson, Charles Trankla Viele.

The Grand Rapids Press of July 7 said:

Mr. Trankla has not had full health the past two years and a year ago Mr. Viele, vice-president and general manager of the store, took over its active management. Joseph F. Quimby, veteran executive of the firm, is secretary and treasurer.

Mr. Trankla established the Boston store with John Porteous of Norwich, Conn., in 1885. A year ago he bought full interest in the store, which has been at 145-55 Monroe avenue, since its organization. Mr. Trankla had been head of the store since its inception.

He was one of the oldest members of the board of directors of the Grand Rapids National bank. He belonged to the Peninsular club, Highlands Country club and the Elks lodge.

Mr. Trankla was born at Norwich, Conn., and in 1880 married Miss May C. Webster of that city. He came to Grand Rapids five years later.

Besides those who were at his bedside, the relatives are Edward Carl Trankla of Alhambra, Calif., son; two brothers, Frank Trankla of Seattle and Leonard Trankla of New York, and a granddaughter, Mrs. J. Theodore Johnson of Paris, France. Edward Trankla is flying from Los Angeles to Kansas City. He will continue from there to Chicago by train and will be met at Chicago by Mr. Viele's automobile. He is expected here late Tuesday

In his letter that accompanied his entry Mr. Hermance said that he was bringing with him five or six other Canadian players of high standing in the Dominion, several of whom will be entered in the Canadian open the following week.

Among other entries received Monday was that of Louis G. Ripley of New York who was a popular figure at last year's tournament. Harold F. Hanigan, former member of the Norwich club, will be here for the tournament along with Frank Welch and several others from New Jersey and Pennsylvania. The entry of Bob Wilson of New Bedford has been received among others from the Bay State. Wilson is one of the ranking players of the Massachusetts courses and will prove a threat to those seeking honors in the championship flight.

Another boy that is expected to enter in the tournament is Sam Wilcox of Wilmington, Del., who has been playing brilliant golf this season. Wilcox, a former member of the club, was finalist in the first invitation tournament, losing to Lanman one up. Sam was to qualify for the National open that was just completed at Interlachen last week but fell short of the mark by a stroke or two.

There will be no starting times for the qualifying round but the play will be in twosomes starting early in the morning. After the qualifying round the committee will arrange the pairings and match play will start on Friday morning at 8 o'clock. With the entries coming in as they are now it is possible that the championship flight will be made up of 32 players instead of 16 as in previous years.

Among the entries so far received the favorites are Max Kaesche of Ridgewood, N. J., and Bud Geogahan of Middletown but this is only because of their known ability and prominence in tournaments in the state. Whether W. K. Lanman, twice winner of the Noyes trophy, will compete this year is not known but if he does he must be classed as one of the favorites although beaten last year by Kaesche. The Canadian contingent may produce golfers that will be in the running. Dave Morton and E. G. McKay are the outstanding hopes for the local club. Morton was eliminated by Kaesche last year one up in the semi-finals, the match going to the 19th hole.

CITIZENS AND SMOKERS IN CITY LOOP CLASH TONIGHT

The Polish Citizens and Smoke Shop teams will play the first game on this week's bill, inasmuch as last night's tilt between the Italians and Ideals could not be played owing to wet grounds, although weather conditions appeared to be quite favorable.

The Cits are out to cop tonight's contest and they are presenting their full strength on the field with either Johnny Greene, who worked so impressively in his last start, or his brother Boots Greene taking the slab, with Lamory on the receiving end.

Magnan, Smoke Shop star, has been selected as Manager Hednor's choice for the Smoke Shop, with Goldblatt receiving, and it must be said that although the Smoke Shop team are in the cellar position, most of their games have been hard fought contests with the winning teams coming out on top with little to spare.

MANY UPSETS IN RACING AT KALAMAZOO

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 14—(AP)—Opening day of Kalamazoo's Grand Circuit meeting saw many favorites upset. Not one landed first money in any of three events. In the 2:18 trot, Peter Locanda upset the dope by beating Shirley handily in straight heats. All the talent liked Sir Walter in the 2:12 pace and while he took the second heat, Sir Retawah, driven by Sep Palin, captured the first and third heats in 2:02 1-4.

Shenandoah the Parshall entry was picked to win the open claiming trot, but after winning the first heat he was cleanly outtrotted by Gay Volo in the next two heats.

There will be 17 starters in the great American Pacing Derby tomorrow. Eight or ten of these are credited with a chance to win first money in the $25,000 purse.

BATTALINO-FERNANDEZ BOUT WILL TAKE PLACE TONIGHT

HARTFORD, July 14—(AP)—A heavy rainstorm today forced postponement of the championship featherweight fight between Bat Battalino and Ignacio Fernandez, challenger, from tonight until tomorrow night.

The contest, one of 15 rounds, will be staged in Hurley stadium, where Battalino won his title from Andre Routis last September.

The fighters weighed in this afternoon at 2 o'clock and will not be required to weigh in again tomorrow. The champion scaled 125 1-2, while Fernandez weighed 126, the division limit.

This will be their second meeting. In a non-title bout last February, Battalino was given the decision after ten blistering rounds.

BIG CROWD EXPECTED AT AMATEURS TONIGHT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 14—Given good weather, an outpouring of boxing fans is expected to be at the North street open air arena Tuesday night for a card of eight amateur bouts. One of the bouts that is expected to prove especially fast and exciting is that scheduled between Russell Martin of Webster, who knocked out Young Gravel of Moosup in a bout here two weeks ago, and Kid Berlanger of Worcester.

These boys, still battling as amateurs are fully good enough to graduate into professional ranks. They have learned many tricks of the game and both are fast and capable.

Battling Smelzy of Jewett City is going to take on Kid Brouillard of Danielson, younger brother of Dynamite Lou. The kid is a promising young battler, and has his big brother's habits of knocking opposition kicking. Ray Landry of Danielson, who resembles Rene Peloquin in his boring in style of fighting, is taking on Mike Prescott of Worcester. At the last amateur show here Landry won a sensational one-round knockout victory over Leo Paradise of Moosup.

Willie Thibeault of Danielson and Kid Tourney of Webster are to meet for the second time in a fornight. Two weeks ago Thibeault lost a decision to Tourney by a shade, and promises to reverse the verdict Tuesday night. Kid Forcier of Webster and Patsy Long of Worcester also should be a fine bout. From a long list of available amateurs who will be on hand clamoring for a chance to climb into the ring, Promoter Louis Peloquin will select pairs for the remaining bouts.

CAMPERS TAKE TIGHT GAME FROM ACCOS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

JEWETT CITY, July 14.—The Campers won from the Accos in a fight-to-the-finish game this evening by the score of 5 to 4 in the Jewett City Twilight league and stepped into second place in the standing. A seventh-inning rally by the rayonmakers failed by a hair to tie the score, with the last man out at first by inches as a man came over the plate. Out of five hits made by the Campers off Gaudette four were bunts. Errors by the Campers' shortstop were responsible for the tying of the score in the fourth frame.

RAIN CAUSES POSTPONEMENT OF SHENECOSSETT TOURNEY

NEW LONDON, July 14.—(AP)—The rank and file of women golfers at the Shenecossett Country club tonight were counting on help from a waterlogged course in the battle to keep one of five Pennsylvania favorites from winning medal honors tomorrow in the qualifying round of the club's 12th annual invitation tournament.

The 18-qualifying test, scheduled for today, was postponed because of an all-day rainstorm which put some parts of the Eastern Point course several inches under water.

Heading the favorites were Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, of Philadelphia, twice winner of the Griswold trophy, emblematic of the Shenecossett championship; and Edith Quier, of Reading, Pa., winner last year. Three other Pennsylvania stars expected to make a fight for the title were Frances Williams, of Bethlehem, Pa., Mrs. Helen B. Stetson and Mrs. Helen Payson Corson, both of Philadelphia.

About 20 women were on the course today when the rain came down in a torrential outburst. Several had finished the 18-hole round but no scores had been posted officially when the postponement was announced. Those who had finished the round were given the choice of posting their scores tomorrow or playing the round over again. The 32 qualifiers will begin match play for the Griswold trophy on Wednesday.

Among the withdrawals were Glenna Collett, Maureen Orcutt and Helen Hicks, "Big Three" of the Metropolitan district.

TIGERS POUND SENATOR PITCHERS FOR VICTORY

DETROIT, July 14.—(AP)—The Tigers got to two Washington pitchers for 13 hits and won today, 8 to 4, to make it three to one for Detroit in the current series.

Six of the eight runs came during a continuous assault which lasted through the first and second innings. Dale Alexander had a gala day with the war club, driving in five runs with three singles and a double. Gehringer and Rice each got triples.

Hadley started for the Senators and gave way to Brown after the game had been lost.

Junior League Game Tonight.

Wet grounds blotted out last night's game in the Junior league between the Rotary club and the Y. M. C. A. The game will be played at a later date.

Tonight's game in the league will be between the I. Y. M. C. and the Duwells. Both teams are going strong and should put up a fine exhibition. The Duwells are tied for first place with the Rotary and are out to break the tie and keep their slate clean. The Italian club lost a tough one to the Rotary last week 3 to 2, so they will no doubt give the Duwells a stiff fight. Probable batteries are Stephanik and Kos for the Duwells and Connell and Angelone for the I. Y. M. C.

Game shall start at 6:30 p. m. sharp.

Grove Loses Verdict.

NEW YORK, July 14—(AP)—Johnny Indrisano, Boston welter weight, outboxed and outslugged Izzy Grove of New York, to gain an easy ten round decision at Henderson's Bowl, Coney Island, tonight. Indrisano scaled 151; Grove 160 1-2.

This happened a number of years ago so it will do one no harm if it is told now.

It seems that a local team and one from a neighboring town were engaged in a very bitter series for the baseball supremacy of the section of the state in which the towns were located. The game was played in Norwich and as the game progressed it was certain that the visiting pitcher was putting it all over the local boys. He had a very deceptive outcurve that was making them break their backs to hit.

Along about the fifth or sixth inning the umpire, whose name we will not mention, devised a way in which the locals would know when the outcurve was coming. He informed the home boys that he could tell when the pitcher was going to throw the curve as he was umpiring from in back of the pitcher's box. It was agreed that every time the outcurve was coming he would slap his leg and the batter would know that the pitcher was going to hurl the outcurve.

The first man batting for the locals went to bat. The pitcher wound up and the umpire slapped his leg. The batter stepped up on the ball and smacked out a nice hit to left field. The next batter up got the same signal and he likewise stepped up and banged a nice hit to the outfield. The plan was working to perfection. Then came Charlie to bat.

The pitcher adjusted the ball in his hand and the umpire saw that it was the outcurve again so he slapped his leg. Just as he slapped his leg the catcher shook his head to the pitcher and the signals were changed. Charlie was expecting an outcurve and the umpire had forgotten to carry out the plan to a point where he could inform the batter that the signals had been changed.

As the pitcher wound up Charlie grinned and took a step forward. He was going to sock the old apple before it had a chance to curve. The ball zipped toward the batter but there was no curve to it and Charlie was in its path. The ball bounced about 40 feet off Charlie's head and over the backstop and Charlie went out like a light.

He was carried off the field and the contents of the water pail were poured over him. In a minute or two Charlie regained his senses and opened his eyes to look up into the face of the umpire.

A most disgusted expression spread over Charlie's face and he said, "Huh, you're a wise guy ain't you?"

KALAMAZOO, Mich., July 14—(AP)—An open race in which each of half a dozen horses has a large following is in prospect for the seventh running of the $25,000 great American Pacing Derby at Recreation park tomorrow.

H. M. Parshall, of Urbana, Ohio, driver of Counterpart, which won last year, has entered Bin Direct. Other favorites are Alexander Direct, Blushing Beauty, Calumet Adam, Dean Wilson and Enoch Guy.

GOSLIN HAS SLIGHT ATTACK OF APPENDICITIS

ST. LOUIS, July 14—(AP)—Goose Goslin, St. Louis Brown's hitting ace and star outfielder, will be missing from the lineup for several days at least as result of an attack of appendicitis which sent him to a hospital today. Dr. Robert F. Hyland, club surgeon, said Goslin was in no immediate danger and an operation probably would not be necessary.

BOBBY JONES GIVEN ROYAL WELCOME AS HE RETURNS WITH THREE CROWNS

ATLANTA, Ga., July 14— (AP) — Bobby Jones, all highest of golf, came home today to receive the greatest reception in the history of Atlanta.

And too, Bobby wanted to hear little Bobby III whistle.

Down through the city's main thoroughfares atop an open car, Bobby rode to the cheers of thousands. Street urchins and millionaires added their voices to the outpouring of the city's hero worship.

Bobby's father and his wife rode with him. The little Jones tots were in another car. Hours earlier than expected, Bobby had slipped into town and was with the youngsters while newspapermen tried to locate him without result until the start of the parade. He was listening to the whistle that little Bobby told grand daddy to tell daddy about up in New York.

The parade started at noon and moved to the city hall, where Mayor Ragsdale presented Bobby with a scroll and a golden key.

The make-up of the parade was decidedly democratic. Soldiers in olive drab followed brilliantly costumed drum and bugle corps and pretty women golfers in a huge white tallyho added charm to the show. Uncle Sam and John Bull rode in an ancient Victoria drawn by two mules and Negro caddies beamed widely as they smiled on "Mr. Bob."

Bobby didn't start with the parade but joined it a block farther down. From the Capital City club, Bobby and his party entered the official automobile, preceded by a truck carrying the British open and amateur and American open trophies.

Immediately in front of the Jones auto was the riot squad of the police department and in the rear, two motorcycle officers.

There was just room enough for the parade cars to move.

Ticker tape fluttered from the tops of skyscrapers and every office building window was filled, often with smiling girls who were doing their bit of ticker tape tossing.

It was a big day for the Negro caddies. Each division carried a banner in typical language of the dark-skinned golf bag carriers and the familiar "check and double check" appeared often. To them he is the greatest man in the world.

Bobby, facing a battery of newspaper cameras and talking news reel apparatus, stepped up to the microphone to talk to the vast crowd assembled at the city hall and found his public speaking on such an occasion hadn't improved like his golf.

The champion today broke his record and spoke for almost two minutes, including applause.

Here are Bobby's words:

"Your welcome makes it impossible for me to say much. It has fairly taken my breath away.

"I had no idea any such affair was planned. As a matter of fact, I had expected to be met at the station by a taxi and nothing more.

"I appreciate all the things you have done for me, more than I can tell you. And I just want to say you don't think any more of me than I do of you."

YANKEES SPLIT EVEN IN DOUBLEHEADER WITH CHI

CHICAGO, July 14.—(AP)—Manager Bob Shawkey found a pitcher that could go the route, and New York and Chicago broke even in today's doubleheader, the White Sox taking the weird opener 10 to 9 and the Yankees the nightcap, 7 to 2.

Charles Ruffing, the Boston Red Sox castoff, was the Yankee pitcher to go nine innings, holding the Sox to nine scattered hits in the second contest. Lou Gehrig connected with his second home run of the day to aid Ruffing.

The first game produced nearly every type of baseball. Each team made four errors, the Sox tied the American league double play record with five, left 14 men stranded on the bases and then finally won out in the last half of the ninth when Lazzeri juggled Watwood's hit, which went for a single, and Reynolds slid across the plate with the winning run. Pat Caraway got credit for the victory although Red Faber and Hal McKain did most of the work on the mound.

ATHLETICS NOSE OUT BROWNS IN ELEVENTH

ST. LOUIS, July 14.—(AP)—The world's champion Philadelphia Athletics needed two extra innings to defeat the St. Louis Browns for the third straight time here today, 9 to 7, and thereby gaining an additional foothold on first place in the American league race.

The Browns tied the score in the eighth, and again in the tenth but failed to cross the plate after the Athletics pushed two across in the first of the 11th.

Lefty Grove got credit for another victory by coming into the game in the eighth inning when Quinn got into trouble after relieving Earnshaw.

WESTERLY

STERLING MAN JAILED FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 14. — Charles Henry Rainsford of Sterling, Conn., was brought before the court by R. I State Police Sergt. Ernest F. Stenhouse, charged on July 13 with the operation of an automobile in Hopkinton while under the influence of liquor. The defendant was brought to Westerly shortly after midnight on Sunday and locked up at the Westerly police station by a R. I. state trooper, when he found him operating an auto, L-5966, at 10:30 p. m., which had been complained of by passing motorists. The arrest was made on Hope Valley hill and the driver was observed to have barely missed striking three telegraph poles and a fence. Dr. M. H. Scanlon pronounced him under the influence of liquor following his arrest.

On his plea of guilty he was so judged and ordered committed to Providence county jail for ten days. Two empty beer bottles were found in his car and five full ones by the state police.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

At School and at Home

My teacher doesn't think I read
So very special well,
She's always saying: "What was that
Last word?" and makes me spell
And then pronounce it after her,
As slow as slow can be.
"You'd better take a little care,"
That's what she says to me.
"Or else I'm really 'fraid you'll find,
Some one of these days,
You're 'way behind the Primer Class."
That's what my teacher says.

But when I'm at my grandpa's house,
He hands me out a book,
And lets me choose a place to read,
And then he'll sit and look
At me and listen, just as pleased!
I know it from his face.
And when I read a great, long word
"He'll say: "Why, little Grace!
You'll have to teach our deestrict school,
Some one o' these bright days!
Mother, you come and hear this child."
That's what my grandpa says!
—Elizabeth L. Gould in St. Nicholas

He Needs Both

About the time the school lets out it will be swimmin' time,
And all of us kids can hike out to hills
that we can climb;
And we can stay out there all day, the way kids like to do,
And we can go in swimmin' every day
a time or two;
And that's the kind of exercise that make a fella grow!
My mother doesn't like us to, because she worries so
For fear we might get cramps and might get drowned dead some day—
A fella's mother almost always worries
thataway.

And if it wasn't for the fathers fellas'
have, I know
That almost every time we want to go we couldn't go;
We couldn't go and climb the hills, and couldn't climb the trees,
And couldn't go in water any deeper than our knees—
And how could fellas dive in that and have the kind of fun
We have a-goin' in deep holes an'
splashin' in the sun.

And chaw-raw-beefin' fellas' shirts, till school takes in in Fall?
A fella might as well stay in and not get out at all!
A fella's lucky when he's got a mother like I've got;
Because a fella likes to be loved-up an awful lot;
And he is lucky when he's got my kind of father, too;
Because a father knows the things a fella ought to do
To stretch his muscles so he'll grow:
he's got to climb and play
And swim a lot, and go on hikes and stay away all day;
A fella's father was a boy, his mother never was;
And that is why she worries and loves us the way she does.
—Judd Mortimer Lewis, in Houston Post.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

All the members of the Wide Awake circle have seen an elephant, but have you noticed the different parts of its anatomy, such as the tusks or teeth. As a rule when one sees an elephant chained to stakes or being driven about the circus grounds he comments upon its size and its long trunk through which he playfully squirts water upon the bystanders.

Did you know that the elephant has no cutting teeth, like most animals, but only a series of molars. These molars, or grinders, as they wear away, gradually move forward in the jaw, and the remnant of the tooth when the surface is completely destroyed is cast out in front. The same molar can thus be replaced as many as eight times.

The tusks, which are only enormously-elongated teeth, can be renewed only once. This wearing process and the ejection of the stump of the tooth go on very slowly during the life of the elephant. Only one or two teeth at a time are in use, or in view, in each jaw. There are always other teeth waiting to pass forward and begin their work, although there is a limit to this succession, for, when the last has come into use and been worn down, the elephant can no longer chew his food and must die of starvation, if he has not already succumbed to old age.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

A Thrilling Adventure

Dear Uncle Jed: One bright moonlight evening my friend and her brother and my brother and I were wandering aimlessly up and down the beach at Sea Gate when we came to a small bluff overlooking the sea where we stopped and sat down.

While sitting here we noticed a large object on the water which we made out to be a schooner. As vessels seldom came here we scrutinized this one carefully, and soon we saw a pirate's flag flying from the mast.

By this time the vessel had anchored, and the men had come ashore and were actively unloading the large schooner.

Overcome by fear and curiosity we hid among the shrubs, in a way convenient for us to watch the crew.

Although our fear was great and we would have liked to run away, our curiosity was greater still and we determined to stay.

One of the men who seemed to be the captain, ordered the men to dig, and dig they did!

They dug so rapidly that they soon had a hole so deep that they themselves could not be seen.

Then they clambered out and hurriedly brought from the shore large bales, boxes and bulging bundles, which they had unloaded from the schooner.

When these had been stowed into the excavation they covered all with dirt and put shrubs in the place where the hole had been, even we who had watched their movements so carefully could not be sure of the exact spot.

Presently they went on board the ship and made off to sea.

All that time we had been crouching behind the bushes, afraid to even whisper for fear of being overheard.

We now rose and hurried home as fast as our stiffened limbs could carry us.

Although we searched and made inquiries we never heard of the mysterious crew nor could we find the hidden treasure.

Saves Girl's Life

Dear Uncle Jed: Not very long ago I was taking one my daily tasks of walking through my uncle's flower garden, when shrieks of agony broke the silence but died down to low moans.

I went toward where the sound came from and I found a girl just as old as I lying on the ground clutching her wrist. She was unable to speak.

A blood vessel was severed and her wrist bled profusely. I quickly made a tourniquet of a large handkerchief and placed it in the cut.

I dragged her as fast as I could to the river which flowed past my uncle's farm. I put her in a boat and rowed to the city as rapidly as I could. I tried to talk to her but the only thing she told me, was she hurt her wrist on a wire fence trying to find the road. That did not suit my curiosity, but I had to wait until she felt better.

I reached the city in due time, found a taxi, and made great haste to find a surgeon whom I had no trouble in locating.

I waited patiently in the waiting room until the surgeon appeared and said, "You are a brave girl for saving that girl's life by your carefulness."

I felt highly complimented by his words as I left the office. I never saw the girl again.

This is the first letter I have written you. I hope you will enjoy my letter.

Morning

Dear Uncle Jed: The gray mist is rising off the earth. The air is silent but is often broken by the loud cry of the whipoorwill. Dawn has arrived at last, the follower of the night.

From the east the first glimmer of daylight is seen, the rays of the rising sun. The birds begin their work feeding their young and singing as they work. Farmers are busy in their barns feeding and watering their livestock. Robins go hopping along the dewy lanes searching for worms. While the morning glories and sun flowers lift their faces toward the rising sun.

The long toilsome day has now begun anew with all its troubles as well as joys.

At Crescent Park

Dear Uncle Jed: This story tells you how I spent the Fourth.

At 11:30 my mother, a friend of mine and I took a bus for Providence. We had our lunches and bathing suits with us.

After a ride of about an hour we reached Providence and there we changed buses for Crescent Park. It was a ride of about 25 minutes before we reached there.

We went to the picnic ground, where a band was playing a popular piece, to eat our lunches. While we were eating our lunches we were entertained by tight-rope walkers who had a little monkey with them.

Finishing our lunches we arose to go to the amusement part of the park. We came to the Pitt. We went through this. It was quite interesting.

From there we went over to a stand where you were given rings for a dime and articles to ring. I managed to get a mysterious mirror.

My friend and I then decided to go on the Dodgems, and instead of going on once we went on twice.

We went on several other things and then took the bus to Providence and then to Putnam.

I arrived home in time to see some very attractive fireworks which were visible from my veranda.

After a happy and peaceful Fourth I was tired enough to retire.

Picnic at Park

Dear Uncle Jed: June 28 our church school had a picnic at Mohegan park. We went in a large bus and other cars. The deer are so tame they ate leaves from our hands. I had several boat rides and some went in bathing. We had a nice lunch with ice cream and lemonade. Some of the children had money to buy candy, but were disappointed as the store was not open. The flowers were pretty and we liked the swings and slide. The day ended without any accidents. One girl lost her bathing suit. I hope we go there next year. Our school finished June 19. I am in the fourth grade. I got a certificate for perfect attendance for one year, signed by the governor of the state of Connecticut, John H. Trumbull. If some fourth grader will write to me I will answer the letter.

Raises Vegetables

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about my vacation. We have lots of fun in the country. Most every day we go swimming, then we have fun ducking each other.

I have a small garden. I use the vegetables to exhibit at the fair, or to sell them. I keep some for our own use.

We love to go wading in the brook. The water is very cold. Sometimes we give our dog, Niger, a bath.

When we get the hay in and lift it up on the loft, I sit on the horse's back and drive him.

The Fox in the Well

Dear Uncle Jed: A fox, having fallen into a well, tried by sticking its claws into the sides to keep his head above water. Soon after a wolf came and peeped over the brink. To him the fox appealed very earnestly for assistance, begging he would help him to rope, or something of the kind, which might aid him to escape. The wolf, moved with compassion at his misfortune, could not forbear expressing his concern.

"Ah! poor Reynard," said he, "I am sorry for you with all my heart. How could you possibly come into this sad condition?" "Nay, friend," replied the fox, "if you wish me well do not stand pitying me, but lend me some help as fast as you can. For pity is but cold comfort when one is up to the chin in water and within a hair's breadth of drowning."

Willy and Harry

Dear Uncle Jed: Willy and Harry are brothers and they live in a city far out on the prairies in Illinois and Harry is much older than Willy, but they love each other very much and frolic together a great deal. It makes Willy a little man to play with his elder brother and Harry a better man to play with his younger brother.

Visits Grandma

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write and tell you about my vacation last year. I went up to grandma's and stayed pretty near all the time and had lots of candy. My grandpa has a store and sometimes I go on the route with him. We go after the cow at night.

I came home and mama and I went to Westerly and stayed three weeks. I had lots of fun watching the trolleys. My uncle has a good many cows and black horses. Their names are Ned and Dick. He has an auto. I came home Labor day and went to school the next day.

PENDLETON HILL

Barn yard golf seems to be very popular. It is rumored that a tournament is contemplated. Harry Pierce champions the game and the tournament.

The hikers, eight in number, visited Tuesday the Graylands by way of the Greenwood Lane, thence to Mrs. Nyes' back of White Birch park on for a call on Judge and Mrs. Charles Palmer, Mrs. Agnes Best and Mrs. Charles Miner, stopping for refreshments at Michael Kavanagh's shop on their way back to the Hill.

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Palmer who attended their Wyassup picnic, Fourth of July, are still talking about the good time they had.

Miss Mildred Johnson has a prize garden. Nasturtiums in bloom, zinnia buds ready to burst, beets and beet greens July first. The beets were planted May ninth. Miss Mildred is a nine-year old gardener.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Johnson, Miss Mildred Johnson and Harry Pierce, have a large acreage under cultivation with crops in extra fine condition. Mr. Pierce, the ploughman, calls it fifteen acres, and he ought to know.

Miss Elva Ross of Detroit, who spent many years of her early childhood with Mr. and Mrs. Oswald Koestinen and attended the Hill school, is spending the summer with Mr. and Mrs. Koestinen. Miss Ross is now a junior in a Detroit high school. The Koestinens' have as another guest a young gentleman from New York, a senior at DeWitt Clinton high school, a school of over nine thousand pupils.

Paul Koestinen has about forty sheep and nearly that number of lambs.

Mr. and Mrs. Birdsey Palmer are entertaining guests from New York.

Leo Rood who is traveling for his health, is reported as somewhat improved.

LARGE GAINS WERE MADE IN NUMEROUS SPECIALTIES IN THE STOCK MARKET

NEW YORK, July 14—(AP)—Operations for the advance were pursued vigorously on the stock exchange today. The move, sponsored by a small group of bullish professionals, rallied prominent shares two to seven points, with larger gains in numerous specialties.

Wheat and corn firmed after early heaviness, but cotton was easy, July and new October making new lows for the season prior to a partial recovery that reduced the net losses to nominal size. Bonds lost much of their recent strength, but the market managed to hold firm on a reduced turnover.

Saturday's rally in stocks apparently went far toward strengthening confidence in the bull camp. The average advance of 90 leading issues was 3.4 points and the volume of trading increased to around 2,700,000 shares, the largest of the month, although small compared to recent standards. There was, however, little or no evidence of an extensive public participation.

The market opened irregularly higher and became stronger as the morning progressed. Reactionary tendencies crept in around noon, but the list regained its momentum before the forenoon improvement had been lost and gradually extended its gains to the close.

Many of the old time pool favorites were active. Vanadium, Worthington Pump, Radio Keith Orpheum, J. I. Case, Allied Chemical, Electric Auto Lite and Columbia Carbon were bid up sharply. Efforts toward extending the rise were furthered by the strength in American Can, General Electric, American Tobacco, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, North American, Consolidated Gas, U. S. Steel, Atchison, Union Pacific, Nickel Plate, New York Central and Houston Oil, which rallied 2 to 5 points. Late in the day the amusement shares and the motor accessories were under accumulation.

Money was plentiful and call loans eased to 2 per cent from the renewal rate of 2 1-2.

American Telephone's financial statement reported small increases in net for the first half year and for the second quarter, with per share earnings slightly below the corresponding figures for a year ago, due to larger capitalization in 1930. Walter S. Gifford, president of the company, said that although the volume of general industrial activity in the first six months continued "distinctly below" that of 1929, "comparisons with performances in 1928 have not generally made an unfavorable showing."

Another report of interest to Wall street, was the announcement of record June sales by the Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company. Its business last month showed an eight per cent gain over June, 1929.

Stocks up two to three points net included American Telephone, U. S. Steel, American Can, General Electric, Sears Roebuck, Radio Keith Orpheum, Electric Power and Light, New York Central, Fox and Union Carbide. Such shares as DuPont, Westinghouse Electric, Nickel Plate, Stewart Warner, North American, R. H. Macy, Eastman Kodak and Johns Manville gained 4 to 5, Norfolk and Western, Vanadium, J. I. Case, Electric Auto Lite and Worthington Pump, 7, and Allied Chemical, 9.

Foreign exchanges rates were firm. Both sterling cables and the French franc improved slightly.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 14—(AP)—Treasury receipts for July 11 were $5,386,571.62; expenditures $16,212,881.41; balance $239,602,272.34.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 14—(AP)—The curb market gave one of the best displays of strength in weeks today, to the accompaniment of rumors of a revival of the long dormant bull party. Gains, as a rule, were moderate, but the advance embraced almost the entire list.

The advance was regarded in some quarters, with caution, however, for the recently over-sold condition of the market alone, it was felt, would naturally lead to a substantial rally. Although sales aggregated 827,900 shares, the largest turnover in three weeks, trading was still light according to present day standards.

Utilities were fairly active. Electric Bond and Share gained 2 points, and such issues as American Super Power, Middle West Utilities, United Light and Traction, and United Light A, closed up 1 or more. American and Foreign Power warrants closed more than 3 up, and among the stocks that normally move widely, Northern States A, gained 7. Oils were largely neglected. Cities Service was firm, closing up 1-2, but Vacuum lost about 2.

Several of the industrials and specialties in which the market is thin showed wide moves. Aluminum company sold up 18 3-4, and then slipped back 4 from the top. White Star Refining sold at 74 1-2, up 22 1-2 from the last recorded transaction. On the other hand, Van Camp preferred, long dormant, appeared at 50, off 24 1-2 and Consolidated Mining, at 199, off 34 1-2.

Among the more active industrials, Deere gained 4, and Driver Harris 8. Fox Theatres A, was more active than in a long while, moving up a point to 10. Technicolor and Columbia Pictures each rallied 2. Newmont Mining sold up six. Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea company, a lightly traded issue, gained 11 points in a few odd lot sales, perhaps in response to its June sales report showing a gain of over 8 per cent from June, 1929.

Investment trusts generally failed to join the advance. Trans-America sagged 1 1-2 to another new low at 20 1-2, and closed at 21 1-4. Goldman Sachs rose fractionally.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 14—(AP)—The forward movement of bonds was practically halted in a dull and irregular session today, with some of the most popular investment issues failing to hold the high marks reached in the sharp rise last week.

The greater portion of the list of standard railroad and utility bonds was steady to firm in a thin market, and where recessions occurred, the losses were small, reflecting some profit taking. Convertible rail issues were strong in moderate activity. Utilities moved irregularly higher, some touching new peaks for the year. The rest of the domestic list moved indifferently, with some wide fluctuations.

United States Governments were steady. In contrast with the domestic list, foreign bonds were relatively active and strong, as announcement was made that the $25,000,000 American portion of the Austrian government International Loan of 1930 would be offered tomorrow. The loan is the first by the Austrian government since 1923 and is offered at 96 to yield 7.40 per cent, carrying an interest rate of 7 per cent.

The greatest activity among railroad bonds was in convertible issues, and the St. Paul adjustment 5s was the only issue which failed to reflect the better tone of the share market. The feature of the group was the Atchison 4 1-2 which gained 2 points on a heavy turnover. Among lien issues the market for legal bonds was steady, for the most part, thin. Baltimore and Ohio refunding 5s, and Chicago Burlington and Quincy 4 1-2s sold at new highs in a thin market. Canadian Pacific 4s, Erie 5s, Louisville and Nashville 4 1-2s, Union Pacific and Atchison 4s, eased. Issues of Missouri Pacific, New York Central, Pennsylvania, Southern Railway, were steady.

Advances were mixed with losses in the utility list. Cincinnati Gas 4s Northern States Power 5s, Pacific Gas 5s, Detroit Edison 5s reached new highs. American Telephone issues moved irregularly lower.

Some wide fluctuations occurred among the rest of the domestic list. Warrant bonds loomed large in the day's dull session. Pathe Warrant 7s lost 1-2 point, while Paramount Public 7s gained about the same, and Loew's Warrant 6s rose 2 1-2 points. A heavy turnover occurred in Transcontinental Oil Warrant 6 1-2s which gained 1-4 to equal the year's high.

The upward trend was maintained by foreign issues, although some soft spots developed in the late trading. Australian bonds were under pressure, and the 5s lost more than a point. Brazil 6 1-2s dropped 1 1-2 points. Popular European Governments were dull and steady. German 5 1-2s continued their climb with 1-4 point gain and are now selling less than a point under their offering price of 90.

United States Governments were irregular.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

CHICAGO, July 14—(AP)—Crop damage reports from Canada and nearby states pushed wheat values upward as a rule today, but temporarily the market broke low price records.

The transient setback resulted from heavy sales in connection with a big movement of new winter wheat away from the harvest fields southwest and west, and from movement of the spring wheat harvest in South Dakota. Export purchases of wheat appeared to be enlarging, however, and future delivery wheat offerings here were scarce as the day closed.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous, 3-4a1c per bushel higher than Saturday's finish. Corn closed 1 3-4a2c advanced, oats 1-8c off to 1-2c up, and provisions varying from 5c decline to a rise of 10c.

Notwithstanding downturns in hog values, provisions averaged higher as a result of buying orders from sources east.

NEW FIREPROOF ADDITION TO THE HAVEN AT ABINGTON

THE HAVEN IS NOW MOST MODERN HOME FOR AGED IN THE STATE

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 14—The Haven home in Abington, one of Connecticut's most modern and up to date institutions for invalids and elderly people, is a Putnam product, as far as the constructional work in the buildings is concerned. Two Putnam contractors, Pierre H. Myers and George A. Winterburn, superintended its erection in a general and electrical way, respectively.

The general contracting work for the Haven's recently completed two and one-half story fire proof building was done by the Myers firm, while the electrification of the structure is the work of the Winterburn firm. Another Putnam concern installed the plumbing fixtures and services.

The building which was given by Mrs. T. Morris Murray of "Gwen Careg" farm, Abington and of Boston, is a beautifully designed institutional structure of brick, steel and concrete construction. Its floors are of concrete, conforming with underwriters standards for hospital buildings and all of its partitions are shielded with metal lathing, covered with plaster of considerable thickness. At strategic points throughout, fire doors of heavy metal are located for the purpose of retarding possible entrance of fire from the frame wing on the north side of the home.

Their presence enables occupants of the building to rest assured that with any outbreak of fire in adjoining buildings, they may be immediately isolated from danger by the timely closing of the doors. The floors are additionally strengthened by steel joists.

In the rear of the building is an elevator serving all floors. Its primary purpose is for the comfortable committing of patients conveyed to the Haven in ambulances. Large doors allow the ambulance to drive into the basement where the patient is removed to the lift and taken to a room without exposure. The basement is fitted with an electrical clothes drier, an invaluable piece of equipment.

The rooms, which are private, are bright cheery quarters equipped with modern furniture and hospital designed beds. An abundance of light is received through the many windows equipped with a glass especially designed for capturing all of the health giving units in the sun's rays. The rooms are also equipped with bells, wired to enunciators in the corridors.

In the rear is a large porch which is screened and outfitted with window casements and radiators in order that the quarters may be converted into a sun parlor in the winter time.

The kitchen, modern to the last word, is equipped with an electrical refrigerating plant and sanitary devices for the disposal of collected food waste.

The decorative scheme is uniform throughout, the colors being scientifically blended for the lessening of eye strain. The electrical fixtures are beautiful and are arranged to give indirect illumination.

An artesian well, the gift of Mrs. Murray, the Haven's gracious benefactor, supplies an inexhaustible amount of pure water. Sanitary disposal of all wastes is cared for by means of a septic tank.

The water pumps which operate the well, are controlled by a separate feed of electricity, this auxiliary system being installed for fire emergency. One of the latest additions to the Haven's medical equipment is the theraphy lamp, another gift of Mrs. T. Morris Murray.

History of The Haven

Norwich was the birthplace of the "Haven" on February 11, 1920, Mrs. Susan J. Howe opened the little cottage at 97 Summit street in Norwich as a home for the aged. The cottage was owned for many years by the late Alfred S. Curtis, a veteran printer of the Norwich Bulletin. Miss Julia Miles Standish of 45 Washington street, Norwich, was the first patient. Miss Standish was a well known portrait painter and was a direct descendant of Captain Myles Standish. She died at the age of 95 at the Haven. It was Miss Standish who named the Abington institution. Shortly before her death she remarked, "It has been a Haven to me."

Through the suggestion of Rev. Charles Northrup, at that time city missionary of Norwich, the work was begun. Because of the many cases of aged or lonely and bereaved elderly people, it was decided to open a home for the middle class, charging a moderate price. These old persons are our most neglected citizens, in the opinion of Mrs. Griggs, superintendent of the Haven who says, "They have given their lives in the service of their community for moderate wages and must face old age with only a meagre sum to last them to the end of their days.

In 1921 Mrs. Howe married Alfred J. Griggs of Abington. They purchased the property known as the old Advent chapel, and moved their family of elderly people to Pomfret. Mrs. Griggs immediately began making improvements on the building to make her aged and infirm charges more comfortable. The work has steadily progressed in spite of great obstacles and financial difficulties which would have caused many to have given up in despair. Much good has been accomplished and many lives brightened and old age made worth living.

In the fall of 1927, Mrs. T. Morris Murray of Gwen Careg Farm of Pomfret and Boston entered into the work of the Haven. She erected frame buildings which are now standing, installed an electrical system of refrigeration, a septic tank and drilled two artesian wells which supply an inexhaustible amount of pure water. In accordance with the wishes of Mrs Murray, the Haven was incorporated the following year.

In 1929 Mrs. Murray gave a fireproof brick building, which was erected on the site of the old chapel. It is pictured on this page.

The Haven is non-secterian and as yet has no residential limits.

Dr. A. D. Marsh of Hampton is the institutional physician and makes weekly visits to the home. The nursing staff is in charge of Miss Martha Pearl R. N., of Windham and the home is supervised by Mrs. Griggs, superintendent.

In commenting on the work of the Haven, Mrs. Griggs said, "The aim of the Haven is to do all the good we can, in every way as long as we can. As the acorn is the 'dream of the oak', so was the small beginning at 97 Summit street, Norwich, the dream of the splendid work for humanity that is being done today. It is earnestly hoped by those who are giving their whole lives to the work that many friends of the helpless aged and homeless elderly people will give to a fund which will provide free care for the needy and help us keep a moderate rate for those who can pay only a small sum for the weekly care."

FACE BRICK BEAUTY MAKES IT POPULAR

The use of brick in residential construction is becoming more popular every year, and the reasons are many in its favor. First of all it provides a permanent structural material which survives the ravages of time and the elements, and secondly, and perhaps more important, lasting beauty.

Face brick now being produced by the modern brick manufacturers can be had in almost any conceivable color range, and type of finish. The so-called texture or mat faced brick in the red ranges in shades from light reds down through the intermediate shades of tans, browns, greens, to blues and blacks, afford, as one can well imagine, a most delightful variegated color effect, matching in a sense the beautiful colors of autumn foliage. This type of brick is suitable for almost any type of residential design, but the brick being typically American, are particularly appropriate in our own native style of architecture.

For houses of a distinctly English character there is a decided preference for genuine clinker brick. Somewhat the same effect may be had by the use of ordinary brick in skintled brick work, but the real clinker brick provides the rough effect naturally. The inherent roughness of clinker brick, together with their beautiful color tones due to overburning, give that warmly attractive rustic effect and appearance of age so in keeping with the English design.

NEW ENGLAND STATES

Construction contracts let in New England during June amounted to $38,089,400 as compared with $36,513,900 for the previous month and $35,472,000 in June 1929. To date new awards were valued at $188,495,500 as against $207,866,900 for the corresponding six months of 1929. The June record showed the following distribution: Residential buildings, $11,951,400; educational buildings, $11,770,000; public works and utilities, $5,594,200; and commercial buildings, $4,207,100. All other non-residential building contracts totaled $4,566,700 in June. New planned work reported in June amounted to $89,722,500 against $50,041,400 in June 1929.

NEW BRICK AND STUCCO BUNGALOW TO BE ERECTED ON CLIFF ST. EXTENSION

During the past week there were five building permits granted at the office of Fire Marshal Henry R. Taft for new construction work in the city. Included in these permits is one for a new brick and stucco bungalow to be erected for Joseph A. Salvideo on Cliff street extension. The other permits are for alterations and smaller work.

Considerable building progress was made on local building projects during the past week. At the Norton Memorial gymnasium the work of plastering is being done by Contractor W. S. Spencer.

The following permits were granted by Fire Marshal Taft:

To Joseph A. Salvideo to erect a brick and frame bungalow on Cliff street extension. The bungalow will have seven rooms and bath, four rooms being on the first floor and three on the second. The bungalow will be 29x39 feet with stone foundation. The first story will be of brick and the second of frame with stucco finish. The estimated cost is $8,000.

To William H. Sanger to build an addition to the present building at 13 Baltic street. The addition will be 9x20 feet and one story high. The addition will be of frame construction and will be finished in plaster board and composition shingles. The estimated cost is $250.

To George Boucher, contractor, to alter present brick structure owned by Theodore Lotning at 201 Franklin street. The alterations will include the installing of a brick and plate glass front. The floors will be repaired. The estimated cost is $300.

To Annie Rajkowski to make slight alterations to the building at 469 North Main street. The estimated cost is $35.

To Dominick Charles to build a veranda on the present house at 83 Cliff street. The veranda will be 6x17 feet and the estimated cost is $100.

Westerly Building Inspector Thomas Wills and Zoning Inspector Louis J. Rossi have issued the following building and zoning permits for the first week in July:

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

In Norwich during the past week there were six sales of real estate, four less than during the same week in 1929. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $28,210 and $64,537.

There were ten sales of real estate in New London during the past week as compared to twelve sales during the corresponding week a year ago. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $30,199 and $77,900.

NEW LONDON

An optimistic turn is seen in the local building situation with the granting of seven permits for new houses and 14 for other work this week. The number of permits compares favorably with the number granted for the same period last year and in this respect New London seems to fare better than the state as a whole.

In the state the number of building permits issued for the past week this year was 268 as compared with 415 for the same time last year. From a comparison of the state and local figures it would seem that New London is not being affected by the general business depression as much as the state as a whole.

In this respect it is interesting to note that there has been a general increase in the number of realty transactions during the past few months. In the past week 385 realty transactions were recorded in the state as compared with 603 for the same period last year.

Building Permits

E. I. Raymond, frame dwelling, 11 Morton street, $6,000.

Josephine Perrino, addition for store, 44 Howard street, $1,800.

C. E. Perkins, alterations, 111 Huntington street, $800.

Oliver Woodworth Co., addition, 36 Pearl street, $800.

Number of permits for the week, 5; estimated cost of buildings, $9,550.

Real Estate and Building

Comparisons of building and real estate totals from week to week for the current year with those for preceding years do not make interesting reading. On the contrary they tell only too clearly the depths to which present levels of activity have declined. For example, during the past week the total of sales by warranty deed in the Connecticut cities and towns reported by The Commercial Record was 385. This total compares with 603 for the like period a year ago. The number of building permits issued during the week in the leading building centers in this state was 263 against 415 for the corresponding week in 1929. The decided lack of any general public participation in real estate buying suggested by these figures is unquestionably due in large degree to the depressed nature of business as a whole and to a loss of confidence in the future of the market. However, with credit conditions becoming increasingly favorable it seems inevitable that a return of confidence and a resumption of building activity must soon be witnessed.

KITCHEN CABINETS EASY TO "LAUNDER"

Sectional kitchen cabinets have many things to commend them, not the least of which is neatness. Most of them set squarely upon the floor, with no spaces beneath to serve as dust collectors. It is posible to sweep and mop around them with little effort; and, if the proper paint, lacquer or enamel is used, and the floor is covered with an indestructible linoleum, no amount of vigorous scrubbing will mar the colored surface.

These points are entirely aside from the elements of convenience and time and steps saved. These are more than ordinarily important points, but the element of cleanliness is one which should appeal particularly to the modern woman who thinks first of all of a sanitary, attractive kitchen.

SELECTS TRIM FOR ITS DURABILITY

The beauty of hardwood trim for the interior of a home is overshadowed only by its durability. In most of the old Colonial houses which have stood for 100 or 200 years one will find woodwork, doors and door framing of chestnut or oak. The hand rail on the stairway was usually of mahogany providing not only a beautiful architectural feature but a permanent protection on the stair case.

Deep, even tones are produced on hardwood exterior trim more effectively by water stains, and oil stain is used mostly for doors and interior trim. Stock wood-work—jambs, door stops, mullions, etc.—is procurable in any desired marking, stain and size from local lumber yards or from building materials divisions of large mail order houses.

HAPPIER TIMES FOR THE HOME BUILDER?

"Ask your banker if you can't build a home."

This, in substance is the suggestion which the National Building Survey conference is preparing to get behind in an effort to enlighten prospective home builders as to the exceptional opportunities now available through easier financing, lower costs and more efficient labor, according to Home Owners Institute of America.

Having started nationally a campaign directed at a more aggressive effort on the part of bankers in control of small mortgage sources to find employment for their funds in home construction, the conference is anxious to get the prospect and the banker around the same table by bringing the former to the latter's office for advice and assistance.

While feeling that much has been left undone in some quarters in the direction of pushing mortgage funds for home building, it is also felt that such efforts can be carried only so far by financing agencies of the conservative character of savings institutions and building and loan associations, ad that the general public must meet such efforts half way. Failure of the public to seek such funds in the volume which the present low building costs and the fundemental soundness of conditions would justify is believed to be largely due to popular ignorance of the facilities which such institutions off and the elasticity with which such facilities can be adjusted to individual requirements.

HOW THE CELLAR BECOMES A BASEMENT

The ingenious housewife with a decorative turn of mind has found a new field for the exercise of her talents in the once lowly cellar. The advent of automatic heat and liquid fuel has eliminated the dirt and dust associated with the old cellar and has made this part of the house a basement, as clean as the upper floors. The result is that the cellar, representing roughly 20 per cent of the construction cost of the house, is being converted into living quarters and made to pay better dividends on the money invested in it.

The space that becomes available with the installation of automatic heating equipment has been turned to novel uses, including card room, den, gymnasium, children's play room, workshop, built-in garage, maid's or guest bedroom or general recreation room.

NEW ENGLAND LEADS WAY IN OIL HEATING

The residents of New England, according to an analysis of statistics compiled by the United States Bureau of Mines and the Census Bureau, spend far more than the national per capita average for modern household heating equipment. Although the New England states contain less than seven per cent of the entire national population, they have eleven and a half per cent of all the country's automatic domestic oil burners.

The total number of household oil burners in New England is 61,630, divided by states follows: Massachusetts, 33,919; Rhode Island, 12,091; Connecticut, 9,469; Maine, 2,835; New Hampshire, 1,658; Vermont, 1,658. In proportion to population Rhode Island leads with one burner for every 55 persons.

HARDWARE ENSEMBLE THE MODERN IDEA

Ensemble fashions rule the year. Even the locks which guard our doors have felt their effect. For it is now the style to match the design of door-knobs, push-button, key-plate, door-knocker and cylinder lock collar. If the architectural design of the house is Spanish, then hardware designed in the spirit of old Spain or of the Mission houses of southern California is appropriate. The stately Colonial home is finished in the brass or bronze designs with a wrought iron finish which in material and in simplicity duplicates the work of the old-time blacksmith.

Rust-proof metals have proved the reasons for their popularity during centuries of use, brass being a favorite with the home builder who builds for permanence. Cast bronze is much used, too, and is presented by one manufacturer in a large variety of designs suitable for numerous types of architecture.

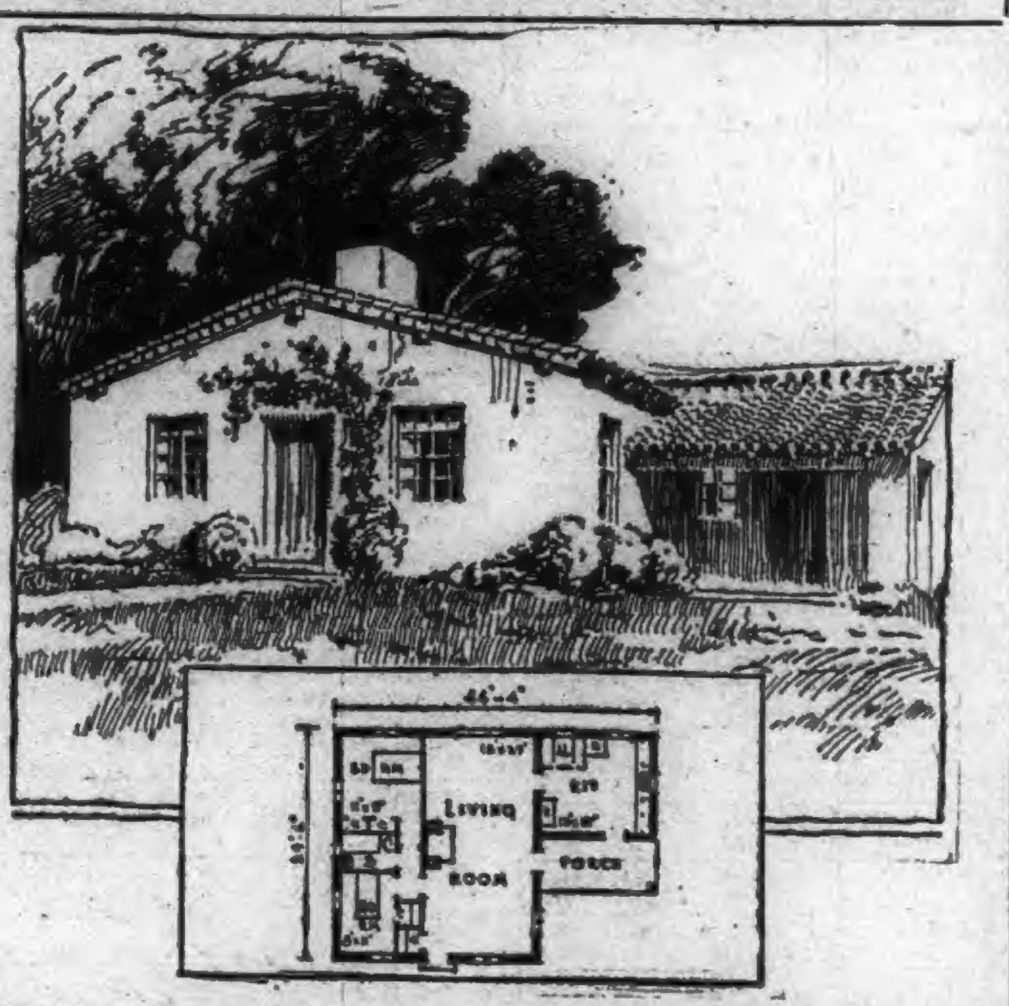
JUNE CONSTRUCTION IS LARGEST SINCE JULY 1929

June contracts let for new building and engineering works in the 37 states east of the Rocky Mountains amounted to $600,573,400 according to F. W. Dodge corporation. The past month's record was substantially larger than the total of $457,416,000 for the previous month; showed a good gain over the total of $529,891,100 for June, 1929; and was the largest monthly total since July, 1929. For the first half of 1930 construction contracts aggregated $2,638,013,300. This was a decline of only 12 1-2 per cent from the total of $3,015,546,800 for the corresponding period of 1929. At the end of May contracts for the year to date were 18 per cent behind last year.

For the sixth consecutive month public works and utilities were the most important of all classes. This construction type amounted to $251,915,800 or almost two-fifths of the value of all June awards. The following comprised the remainder: Residential buildings, $96,815,500; industrial buildings, $93,618,500; commercial buildings, $59,080,000; educational buildings, $48,918,800; hospitals and institutions, $19,675,300; religious and memorial buildings, $11,808,500; social and recreational buildings, $10,187,000; and public buildings, $8,554,000. Contemplated new work reported in June amounted to $763,216,100 compared with $634,073,400 for June 1929.

Manuscripts of 643 poems submitted in an international poetry contest were destroyed in a fire at Southampton, Long Island, recently.

BUNGALOW HOUSE MEANT FOR WARM CLIMES



This small home is a Spanish type bungalow, meant for use in the west or south. All the rooms of course are on one floor. The design is also adaptable for a country home where northern city folk may go for the summer to escape the heat of a stuff apartment.

Waste space is altogether eliminated here. There is not even an entrance hall, for the home is intended for a warm climate and no vestibule is needed to keep cold air out of the living room.

The kitchen has the small porch so necessary in the country, where the housewife may sit and peel vegetables on sunny days, while it furnishes protection in rainy weather.

Walls of the house should be of local stone or hard clay, plastered over with stucco as was done by the Indians of Mexico and the southwest in their abode dwellings. A red Spanish tile for the roof will carry out the motive for the exterior. Woodwork should be of weathered gray.

Interior arrangement of this plan is simplicity itself. The large living room with its fireplace has ventilation and light from three directions and can be used for dining at meal time.

The two bedrooms open conveniently off the living rom and both are near the bathroom in the center. Both sleeping rooms have good cross ventilation, and in fact the whole house is designed to let plenty of air circulate freely through it. The front of this house should face to the east.

A lot of 60 by 100 feet will suffice for this design. It can be built for about $4,500 to $5,000.

The annual silver tea for the library comes this week. The annual meeting of the Library association is scheduled for July 21 at the Country club.

The Sunday school picnic arranged for the children of the junior department of the M. E. church school by Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbutt, superintendent of the department, was held Thursday at Bluff Point, Groton. About 60, including parents and friends of the children, were in attendance. Transportation was provided by Mrs. Hurlbutt, Mrs. C. Alton Chapman, Mrs. Andrew P. Miller, Mrs. Thomas Allyn, the Misses Margaret Colver and Gertrude Allen, and Emil Gunuskey, who is spending the summer with his family at their new cottage at Bluff Point. A picnic dinner was enjoyed and there was boating and sports. Red, white and blue ribbons were given as awards in the contests as follows: Running races, boys under ten, Gerald Gunuskey, Bobbie Gunster; boys over ten, Harold Hurlbutt, Roy Gunuskey, Thomas Champlin. Running races, girls under ten, Virginia Collins, Gene Hurlbutt, Annie Thompson; girls, 10 to 12, Ruth Hurlbutt, Hester Lawson, Doris Coman; 12 and over, Carol Norman, Anna Mae Duffy, Bernice Coman. Rev. Peter C. Wright, D. D., of Yonkers, N. Y., returned home Saturday after spending a few days with friends at his summer cottage.

Mr. and Mrs. Russell Larkin and daughter Sally, of Hartford, are with Mrs. George W. Green of Panama, at the Povey cottage for a month.

The Sunday morning service at the Community Methodist Episcopal church was conducted by the pastor, Rev. Harold H. Critchlow, who has been away for a week's vacation. Abundant Fruit for the Abiding Life was the theme of his sermon. The offertory anthem, Why Shadows Fall, was sung by the quartet.

What Can Sunday Mean? was the topic for the Epworth league evening service led by Nelson Parker. The pastor continued the topic for his closing remarks.

Calendar notices include a meeting Tuesday evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Parker to appoint committees for the annual community picnic for the benefit of the church.

Rev. Myron E. Genter of Norwich is to preach at the morning service of the church next Sunday.

Mrs. Charles H. Comstock was a guest for a few days the past week of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Babcock of the Unionville district, Ledyard.

Miss Susan Mathewson entertained Frederic Mets and Mr. Spencer of New York recently over night when motoring to their summer home in Maine.

Mrs. Joab B. Rogers accompanied her nephew, Wilmot Benn, and Mrs. Benn of Hartford to that city for a week end visit and to the Wayside Inn at Sudbury, Mass.

The Ladies' Aid society met Thursday afternoon at the vestry with seven members in attendance. Miss Alice Satterlee, president of the society, presided at the business meeting. The usual reports with one covering the work of the past year, the annual meeting occurring in June were given by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Dudley C. Perkins. It was voted to make up the amount lacking for the purchase of a church bulletin board.

The former special purchasing committee appointed by the president, Mrs. Eugene LaFontaine, Mrs. Charles Hoyt, Mrs. Nelson Parker, Mrs. Billings F. S. Crandall, with the pastor's wife, Mrs. Harold H. The date of the next meeting was changed to Wednesday afternoon of this week in place of Thursday as previously announced.

Miss Grace A. Chapman of Allyns Point was a guest for a few days last week of her cousin, Mrs. Elmer Keene and family in Danielson, and accompanied them to South Athol Mass., where they spent a day with Mrs. Keene's brother-in-law and sister, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hackett.

Miss Gertrude D. Allen of Long Cove and Miss Margaret H. Parker of the village were guests Sunday of Mrs. Robert Miller in Boston.

MONTVILLE

At a special meeting of the officials of Montville Industrial Twilight league, it was voted to cut down the expenses of the league which has been running behind for the past six weeks. It costs the league nine dollars an evening for each game played and they have been only collecting four or five dollars at every game, a small amount compared to the size of the crowd that witnesses these games. If this condition continues the league will have to disband. The local boys of the four teams that make up this league have been playing wonderful ball this season and it would seem as though every effort should be made by the public and fans to help support them and keep the national game prominent in Montville. The league voted to keep only one umpire instead of two as has been the custom since the beginning of the season. Through the cooperation of Treasurer Armand Plouffe, who is also manager of the Montville Independents and Captain Frenchy Caron, they have secured the services of their team to help the local league to keep running for the rest of the season, playing twilight, Saturday and Sunday ball. The proceeds of these games will be used by the Industrial league. The manager has booked several fast teams which will be seen on the local diamond. The Independent team is comprised of some of the best players in the twilight league and a few of the local boys who are not eligible to play on the Industrial league because they are not working in the mills which the teams represent.

YOUNG WOMAN WHO LEFT $80 IN TAXI GETS $60 FROM NEW LONDON DRIVER

A young woman lodger at the summer rooming house of Mrs. Margaret Forrester, 50 Stuart avenue, Ocean Beach, made complaint to the police this afternoon that she had lost $80 in a taxicab and requested that she be given assistance in recovering her money. The driver of the cab was found and taken to police headquarters where he stoutly denied knowing of the whereabouts of the money. However, when his questioning implied that he was guilty of finding the money and although there was no evidence upon which he could be held, the driver offered to go to Stuart avenue and interview his passenger. This he did and while there he gave the young woman $60. The passenger said that she hired the driver on State street. The money was in a purse and the latter was in a bag. When she arrived at her destination, she removed the purse from the bag and after taking a $10 bill from her funds, she placed the purse in her lap. When she received her change and alighted she forgot the purse and she did not discover her loss until she entered the rooming house. Sergeant John Courtney found the driver at the Union station and he offered an alibi when taken to police headquarters that he did not see the purse for he gave three children a ride to Bank and Shaw streets and they were the only occupants of the rear of the car after the woman passenger alighted. He said he would not know the children if he saw them again. After a long grilling he went to the beach and refunded the woman all but $20 of her money.

SNELL WHO SHOT HORSES GETS OFF WITH REPRIMAND

(Special to The Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, July 14.— Isaac Snell, 76, residing in the Lakes Pond district of Chesterfield, was in the Waterford town court this afternoon, charged with the destruction of private property and although the man's act was a dastardly and malicious one, because of his age, Judge Frederick Schofield accepted the recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Leon Beisheim and advised Snell as to what was expected of him as regards his future conduct, even if aggrieved, whether fancied or rightfully. Snell, a few days ago, became angered when two valuable saddle horses belonging to Nicholas Schultz, a neighbor, strayed upon the Snell property, something that the animals had done before. Going to his residence, Snell seized a 26-gauge shotgun and emptied its contents into the bodies of the horses. The animals succeeded in making their way back to the farm of their owner, where the carcasses were found the following day. Schultz made complaint to the state police and Officer James Dygert arrested Snell, who finally confessed.

WALTER GEORGE GOING TO MILITARY PRISON

Walter George, U. S. Coast Guard, state pier, was in the police court today charged with breach of the peace. The charge was nolled to permit coast guard officials to take action against George. The sailor was sentenced some time ago to nine months' imprisonment at the military prison at Portsmouth, N. H., and then placed on parole. As George has violated his parole he will be sent back to prison and compelled to serve the sentence. He will be taken to prison this week.

George a week ago last Thursday night went to the locker room, 218 Main street and abused, threatened and assaulted the attendant, William Marshall. When George entered the locker room, Marshall was alone and the sailor ordered Marshall to unlock several of the lockers that he might select such apparel for his own use as was found in them. In making his command, George struck Marshall several blows on the head and face and flourishing a knife, threatened to kill the locker room man. After taking the clothing and departing, George was arrested at the state pier, for Marshall had made complaint to the police and when the sailor was arrested by Detective Sergeant John Cavanaugh, George was identified by Marshall as the bluejacket who had assaulted him. George denied his guilt and declared that he had not been off the boat the destroyer Shaw, since 10 o'clock at night and that was over two hours before the locker room man was assaulted. However, the investigation of the police revealed that George was making false statements for it was found that he did not return to the desroyer until early Friday.

BUSINESS PROFITABLE SO BIG FINES WERE PAID

Lombossey, through counsel, entered a demurrer, which was overruled and the accused was fined $200 and costs on each count. He paid, although the home brew resort had been in existence less than three weeks. Lombossey was arrested Saturday by a raiding squad in charge of Sergeant John Courtney and after information had been obtained that Lombossey was peddling the beer.

Thomas Wilson, a painter residing at 299 1-2 Broad street, charged with breach of the peace, was fined $10 and costs. Wilson went Saturday to his home which is owned by Vicent Loicano, a neighbor and when Wilson started to wreck the interior of the house by smashing furniture, Loicano made complaint to the police and the former was arrested by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Patrolman Dennis Murphy.

Two men with long police court records were charged with intoxication and vagrancy. One was sent to jail to stay for 30 days and as a suspended sentence of 60 days in jail was given the other 10 days ago for intoxication, the sentence was revoked and he went to jail to serve the two months' penalty. They were arrested Sunday by Automobile Patrol Officer Elwood Bailey and Dennis Murphy when found in the woods adjacent to Bayonet street.

Two other cases of intoxication were tried. One man, an old offender, was fined $20 and went to jail for a stay of a month, as he could not pay. The charge against the other man was nolled, for he was ordered discharged by Prosecuting Attorney Max Boyer.

"Burton's Agency Sells Another."

Lawrence and Annie Hoffman of this city have sold to Louis and Matilda Russell their property located at 250 Laurel Hill avenue, consisting of a two-apartment house containing all modern conveniences. The new owners will take possession at once. The sale was negotiated through the real estate agency of Mrs. Rosa E. Burton.

Palace Theatre.

A double feature bill which is full of variety and which is amusing as well as thrilling comes to the Palace theatre tomorrow with the showing of "Children of Pleasure" with Lawrence Gray and Helen Johnson in the leading roles, and "Good Intentions" a society drama starring Edmund Lowe and Marguerite Churchill.

"Children of Pleasure" is another romantic musical comedy which is all about Tin Pan Alley. How popular songs are manufactured is only one of the many new things which this production, although laid in a familiar atmosphere, brings to theatre goers. "Children of Pleasure" tells the story of a poor song writer who is married to a millionaire's daughter.

Edmund Lowe, star of "Good Intentions" has said that he likes low-browed roles lots better than those which are so-called society parts. He likes to be hard-boiled and that is what he is in this production while cast as a crook. "Good Intentions" is an exciting tale of a master crook's romance who after deciding to go right, turns that way only to find that he has been caught in a maze more terrible than any venture in which he yet has been complicated.

"So This is London" will be shown at the Palace for the last times today. Here we have Will Rogers in something which is better by far than anything in which he has yet appeared. It is a riot of fun from beginning to end and the audience is kept in stitches during the entire performance. No one who likes Will Rogers should miss him in this production which follows his adventures with the gay ladies of Paris.

Broadway Theatre.

Seven new songs, many of them destined for certain popularity, are included in "The New Movietone Follies of 1930," romantic comedy, which closes its local engagement at Warner's Broadway today.

Three teams of famous song writers collaborated on these melodies. "I'd Love to be a Talking Picture Queen" and "You'll Give In," were authored by Joseph McCarthy, James F. Hanley and James Brockman. "Doing the Derby," "Emily Brown" and "Cheer Up and Smile" were written by Con Conrad and Jack Meskill. Cliff Friend and Jimmie Monaco contributed "I Feel a Certain Feeling Coming on" and "I'm Bashful" to the tuneful score.

Principals who sing the numbers include El Brendel, Marjorie White, Frank Richardson, Noel Francis and Miriam Seegar. In addition there is a highly trained vocal chorus of fifty singers. William Collier, Jr., also plays an important role.

The romantic story was directed by Benjamin Stoloff from an original story by William K. Wells, who also wrote the dialog.

COUNCIL GRANTS SEVERAL LICENSES TO BEACH PEOPLE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 14—The special adjourned council meeting was called to order at 8 o'clock Monday evening by Council President Horace E. Burdick. The absentee councilmen being Joseph Frazer and James Naccarata.

The council voted to grant Jerold Payne a motion picture license for theatre on Bay street, Watch Hill. The closing hour was set at 11:30 p. m. The following licenses were also voted: Tavern license to Stillman house, Dwight Stillman, proprietor, Weekapaug; Victualizing license, to Joseph Leo Rowan, Atlantic avenue, Misquamicut; bowling alley license, to Daniel F. Larkin, Watch Hill.

The council voted an amendment to the zoning law, moving a business section on the Noosenack Hill road to a more southerly point near the Meetinghouse bridge, with the former territory reverting to a residence area.

The town council also voted a resolution, similar to one adopted in the afternoon by the Westerly highway commission, requesting the New Haven railroad to construct a sidewalk on the east side of the High street railroad bridge.

Town Solicitor John Ferguson presented a first draft of the new ordinances in which the following Sunday businesses were listed: Milk, bread, bakery, pastry; fruit, ice, ice cream, confectionery, drinks, etc.; tobacco, newspapers and periodicals, gas, oils, etc.; renting of bathing suits, public automobile parking and a combination to include one or more of the above lines. Michael D. G. Papalia, present at the hearing, remarked that if the laws became in full force and effect, they might as well shut down their businesses and go home. Charles A. Rathbun, of the Red Brook filling station, made a plea for the council to give the all-year round merchants as much consideration and more than those who conducted summer businesses. Solicitor Ferguson reported a listing of from 200 to 250 places doing a Sunday business. Ninety-nine per cent of which, he declared, were violators of Rhode Island laws. Relative to closing hours, newspaper licenses are to be from 5 a. m. to 12 midnight. Automobile supplies, etc. are to be 24 hours. A scale of fees ranging from $5 to $50 for the various lines was discussed and the council will meet again next Wednesday night to decide exactly on these fees.

Yet, to be polite,
She said:
"I'd better go in and write my postals if I want to catch the mail."

Good looking . . . agreeable
. . . but 'B.O.' (Body Odor) spoiled the good impression

EVEN AT a summer hotel where men were scarce, he couldn't make a hit with girls. They liked his looks. They would have liked him, too, if he hadn't had one fault they couldn't excuse.

Of course he didn't suspect the real reason. And nobody told him. People hate to hint at body odor even by its polite name—"B.O." . . . Later he found out the truth and a simple way to be safe. He's having a lot more fun now. He's one of the "crowd"—invited everywhere since he learned the easy way to keep perspiration odorless.

Hotter weather—take no chances

Don't trifle with "B.O." It's so easy for anyone to offend and not know it—especially these hot days when we perspire more freely. We quickly become used to an ever-present odor—don't notice it in ourselves—never dream it is annoying others. But it is!

Wash and bathe with Lifebuoy—then you're safe. Enjoy its cooling, refreshing, penetrating lather, so abundant even in hardest water. Heat and stickiness quickly vanish—every trace of "B.O." goes, too. For Lifebuoy's rich, creamy lather is gently antiseptic. It purifies pores. Its pleasant, extra-clean scent—that quickly rinses away—tells you why.

The finest of beauty soaps

Looking for a good complexion soap? Get Lifebuoy. There's none better at any price. Its bland, searching lather deep-cleanses pores—gently frees them of clogged impurities that mar skin beauty—coaxes back fresh, healthy radiance to dull sallow skins. Adopt Lifebuoy today.

DYER DAM POWER PLANT BOUGHT BY CONNECTICUT LIGHT AND POWER CO.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 14. — Announcement was made tonight of the sale by the Connecticut Co. of its Dyer dam plant and surrounding property on the Quinebaug river, two miles south of here, to the Connecticut Light and Power Co. The new purchasers are to take over the property the coming week-end.

The power plant has a capacity of 700 kilowatts, derived from the waters of the Quinebaug. The plant was built upwards of 25 years ago when trolley lines were being developed through this territory and up to the present sale has been owned by various trolley companies that operated lines through this territory. The dam was built many years ago when it was purposed to build a cotton mill there. This plant never materialized.

The property to be taken over by the light and power company includes what is known as the old Governor Dyer place, extending over many acres, the easterly border of the property being on the Danielson-Wauregan state highway.

For several years past in addition to generating electricity part of the building of the power plant has been used by the Connecticut Co. for a garage for its motor coaches on the Danielson-Norwich line. It is understood that the Connecticut Co. will entirely vacate the property sometime hence.

For a year past the light and power company has had a temporary hook-up for transmitting power from the Dyer dam to Danielson but now that it owns the property it will build a permanent line. There are unconfirmed statements here tonight as to the many important changes and improvements that the light and power company will make at the plant and on the dam but these could not be verified by any one connected with the company here.

Reports of an important enlargement and power development because of the acquirement of the Dyer dam were declared to be without foundation Monday night by Robert W. Perkins, president of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, which is a subsidiary of Connecticut Light and Power company. President Perkins said that there was no possibility of development there as the Dyer dam location has already been developed to the limit of its possibilities. While the Connecticut company owned and operated the plant it sold energy to Eastern Connecticut Power company, but having no further use for this plant, the Connecticut company has sold it to the Connecticut Light and Power company. This gives four hydro-electric stations in this section of the state that will be linked in together, viz: Mechanicsville, Scotland dam, the tunnel station at Taftville and now the Dyer dam station.

The Connecticut Light and Power company has also taken over the title to the transmission lines from Thamesville to the tunnel property and from Thamesville to New London, for which the Connecticut company has no further use.

CHOOSE JAIL SENTENCE INSTEAD OF FINES

Three charges, those of evading responsibility, drunken driving and driving without a license, were against George W. Baker, 24, of this city, when he was presented in the city court Monday morning. Judge Arthur F. Libby gave the accused the choice of paying total fines of $275 and costs or serving a sentence of 60 days in jail. Baker chose the latter. STATUTORY CHARGE MADE AGAINST MAN AND WOMAN

Charged with a statutory offense, Mrs. Isobel Dickenson Findlay, of Norwich was arrested as she came out of a session of the probate court at Poquonoc Bridge Saturday afternoon. Police have since arrested John James of Niantic, formerly proprietor of a fashionable riding academy at the Stoneridge Country club, Stonington, on a similar charge.

Both were released on bonds of $500. Bonds for Mrs. Findlay were furnished by the father of her first husband, Thomas N. Dickenson of Mystic.

Mrs. Findlay's arrest followed a four-hour hearing before Probate Court Judge Arthur P. Anderson of Noank on the petition of George Findlay of Norwich, her husband, for the removal of their four-year-old child, George Findlay, Jr., from the guardianship of Mrs. Findlay. Judge Anderson reserved decision on the case, but is expected to hand it down some time during this week.

Warrants for the arrest of both Mrs. Findlay and James came after the former had testified in the probate court hearing that she gave birth to a child out of wedlock three months ago. She further testified that neither her husband nor James was the father of the child.

Mrs. Findlay also claimed that she had not lived with her husband for some time, and that James was only a roomer in her cottage at Lord's Point, Stonington.

The case against Findlay, in which his wife brought charges of non-support, was continued for one week by Judge C. C. Costello in Groton town court Monday morning, on the request of Findlay's counsel, J. James Floyd who asked for a continuance pending Judge Anderson's decision.

At a special session of the Groton town court this (Tuesday) morning Mrs. Findlay and James will appear to answer charges of a statutory offense.

192ND REGIMENT STARTS ANOTHER FIELD PROBLEM

Preparations for another two-day artillery problem largely occupied the time of the 192nd field artillery, C. N. G., at Camp Trumbull, Niantic, on Monday. The regiment will leave the camp at 7 o'clock this (Tuesday) morning as a war strength battalion under officers of the Third battalion and will work out a problem in defending a bridgehead on the Connecticut river similar to previous problems carried out under First and Second battalion officers.

In addition to these preparations the combat trains and headquarters battery engaged in competition Monday in communication work and the other batteries competed to see which outfit could produce the most effective howitzer crew.

Twenty officers of the regiment were detailed to the Groton airport to take rides in national guard planes of the 43rd Division Aviation, which is encamped at Groton and which is co-operating with the artillery units in carrying out its military work.

Due to the unsettled weather conditions flying activities at Groton were curtailed Monday and preparations were hastened for record target practice to start the next day.

Drill work was to have occupied the 122nd cavalry troops at Niantic Monday but due to the rain it was necessary to eliminate much of the work planned.

"You can't stop rising now" says Calumet's DOUBLE-ACTION to your cake

MAKE THIS TEST—See for yourself how Calumet Baking Powder acts twice to make your baking better. Put two level teaspoons of Calumet into a glass, add two teaspoons of water, stir rapidly five times and remove the spoon. The tiny, fine bubbles will rise slowly, half filling the glass. This is Calumet's first action—the action that takes place in your mixing bowl.

After the mixture has entirely stopped rising, stand the glass in a pan of hot water on the stove. In a moment, a second rising will start and continue until the mixture rises to the top of the glass. This is Calumet's second action—the action that takes place in your oven. Make this test today. See Calumet's Double-Action which protects your baking from failure.

Calumet's Double-Action has made such a difference in baking that it has become the most popular baking powder in the world. Make a Calumet cake and see how beautifully this double-acting baking powder protects your cake from failure.

LONDON NAVAL PACT PLACED SQUARELY BEFORE SENATE

Senator Reed, In Presenting the Treaty, Gave Opponents to Understand That Any Reservation, Other Than the Modified Norris Reservation, Would Not Be Acceptable to the Proponents — Senator Robinson, Republican, Indiana, Led Attack On the Treaty In Speech of Three Hours.

WASHINGTON, July 15—(AP)—Advocates of the London naval treaty closed their case before the senate today with an exposition of the agreement by Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, one of the delegates and tonight leaders were looking forward confidently to a final vote on the pact.

Next Tuesday has been tentatively suggested for a date to vote but there were no understandings tonight and the determined band of opponents were cracking away at the treaty with considerable ammunition in store. Senator Robinson, republican, Indiana, led the attack today in a speech of three hours.

The Reed speech was heard by the largest attendance thus far during the special session. The opening roll call showed 80 members present. Others arrived during the day, virtually eliminating fears of treaty advocates that the lack of a quorum might break up the session.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, the leader of the opposition at the conclusion of Reed's address engaged him in one of the most spirited of their many exchanges. Johnson demanded the text of the first American proposal submitted to London. Reed promptly submitted it.

This proposal, which was made public during the London conference and discussed before the foreign relations committee by Secretary Stimson, embodied the demand of the American delegation for a new warship. Simpson said this was used as a "trading point."

Once more Johnson and Reed clashed over the papers relating to the London conference which President Hoover has declined to give the senate. Reed again volunteered to show them in confidence to the Californian and the latter replied that he did not understand "any one who would accept such an offer or the temperamental make up of any senator who would make such an offer."

Johnson asked Reed if the Japanese did not reserve the right to abandon the 5-3 ratio after 1935. Reed replied that she did and that the United States, in turn, reserved the right to insist upon that ratio or even a lower one.

Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee a foe of the treaty is ready to submit two reservations—one insisting upon freedom of the seas in war as well as in peace. The other would call for removal by Great Britain of her naval bases in the vicinity of the American continent.

While treaty proponents have agreed to accept the modified reservation of Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, providing that no secret agreement or understanding shall be ratified in approval of the pact, they have laid down a ban against other reservations and no hope is held for them.

Senator Reed told the senate that when the London parley opened the American fleet was in an "almost hopeless position of inferiority" in auxiliary ships to Great Britain and Japan. He said the British had a ratio of 4 to 1 against this country in cruisers and Japan had two to one for America.

"For the first time in history," he concluded, "all categories of ships will be limited. I believe that the ratification of this treaty will work for the peace and happiness of all the peoples in the countries involved."

Reed paid tribute to the American naval officers who have disagreed over the treaty terms.

Senator Robinson, of Indiana, in his lengthy attack upon the treaty, asserted "the American navy has been repudiated and those brave, gallant officers in it are slurred for daring to stand up for the American flag on the seven seas."

He reviewed the unsuccessful Geneva naval conference of 1927 and said that "rather than surrender to Great Britain, jeopardize the American people, and handicap the American navy, that conference broke up with the American delegation saying "we will not surrender just for the purpose of getting a treaty."

"They were backed by President Coolidge and came home, not with a treaty, but thank God, amid the plaudits of the American people," he said.

Senator Copeland, democrat, New York, finished up the six hours of debate for the opposition.

MYSTERIOUS MAN MAY BE MISSING AVIATOR

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, July 15.—(AP)—Major R. McDonald, in charge of the search for Maurice Graham, Western Air Express aviator missing since January, today began to investigate reports that a mysterious and unidentified man has been living for the past four months in a shack on the Colorado river.

McDonald said a prospector, whose name he would not divulge, has told him the man seemed to have lost his memory and had not shaved for several months. The shack, he said, was near the site of the Boulder dam project.

Discovery yesterday of the remains of a campfire about three miles south of the place where the wrecked plane was found last month indicated that the aviator might have gone in the direction of the Colorado river.

CAMPAIGN TO INCREASE CONSUMPTION OF WHEAT

CHICAGO, July 15.— (AP) —The American Bakers' association today started a campaign to increase domestic consumption of wheat by 100,000,000 bushels a year.

"If we can restore the per capita consumption of wheat which existed in this country prior to the war," said President Heney Stude, of Houston, "we will increase our use of it by 130,000,000 bushels a year, or more than the total yearly crop of Kansas, the largest wheat-producing state in the Union.

"Before the war, Americans consumed 5.30 bushels each per year; now the figure is 4.26 bushels. The reduction was brought about during the war when the government carried on a campaign to raise more wheat and eat less bread. Now it says raise less wheat but it says nothing about eating more bread."

HOOVER VACATION TO BE IN NORTHERN ROCKIES

WASHINGTON, July 15.— (AP) — President Hoover has trimmed his vacation time to something approximating the two weeks of the average citizen and plans to spend the time in the northern Rockies.

George Akerson, secretary to the president, announced there would be no speech-making and that the president would make the trip late in August or early in September "solely for the purpose of an outdoor holiday and rest."

The trip will include Glacier and Yellowstone National parks.

The plans are still contingent, however, upon the time the senate adjourns and it was said the president would require some time in Washington to complete important matters after adjournment of the special session. He formerly expected to leave the capitol about Aug. 1 and be gone four or five weeks.

RAIDED BREWERY, BUT FAILED TO FIND BEER

ELIZABETH, N. J., July 15.—(AP)—A squad of 36 police and federal prohibition agents surrounded the Rising Sun brewery today, broke in the door and searched the old building from basement to attic but emerged empty-handed.

Alexander MacPhee, deputy prohibition administrator of New Jersey, said the officers "were looking for beer."

A rumor had spread along the Elizabeth waterfront that the raiders were searching for two federal prohibition agents, who were reported to have been kidnaped yesterday by hijackers while taking a truck load of confiscated beer to Newark.

AVIATOR GOLDSBOROUGH IS IN CRITICAL CONDITION

BENNINGTON, Vt., July 15.—(AP)—The aviation jinx which hurled his father to death in the barren wastes of the North Atlantic, hovered tonight over the unconscious form of Frank Goldsborough, 19-year-old aviator, whose plane crashed into the wild mountain side east of here yesterday.

The youthful aviator, holder of the junior trans-continental flying record, was in a critical condition at Putnam Memorial hospital suffering from a fractured skull. An all night search was conducted for him and his plane which now lies in shreds at the side of Woodford mountain.

Young Goldsborough lay unconscious amid the wreckage until six o'clock this morning when searching parties after a fruitless all night combing of the wilderness came upon the wrecked plane and its victim. Mockler, who was thrown clear of the wreckage, brought news of the accident to a farmhouse near here. He had struggled in vain to pull his companion from the plane and then wandered through thick underbrush for hours before he found help.

Leonard Lawrence and a party of five men found Goldsborough lying beside his plane only after they had combed the dense forest for miles. Their discovery of his unconscious form was the beginning of an arduous trek through underbrush, boulder-strewn paths and knee-deep fields of mud.

COOLIDGE ATTENDED THE TERCENTENARY EXERCISES

BOSTON, July 15.— (AP)— Former President Calvin Coolidge, although he took no active part in the tercentenary exercises and did not speak, figured prominently in two out of the ordinary incidents today.

First, he lost his wife.

Second, he was informed by no less a political body than James M. Curley, democratic mayor of Boston, that he might be president again if he so chose.

Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge were received by Gov. and Mrs. Frank G. Allen at the state house today. Drawn, perhaps, by old memories of the days when he served in the legislature and presided over the senate, Mr. Coolidge started for the office of the president of the senate which he had not seen since 1915.

While on his way there he suddenly discovered that Mrs. Coolidge was not with him. He had started to retrace his steps when a legislative messenger asked if there was anything he could do.

"I've lost my wife," said Mr. Coolidge.

Mrs. Coolidge was found with Mrs. Allen.

MAN WANTED IN CONNECTION WITH MURDER SURRENDERS

GLENS FALLS, N. Y., July 15.—(AP)—John Heyson, 30, of New York city and Albany, wanted here in connection with the shooting July 8 of Hugh A. McKenna, Lynn, Mass., magazine salesman, surrendered today to District Attorney Fred M. Beckwith and was released in $12,000 bail by Supreme Court Judge Erskine C. Rogers. Earlier in the day Heyson was arraigned before City Judge Howard A. Glassbrook and pleaded not guilty to first degree manslaughter. Hearing was set for July 22.

Early July 8, McKenna was shot through the chest. He died the next day saying he did not know who shot him. William J. Kelleher, Glens Falls, is free under $5,000 bail as a material witness to the shooting.

Rear-End Collision Of Elevated [illegible]ains

Sixteen Perso[illegible]re Injured At Cham[illegible]reet Station, New Y[illegible]

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—Sixteen persons were hurt, three seriously, in a rear-end collision between two crowded elevated trains at the Chambers street station of the Sixth avenue "L" late today. The accident threw hundreds of home-bound passengers into a state bordering on panic.

The crash occurred after a northbound express train, pulling out of the station, stalled at a block. A moment later a local train proceeding in the same direction, struck it, smashing the rear platform of the last car and throwing the car partially off the rails.

Those seriously hurt were Joseph Bataglie, 54, possible skull fracture; Thomas Carvers, crushed back; William A. Cutter, the motorman of the local train, fractured arm. All the others hurt were struck by flying glass or bruised by the impact of the trains. They were treated at the scene and sent home.

Service on the line near the wreck was at a standstill for more than two hours. Traffic was rerouted, however, and a normal movement of trains maintained.

The crash occurred at the height of the evening rush hour. While workmen were busy clearing the track, current was inadvertently turned on in the third rail when another train, crossing a section of track in the station north of the scene of the wreck, closed the circuit. This mishap endangered the lives of 20 workmen and started a fire in the equipment they had assembled. The blaze was easily extinguished.

OFFERED TO SERVE JAIL TERM FOR GRANDFATHER

NEW BRITAIN, July 15.— (AP) — After John Nicholas, 72, of 1889 Second avenue, New York, had been sentenced to jail for 30 days in police court today for obtaining money under false pretenses, his grandson, whose name was not learned, approached defense counsel and offered to serve the jail term for his grandfather. The offer was communicated to Judge Stanley J. Traceski, who made no comment.

Nicholas pleaded nolo contendere. It was alleged that he had victimized two local women of $32 by pretending to make magic paste with the money, which he led them to believe he was burning in a handkerchief, to cure their rheumatism. He is said to have admitted later to the police that he put the money in his pocket by sleight of hand even though the women were watching him closely.

Sloan Says Cotton Is Regaining Prestige

Many Instances Cited By President of the Cotton-Textile Institute.

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—George A. Sloan, president of the Cotton-Textile institute, tonight in an address broadcast over a coast-to-coast network of 36 stations, told how cotton had regained prestige in the American home, in fashion and in industry.

The address of Mr. Sloan was a feature of the "salute" hour to the cotton textile industry of the country.

Mr. Sloan said that during the past two years cotton has found a new fashion popularity. In British royal circles, the queen and women of the court have appeared in cotton dresses and fashion experts of Paris have featured the fabrics.

In America, he said, the leaders of fashion, including the most sophisticated members of society, are wearing cotton morning, noon and night.

"Cotton," Mr. Sloan said, "plays a great role in our daily life because nature endowed it with distinctive qualities. It is the most plentiful textile fibre. It is economical. It is versatile. It is naturally clean and launderable. It is durable. It is beautiful. In all its magic it might rightly be called the universal fibre. . . .

"Cotton is the most dramatic of all fibres. Saturate it with nitric and sulphuric acid and it becomes one of the most violent of explosives. Spin cotton into fine threads and it can be woven into cloth of spider-web sheerness. . . .

"The rapid development of aviation is opening entirely new fields for cotton—parachutes of cotton, airway markers, flying suits, covering for fuselage and wings, even compressed cotton for propellers and cotton for silvery outer envelopes and inner gas cells of the huge Zeppelins, now being constructed for the United States navy."

YOUTH HELD FOR MURDER OF HIS MOTHER'S MAID

MORRISTOWN, N. J., July 15.—(AP)—Unmoved at his predicament, and apparently showing no alarm, Harry Woolsey was held without bail today when arraigned on a charge of stabbing to death Miss Anna Miller, 23, his mother's maid.

Described by police as sub-normal, and looking four or five years older than he really is, the boy was committed to the Morris county jail to await grand jury action.

Willingly, and almost gleefully, young Woolsey reenacted the murder for police today, describing in minute details his movements as he plunged his hunting knife into the maid's back as she stood on Lookout mountain, near Green Pond, Sunday night.

He interrupted his description at one interval to tell the officers that he did not like women. "They are all like cats," he said.

HOUSE COMMITTEE HEARS OF COMMUNIST ACTIVITIES

Offiicials In New York Schools Told of Propagandizing of the School Children—Pupils Had Been Urged to Refuse to Attend School On May 1 In Order to Witness Demonstrations—In the Bronx the "Young Pioneers of America" Taught Communist Theories In Secret Schools and Sought to Counteract the Influence of the Boy Scouts of America.

NEW YORK, July 15—(AP)—Evidence tending to show that communists have been seeking for several years to lay the ground work for the overthrow of the American government by propagandizing school children in New York city and elsewhere in the country was laid today before a special house investigating committee.

The hearing, which got under way late today at a branch of the justice department, developed that the "young pioneers of America," encouraged by Moscow representatives were operating in twenty-one states and sixty-three cities, to spread the doctrine of modern Russia.

All twelve of today's witnesses were officials in New York public schools, and included Dr. William J. O'Shea, superintendent of schools. They testified that an intensive campaign to inculcate into the minds of young pupils the teachings of communism was instituted in the spring of 1928. It was brought out that activities were centered largely in three of the 810 public schools. The three are situated in Russian, Slav and Polish districts.

Edward R. Maguire, principal of Junion High school 61, in the Bronx, declared the "young pioneers of America," were receiving strong financial support, taught communistic theories in secret schools and intrigued boys and girls barely in their teens to join the organization. The group, he said, sought in every way to counteract the influence of the Boy Scouts of America.

Maguire said the communist movement was "dangerous" because of its potentialities. With intelligent adults secretly directing the propagandizing in teaching based on emotionalism, he said, the possibilities of spreading the doctrines were favorable.

Asserting that the community's urged pupils to refuse to attend school on May 1 in order to witness red demonstrations, Alfred Rado, principal of school 89 in the Bronx, said that adult communists had interfered with pupils who did attend school on that date. Several were assaulted and their books taken from them, he said. Rado added that pamphlets and circulars were distributed among pupils advocating overthrow of the government, criticising the school system and making socialistic demands.

Aaron I. Dotey, in charge of discipline at the De Witt Clinton school, said the "young pioneers of America" were directly connected through other organizations, with the third internationale at Moscow. He said that in a nationwide survey he had found the young communists operating in 21 states and 13 cities.

The witness charged that wealthy women were contributing to the "cause" and named a Mrs. Glenn R. Evans of Massachusetts, and a Mrs. K. C. Gratz of California as two of them.

BANK ROBBERY BY FIVE MACHINE GUN BANDITS

WILLMAR, Minn., July 15.—(AP)—Five machine gun bandits, moving swiftly in a well-planned raid, descended on the Bank of Willmar today, shot up the town in a fashion reminiscent of the James gang, wounded two women, one probably fatally, and escaped with $50,000 after exchanging shots with citizens.

Although it was estimated that more than 100 shots were fired by the bandits the only casualties were the two women—mother and daughter—who were shot down in the final burst of firing as the robbers sped out of town. Windshields in several automobiles and windows were shattered in buildings near the bank.

Despite the close watch kept on the roads, no trace of the bandits had been found tonight. They fled southward and none of the citizenry attempted pursuit although several sped their departure with shot gun and revolver fire. The driver of the bandit car apparently was wounded in the exchange and was dragged from behind the wheel.

IMPROVEMENT IN FAMINE SITUATION IN NORTH CHINA

SHANGHAI, July 15.—(AP)—The famine situation in north China is more hopeful now that it was 11 months ago, according to a report made by J. E. Baker of New York, of the China international famine relief commission, who has completed a survey of Shensi and Shansi provinces.

Until a new crop is harvested, however, thousands will die, according to Mr. Baker.

"On the streets of Sian City and Sian villages, thousands of poor wretches are to be seen, dragging their painful way from one garbage dump to another, huddled in a corner to rest or stretched out in the prelude to final sleep," he says.

One hopeful sign, Mr. Baker declares, "is the fact that the traffic in women is about over. The busses on the big roads, which were crowded with women leaving the country a few months ago, are not nearly so full as they were."

POSSIBLE KEY FIGURE IN LINGLE MURDER CASE

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP)—Ted Newberry, said by police to be a former whisky hauler for the Aiello-Moran-Zuta syndicate, was introduced by the Daily News today as a possible key figure in the Lingle murder case.

Newberry is one of the many gangsters reported to have been seen near the corner of Randolph street and Michigan boulevard at the moment Jake Lingle, Tribune reporter, was shot to death.

He has also been named, the News said today, as the leader of the gunmen who tried to kill Jack Zuta on State street and in the fusillade slew a street car motorman and wounded another bystander.

Press reports have frequently mentioned Newberry himself as the possible victim of gang killers. Putting its theories together, the Daily News said its information on Newberry's recent activities substantiated the belief that George Moran gangsters plotted the death of Lingle because of his alleged friendship for Al Capone.

JOHN KASHADY BOUND OVER—HELD FOR GEO. AVERY'S DEATH

(Special to The Bulletin)

STAFFORD SPRINGS, July 15—John Kashady, operator of the automobile in which George Avery of Rockville was fatally injured on the night of June 29th, was bound over to the September term of the superior court by Judge William H. Heald, in the borough court at Stafford Springs, Tuesday morning. Avery died in Johnson Memorial hospital on the morning following the accident and Kashady was charged with criminal negligence in the operation of a motor vehicle, causing death. At the time of the accident Hazel Jacobson and Margaret Kurak were occupants of the car. State Policeman Hill testified that the Ford coupe which was being operated by Mr. Kashady at the time of the accident had traveled one hundred and forty-seven feet after leaving the highway, that it struck a small apple tree and several feet beyond the apple tree it ran into an electric light pole and broke it off even with the ground. Officer Hill's testimony was coroborated by Officer Buckley, who assisted in the investigation. Susie Magure and her brother, George, were among the first to reach the location of the accident. Miss Magure testified that she heard Kashady say after the accident that he must have been asleep when the car struck the tree. Mr. Magure gave evidence as to the removal of the body of Mr. Avery, found in the automobile, to the Magure porch and later to Johnson Memorial hospital. Miss Jacobson and Miss Kurak also testified for the state. Both agreed that the occupants of the car were very quiet, that there was no conversation by any of the occupants of the car between Crystal Lake and Stafford Springs, although neither of them could definitely say that the driver of the car was asleep at the time of the accident. Miss Kurak said that she and Miss Jacobson left the Kurk home in the car with Kashady shortly before 8 o'clock on the night of the accident. They then went to Rockville. Mr. Kashady acting as chauffeur and upon arriving at Rockville picked up George Avery and drove around the city for some time. The four then went in the car to South Manchester and from there proceeded to Casey's Lookout, where they sat in the car for some time but neither one could tell how long they remained at Casey's. From there they returned to South Manchester and stopped at a lunch cart where lunch was brought from the cart to the car. After finishing the lunch the party returned to Stafford Springs by way of Crystal Lake and Forestville, the accident occuring shortly before midnight, near the home of George Magure in the Forestville section of the town. Dr. G. Percival Bard, medical examiner testified that death was caused from a fracture of the skull and that this fracture could have been caused by the automobile accident. Judge Heald found probable cause and fixed Kashady's bond at $2,000, which was furnished by Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kashady, father and mother of the accused. Mr. Kashady was represented by Attorney Libby of Hartford and Judge M. D. O'Connell presented the case on behalf of the state.

DANIELSON

BOROUGH READY TO GO AHEAD WITH BOND ISSUE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 15.—(P)—Formal and necessary action has been taken by the warden and court of burgesses preliminary to the issuing of $50,000 in borough bonds authorized at a special borough meeting on June 17. These bonds are to be used in retiring outstanding notes of the borough to the amount of approximately $26,000, and in carrying on the sidewalk construction plan, now well advanced. Half the cost of the construction of the concrete walks is borne by the abutting property owners, half by the borough.

The resolution adopted by the borough officials provides that the bonds will be numbered from 1 to 57, each fourth bond beginning with number four to be a $500 bond, and to be payable in numerical order. The other bonds will be of the $1,000 denomination. The issue is to bear interest at the rate of 4 1-2 per cent per annum, with interest payable semi-annually on April 1 and October 1, of each year. As the bonds mature they will be paid by the Merchants' National bank of Boston, which will handle the issue.

Heretofore the indebtedness of the borough has been in the form of notes, held by local banks and by individuals, and at a higher rate of interest than the borough will pay on its bonds. At the time the last annual report was issued, in April of the year, there were $32,000 in such notes outstanding.

However, there were uncollected assets in the form of sewer and sidewalk assessments and collected taxes, together with $1,100.99 cash on hand, that brought the net indebtedness of the borough down to $26,393.10.

Favorable action, in that degree expressing approval of the plan, has been taken by the warden and court of burgesses on the suggestion of the merchants' committee of the chamber of commerce for better lighting facilities in the business section of the borough. Borough officials, however, have requested the proponents of the plan to submit an estimate of additional cost for the proposed installation before taking definite action as to putting it into effect.

The plan would increase the number of lights and the rearrangement of lights in the business section so as to give a better distribution of illumination. The additional lights would be in service until midnight and then turned off, and only so many lights as are now in use in the business section would burn from then until daylight.

During the last financial year, ending April 1, the borough's bill for street lights was $6,042.48. Estimates run as high as $1,500 additional if the proposed better lighting system is installed in the business section. However, after a carefully prepared estimate is presented to the warden and court of burgesses, it likely will in turn be placed before the voters that they may determine in a special borough meeting just what action they wish to take Dayville people sensed the possibility today of seeing activity about the trolley car barn again. Since electric car service was discontinued here several years ago, with no possibility of resumption during this generation, the car barn, a substantial brick building, has been as silent as a tomb, with windows boarded up and grass growing around a structure where once there was so much activity. Now that the Connecticut company has sold its Dyer dam property to the Connecticut Light and Power company, the impression has gained ground in Dayville, and to some degree here, that the Connecticut company, now housing its motor coaches at the Dyer dam, will in due time keep them in Dayville. No one representing the company has as yet said this is true, however.

There is a revival of the story that the state highway department has under consideration the construction of something like three miles of concrete highway through Franklin street from Main up over Christian hill and past the Old Furnace to South Killingly, there to connect up with the present Danielson-Providence route. There is also the prospect, it is said, of the concrete being continued on to the Connecticut-Rhode Island line at Little Rest, and that Rhode Island will rebuild the present trunk line from Little Rest into Providence, using concrete, too.

Such an improvement would have many advantages. The Danielson-Providence route is one of the most heavily burdened with traffic in southern New England. If the new cut-off is built it will divert much of the traffic that now comes through the business section of Danielson to a route in comparatively little use. Incidentally, it would revive the use of a famous old stage coach line, for many years ago stages came down over Christian hill on the Providence-Hartford route.

However, it is unlikely that the improvement will be made this year. It may be a reality of a year or two hence, and Danielson will be much pleased. There is only one drawback, and that is the grade crossing at Franklin street.

It is understood that the construction of a permanent transmission line by the Connecticut Light and Power company from its newly acquired property at the Dyer dam to Danielson will be undertaken as soon as possible. The distance is about two miles. Permits have been obtained to run the line on lands owned by others along the route.

Michael Hirvonen, who has been in the poultry business in the western part of the town of Brooklyn for several years, is planning to spend the next two or three months visiting with friends and relatives in Minnesota and other states in that section of the country.

As all banks have inactive accounts, if they handle savings, so have Danielson's institutions. This is called to mind by a public notice given by one local bank that Mary and Eliza Casey have on deposit the sum of $1,105.68, and there has been no deposit in upwards of 20 years. Meanwhile, the accumulation of interest has increased the account to the figure mentioned. All effort to locate the depositors has been unsuccessful up to this time. It is presumed that the owners of the joint account were resident here many years ago, or somewhere in nearby territory, and have since died or gone to other parts.

Furniture, lawn mower, rakes and other such tools for sale this week at the Blanchard home, High St., Dayville.—adv.

Wilfred Perry, Norwich, whose automobile figured in a collision with another car at Main street and Westeld road Monday morning, was presented before Deputy Judge Charles S. Francis in the town court this morning. On an amended complaint charging failure to grant half the traveled right of way he was fined $5 and costs.

At a meeting last evening, the warden and court of burgesses authorized the installation of a street light at the corner of Williams and Maple streets, a section that has been built up considerably within the past three or four years.

Col. Henry W. Babson of Danielson is the life president of the 18th Connecticut Volunteers, a Civil war regiment, whose surviving members are to hold their annual reunion in Norwich later in the summer.

PUTNAM

HOSPITAL FUND HAS NOW REACHED $4,200

(Special to The Bulletin)

PUTNAM, July 15.—As the third week of campaign for the $35,000 additional fund for the nurses' home of the Day Kimball hospital drew to a close tonight the amount of money raised was $4,200, Mrs. A. A. Vonsiatsky, chairman of the general committee stated. Mrs. Vonsiatsky said that drive forces operating in the towns of Putnam, Danielson, Brooklyn, Woodstock and Eastford had not made their returns for the week to the campaign headquarters, but would do so at a meeting of the various committees which will be held Wednesday. It is expected that the proceeds derived from the various events held during the past week in each of the above committees will greatly enhance the fund treasury

Mrs. Vonsiatsky, in commenting on the programme of events scheduled for the coming week for the hospital home benefit, said that through the courtesy of Andre Roosevelt, a noted American traveler and explorer, a motion picture depicting the life, habits and ceremonies of the natives of the island of Barli, near Java, will be filmed at the Bradley theatre at a special matinee performance on the afternoon of July 31, for the nurses' home fund. Mrs. Vonsiatsky intimated that the committee is especially fortunate in securing a release of the production, since it has only recently been completed. Mr. Roosevelt, who directed and supervised the filming of the island picture story, is a cousin of the late President Theodore Roosevelt. The film was made in conjunction with the writing of the volume, "Lost Paradise," by Powell, which gained a strong foothold in the literary world after its appearance last month.

Another noteworthy event scheduled for next week's programme is the bridge and tea party to be given at the home of Mrs. J. Arthur Atwood in Wauregan next Friday evening. This gathering is to be supervised by the Danielson committee in charge of the drive in that section.

No Quarantine Here

Because of the fact that quarantine lines of Connecticut areas infested with the European corn borer have moved in a westerly direction, agents of the United States department of agriculture will not be assigned to duty in this county this year, County Agent Raymond E. Wing of the Windham County Farmers' association said today.

In commenting on the rapid spread of the insect last year, Mr. Wing said that government officials of the department of agriculture have included the entire area of Windham county in the quarantine, along with Worcester county in southern Massachusetts and western Rhode Island and parts of New London county in this state.

Garden products grown in northern Windham county may be marketed in Worcester and Webster, without interference of the government inspectors. This announcement will be of interest to farmers in the Woodstocks, since a large portion of the products of the market gardens are carried into Webster, Worcester and Southbridge for marketing.

Mr. Wing stated that, due to the spread of the borer, the line of quarantine this spring moved steadily westward, to include Tolland county and a substantial portion of Hartford county.

As the situation now stands, much depends upon officials of the Adams Manufacturing company, owners of the large Main street mill, reaching a satisfactory agreement as to the leasing of the plant to a New York concern, before officials of the latter will consider establishing in Putnam. The well-grounded prospect of the novelty manufacturing concern locating in Putnam was mentioned last week.

Cashier Arthur E. Smith of the Citizens National bank, chairman of the new industries committee of the chamber of commerce, which is negotiating with the concern, said this morning that no new developments have taken place since the conference with the firm officials last week. Mr. Smith said that the representatives of the concern are intensely interested in Putnam and that practically everything hinges upon the outcome of their negotiations with the Adams company. Mr. Smith added that the committee is overlooking no detail in its effort to secure the new industry for Putnam. The concern is reputed to have a weekly payroll of $4,000 and employs 150 workers.

STATE PARKS ON THE SHORE

How popular Connecticut shore property is that is owned by the state and to which the public has access is disclosed by the large crowds which flock to Hammonasset beach. It is part of the state park system and provisions have been made there for those who want to camp and those who desire a day at the shore. There is no exclusion because cottagers do not want the rabble and no limitation because of a desire to be exclusive. The state park commissioners have looked well after the desires of those who want to spend a day at the beach.

The plea is frequently voiced that further efforts should be made to meet the public requirements in this respect. There were the days when there were plenty of opportunities for those in various sections of the state to go to the shore, have a dip, enjoy a picnic and round out a happy day, but conditions have changed. The public is finding that certain of the beaches are becoming much more exclusive. There is a desire on the part of those who have built summer homes to exclude the transients. They do not like the annoyances that go with large daily crowds but desire to be allowed to enjoy their shore homes without interference. The result is that many who have in the past experienced no difficulty in finding a bathing place and a spot to play in the sand are confronted with changed conditions.

It is because of this that there is an increasing demand that, through the state park commission, the state should make provision for the public at points where greater numbers would be served before the time comes when shore property available for such purposes has been acquired by private developers.

Hammonasset beach occupies a central point along the Connecticut coast line. The patronage indicates the appreciation of the public, but it is apparent that distance reduces the many who would otherwise like to enjoy its attractions. With more of such state beaches along the shore, a greater number of people in other parts of the state would be served. A state beach at some point along the New London county shore would appeal particularly to the many thousands in the eastern end of the state.

MODIFYING THE RESERVATION

Opposition which was disclosed upon the presentation of the Norris reservation to the London treaty gives promise of effecting a compromise in regard to it which will accomplish its devitalization.

Such a reservation has all the indications of being an effort to handicap action on the treaty itself. It was not suggested until after the president had refused to give the senate the papers which were sought under the claim of being necessary for the consideration of the treaty. The president made it clear that it would be against public interest to disclose them, whereupon Senator Norris tried to create the impression that they contained secret agreements which would not be acceptable. The reservation, as presented, reflected upon the president, creating the impression that he was endeavoring to cover up such agreements by refusing to yield to the senate request, but with the elimination of the reference to the president in the preamble of the reservation the damaging feature of it will be eliminated and as such there can be no harm in the reservation, even though it is needless.

Talk about secret agreements in the papers is indulged in in an effort to prevent ratification at this time. There is no basis for it and it is fully understood by all those who know the contents of the papers and the delegates to the conference that nothing of the kind exists. Thus, while the reservation is worthless so far as preventing any secret agreements from going into effect, its adoption will overcome any long discussion concerning it and serve to hasten the desired vote on the pact.

Everything considered, the reservation reflects no credit upon the author. Its purpose is solely to embarrass. It is like much of the other needless legislation which is used to occupy the time and attention of the senate and keep it from considering the real question at stake. It is quite evident that ratification of a treaty does not include ratification of anything which is not contained therein, Senator Norris and his reservation to the contrary notwithstanding.

ITALY AND FRANCE

Much hope has been expressed that Italy and France would come to an understanding concerning their navies which would make it possible for them to overcome the threatened race for supremacy in naval construction.

At the time of the London conference they could not come to terms. Since then they have evidenced a desire to do so, but negotiations have not made much progress. That there are possibilities of an understanding is disclosed, however, by the conversations which have taken place between the foreign ministers of the two countries in which an agreement has been reached to delay all naval construction until December. This will permit several months for further discussion of a naval understanding. It must be regarded as a sign that the situation is not hopeless.

There are complications involved in an endeavoring to come to terms which require time. There are things outside of the actual naval construction that have their influence upon the establishment of such a defense. If there can be an elimination of these the situation will be decidedly improved.

Each of these countries cannot fail to be impressed by the economic advantage which is involved in restricting naval construction. Each can make good use of the millions that would go into naval construction and each must appreciate that with the other building as rapidly as it does there will be no drect advantage gained by swelling their naval strength.

There is just as good reason why these two neighbors should be concerned in the maintenance of peaceful relations and adjusting their differences without fighting as for others to be striving for such an end. In fact, while others are committed to limitation of armament, they may well see the force of the good example and endeavor to do likewise. It was the feeling at the close of the London conference that if given time these two countries would see the desirability of reaching an agreement. Such a view cannot be abandoned as yet and the agreement upon a naval holiday until they can each set forth their respective views gives some promise that the outlook is not hopeless.

IS BASEBALL SLIPPING?

Is baseball slipping? Has interest in the national game dropped to the point where there isn't enough to support league baseball? We have not been disposed to accept the claim that baseball was on the toboggan, but the situation in the Eastern league is such as to create the impression that either there is a dwindling in the interest or else the teams have been furnishing a poor quality of baseball. Lack of ready money may also be another important reason for the failure to make the game pay, quite the same as it was in reducing the customary sales of fireworks for the Fourth.

There have been years when leagues made up of small cities have had their struggles to keep going and reorganizations have had to be resorted to and some curtailments, but when cities the size of Hartford throw up the sponge and Providence is about to be deserted by the Boston Braves management, which has been backing the team in that city, there seems to be something the matter somewhere.

Cities like Hartford and Providence are populous enough so that good baseball aggregations should find adequate support, and yet it can hardly be expected that those who have been putting their money into such a proposition without securing an adequate return are going to keep doing so indefinitely. The situation has gotten to the point in Providence where a new management is necessary if baseball is going to survive. Whether others can get more assurance out of the future than the management of a big league team, which must be given credit for knowing the game, remains to be seen.

If baseball is slipping, the answer seems to lie in the fact that the public which was formerly entertained by the game is securing its entertainment in other ways. The automobile is probably doing its share. Golf is offering its attractions.

PUERTO RICO IS CORRECT

We do not know what you are going to do about it but by the action of the United States senate the name of our island possession has been changed from Porto Rico to Puerto Rico. This simply means the change of one letter and the addition of another, with a slightly different twist of the tongue in pronouncing it. It remains the same island and without any change in the ownership.

The change is one about which there will be little disturbance, and little or no discussion. It complies with the desires of the residents of the island, the natives, so to speak, and from the standpoint of historical accuracy it will have to be accepted as correct, even though it is Spanish rather than it is American.

The United States has had the island since the Spanish war. Puerto Rico was the old name but Porto Rico was simpler and less foreign. It was natural that it should be the one generally adopted and brought into common use. It was, in fact, Americanized, but it didn't suit the islanders. They have been trying ever since the switch to the American flag to have the old name restored.

It is not a matter of vital importance, but it seemed to be necessary to secure action by congress in order to get away from the habit of calling it Porto Rico. It was a case of endeavoring to please the inhabitants of the islands and in a case where so little was involved, where such a small sacrifice had to be made, there was no serious objection to it. It is quite evident that it will cause no extensive opposition on the part of the rank and file of American citizens so that if the Puerto Ricans are satisfied everybody should be happy. There are other and greater improvements which are needed, far more than the change in the spelling of the name.

FIVE O'CLOCK

Marcella furiously opened her "Ekelman's Exercises" to page 6, plumped it down on the music rack on the piano and began her vocal practice for the afternoon. Marcella was naturally high strung and temperamental and her fury today was well founded indeed. She would show him, the whole world, just how mistaken he was and how right she was! The very idea. How could she ever have become interested in a man who could understand her so little?

"Do re mi re do re mi re do," chirped Marcella over and over, beginning at middle C. She rehearsed this note several times, then began a series of the same on C sharp. How fluent her voice was! It was just what Professor Humphries had said, "an unusual, palpitating coloratura that promised great things—with the proper training, which he proposed to give it, at $5 an hour. Marcella had enlarged this opinion of the professor in her own mind to include a future on the concert platform, and, should she deign to try it, a fling at grand opera. And in the face of this magnificence, John Alexander Middlegate had demanded last night that she give up her career and marry him.

"You can practice the old scales getting breakfast each morning if you must," said John Alexander, "and driving to meet me at the station each night when I return from work. I'll appreciate it enough to make up for all the concert audiences between here and San Francisco!" That John could jest so about her art was too much.

"Tomorrow, at 5 o'clock," he said, "I will call for you on your final answer. Think it over Marcella. I won't be put off. I leave town on a business trip at 6 sharp and I want to know my fate before I go. Remember," he had called as she hurried into the house without a backward glance, "tomorrow at 5 o'clock!"

It was 4:30. In half an hour John would call, would interrupt this important vocal practice of hers and ask for her answer. And she would give it to him—stingingly.

"I'm sorry," she would say, "I certainly cannot marry any one who has so little appreciation for my art. Or my career. The futurel les before me, to make what I will. And it promises much more than you can understand!" Something like that.

"Do mi sol la sol do," trilled Marcella, on high C. Fifteen times over. Quarter to 5. It wasn't long now. "Do re mi fa sol sol do." Twenty-one times. Three minutes to 5! In spite of herself, Marcella felt herself grow tense all over. Fire burned in her cheks. But she must be firm. John would coax, wheedle, beg, threaten, entreat—she would be deaf to it all. She must. Her future depended upon it. "Do me sol ——" Her voice faltered. Her mouth was dry and parched.

It was 5 o'clock. Now—now—the moment had come. But she would be calm. "Do——" With resolution becoming a real artist, Marcella began the longest exercise on the page. She must get her mind away from the telephone! "Do sol mi do." The exercise—five whole lines, was finished and he had not called. And it was ten minutes after 5!

What could have happened to him? Had he changed his mind? He was leaving at 6 and he must be on his way to the station by now. Gone——! He had taken her cold words seriously then? He had felt his fate was sealed. Of course, he would not call her after her harsh rebuff. What a little fool she had been! "John, or, John, how could I have done it to you?" she thought, tremblingly. He was gone out of her life forever. How bleak the future was without him. What could she do? Fly to the train? Make him listen to her? How silly. She would practice her voice exercises. "Do——" Marcella's voice broke.

Some where a bell was ringing—furiously. Marcella flew to the telephone.

"John!" she cried, when she heard his excited voice over the wire. "You said 5 o'clock——"

"I'm sorry, dear," said John, contritely, "my cab broke down and I walked the rest of the way. And I've been thinking a lot—about what you said last night—about your art——"

"Forget it!" said Marcella, imperiously, like an artist who had captured and held the world at her feet. "and come to see me the minute you get back to town!"—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON

Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 15—President Hoover's vacation plans remained vague, geographically speaking, as July came in, but there was at least one indication as to how he planned to put in his time reading during the summer months.

And most folks would not regard his selection of books as conducive to mental recreation.

The list reached the Congressional library and naturally set things stirring. When a president asks for certain books, he is quite apt to get them and not to be told that they are "out."

Nor is it very likely that many of the works Mr. Hoover planned to browse upon during the summer were out. None are "best sellers."

Heavy Reading

One white house demand was for nature books. That, of course, represented preparation for the tour of the Rocky Mountain national parks the president had long planned.

And to be sure he was supplied with information of a dependable character about what he would see, Mr. Hoover caled for a certain "ency-Mr. Hoover called for a certain "ency-dozen or so volumes of it.

But the rest of the presidential book list was even more imposing. It consisted wholly of books on economics, Mr. Hoover's favorite literary diet. Some twenty or thirty such books were included in this part of the white house list.

One was a history of financial speculation, while another covered price declines since the "Napoleonic era."

Unlike Predecessors

Clearly Mr. Hoover had no intention of putting "the shop" out of mind during his vacation. He does not seem to employ the same means of relaxation from cares of state which men like Woodrow Wilson and William Howard Taft displayed.

Both of them were great readers of detective stories. Wilson loved the movies and the theatres, stealing many a precious hour for a vaudeville show even in war times to escape for a time the harassing cares and responsibilities of his office.

Harding found his escape in golf and in evening chats with groups of former senate boon companions—when no word of politics or governmental problems was permitted to intrdude.

Hoover has only his fishing o' week-ends and even at Rapidan he talks shop much with his guests.

And no one who has watched him since he entered the white house could fail to see the new, deep lines being etched in his face. It is not an easy task, the presidency.

Stories That Recall Others

Both High.

A boy was hired by a neighbor to cut some weeds. When he had finished the employer asked him, "What are you going to charge me, son?"

"Fifty cents," the boy replied.

"Pretty high, ain't ya?"

"Yes, but so were the weeds."

New Type.

The annual automobile discussion was in progress but a certain family could not decide what type of auto to buy.

At last after the pow wow was ended, Mrs X told her neighbor that she was going to buy a "converable" coupe.

Vaccination for Small Pox

By Clifford G. Grulee, M. D., Chicago, (From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Over a century ago Jenner, an English physician, observed that dairy maids rarely got small pox in spite of its prevalence in all other occupations. He noticed that frequently they had sores on their hands from udders of the cows which were affected with cowpox. He therefore tried transplanting some of the lesions of cowpox onto individuals to protect them from small pox. Naturally in those days before we had any idea of bacteria, such transplantings were often contaminated by secondary infections. But on the whole, Jenner was very successful; so successful, in fact, that crowned heads from all over the world and the nobility sought his services.

In order to understand this, we must realize the situation as regards small pox at the end of the 18th and the beginning of the 19th centuries. The mortality from small pox, especially among children, was such that in this enlightened age we can scarcely realize it. Almost half the children born died before they were in their teens, and a very large proportion of these, indeed, died of small pox. Today in such countries as Germany, where vaccination is compulsory before the first year, small pox is practically unknown. The other day I was reading an article written by an eminent physician of Prague, on an epidemic of small pox which has occurred among wet nurses in an orphan asylum over which he had control. It happened that at the time, an eminent German colleague was visiting him. It also happened that this physician had writen a rather extensive article on small pox for a well known German medical book. On hearing of the outbreak of the epidemic, he became quite excited and begged of his Bohemian host to let him see some of the cases, since he had never seen a case of small pox. This is in marked contrast to the condition prevalent in the United States and Canada. Nearly every student of medicine has a chance to go to the pest house and see several cases of small pox.

I have before a bulletin from the Metropolitan Life Insurance company issued last December. This takes in the statistics on small pox for 38 states and the District of Columbia and 7 Canadian provinces. Remember this is only for the first six months of 1927, 1928 and 1929. In 1927 (in 6 months) there were 17,796 cases with 95 deaths; in 1928 there were 22,487 cases with 72 deaths: in 1929 there were 17270 cases with 82 deaths. If we double these numbers for each year, we will find that there are between 35,000 and 40,000 cases of small pox in the United States and Canada every year, with between 100 and 200 deaths. This of course does not tell us of the various complications which result in the disease, nor of the misery caused by the dreadful scarring of the face, nor of the defective eyesight as a result of scarring of the eye-ball. When we contrast conditions in Germany with these in the United States and Canada, we may well ask ourselves why, and it seems to me that only one answer can be given. There are few enforceable laws in these countries to make vaccination obligatory, and what laws there are, apply very largely to school age.

Now as to when a child should be vaccinated. Most authorities agree that the best time to vaccinate a child is between 6 months and 1 year of age. At this time the reaction is least and the danger of secondary infection, which at most, is extremely small, is minimum. With the new type of puncture vaccination there is very little scarring, so that this objection too, is removed. Many consider it wise to vaccinate all girl infants on the outer side of the upper portion of the thigh. With boys, it makes very little difference except that from a social standpoint, as the boy gets older, he may be ashamed of a scar on the thigh instead of on his arm, thinking that it implies femininity.

The dangers from vaccination are almost non-existent as at present practices with our well-controlled vaccines. The advantages are too obvious for me to attempt to detail them to you. It is high time that the American people realize the prevalence of small pox in our communities and the necessity for early vaccination. If your child has not as yet been vaccinated, plan to take him to your family doctor before school opens in the fall.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Peter Gets Things Straight at Last

Only knowledge that's exact,
Is acceptable as fact.
—Old Mother Nature.

"How can a White Heron be a Little Blue Heron?" demanded Peter indignantly.

"He can, because he is in this case," replied Egret the Great White Heron. "These three young cousins of mine that you are looking at are white, aren't they?"

Peter agreed that they were white, very white indeed. That was just the trouble. If they were white, they couldn't be blue. He was willing to admit that they were little Herons—at least, they were smaller than Egret. If Egret had called them Little White Herons, it would have ben all right; but to call them Little Blue Herons, when they really were white, was pure nonsense. At least, that is what Peter thought.

Meanwhile, Jerry Muskrat had been thinking the matter over. "Do you remember, Peter," said he "that Winsome Bluebird once had a white son. He was white, but he was a Bluebird just the same. Perhaps it is that way in this case."

Egret shook his head. "It isn't just that way," said he. "That white Bluebird probably was white all his life. Probably his brothers and sisters were not white at all."

"That's true," spoke up Peter. "He was the only white member of the family."

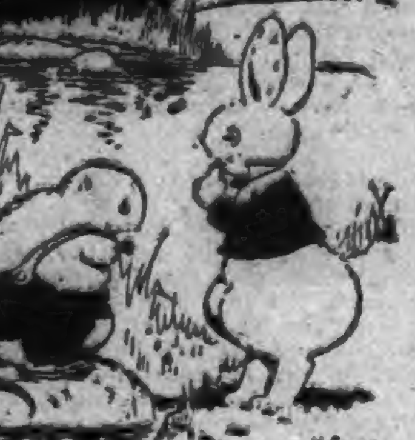
"I thought as much," declared Egret. "Now, these young Herons are not always going to have white coats. In fact, if you look sharply, you can see that they are beginning to change already. By next year they will not be white at all. Now, both the father and mother of those youngsters there wore slate blue, and by the time they are three years old that will be the color of the coats of these youngsters. That is why this kind of Heron is called the Little Blue Heron. Of course, the children of Little Blue Herons must be Little Blue Herons too, no matter what the color of their coats."

Peter scratched a long ear with a long hindfoot. Then he turned his head and scratched the other long ear with the other long hindfoot. "I begin to see," said he.

"I'm glad you do," said Egret.

"Little Blue Heron is just a name, the same as Peter Rabbit," said Peter.

"That's it," replied Egret. "If you should see these young Herons with



"Do you remember, Peter," said he, "that winsome Blue Bird once had a white son?"

their parents, you would never guess from their looks that they were closely related."

"Did the feather hunters kill the Little Blue Herons, too?" asked Jerry Muskrat.

"Yes," replied Egret. "It got so that no White Heron had much of a chance to live. As I told you once before, there was a time when many members of my family used to come up here to the North, particularly in summer. Now that we've been so pleasantly received up here, I hope we may come again and that others of the family may venture up here. There seems to be excellent feeding here. Do those two-legged creatures with terrible guns ever come here?"

"No," said Peter. "Farmer Brown's Boy will not allow them here."

"And who," asked Egret, "is Farmer Brown's Boy?"

"The friend of all the little people of the Green Forest and the Green Meadows, the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool," replied Peter. "Here he comes now."

Sure enough, Farmer Brown's Boy was headed across the Green Meadows straight for the Smiling Pool. Egret spread his great wings and headed for the Big River. The others did the same.

Tariffs Through the Centuries.

Australia has recently enacted a new tariff law which has unique features. It raises duties on many products shipped from the United States, and it prohibits the importation of numerous articles except by written consent. The objects of the new legislation are stated to be reduction of unemployment, stimulation of manufacture in Australia by branch factories under foreign ownership, and stabilization of the exchange rates.

"Australia's new tariff law, coming at the time of a revision of tariffs at home, arouses interest in the origin of tariff systems and their development in various countries," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic society.

"No one knows when or where the first tariff was imposed or the first customs duties collected. The collection of a toll or duty from goods brought into a city or a country became important with the development of trade to a considerable volume. Although Babylon, one of the earliest civilizations of which we have a record, had a highl organized social system with a minute code of laws relating to deeds, leases, mortgages, taxation, and the like, it is not known what part customs played in the affairs of the government. A country's revenue in those days was chiefly from a tithe of the livestock and crops of its citizens.

"When Greece hel dthe most import- "When Greece held the most important modities moving in trade had come to be an accepted tax. Expert prohibitions had also come into use, chiefly as defense measures in time of war or as protective means to prepare against war. Thus at times wheat could not be exported from Attica, and Greek ships that brought wheat from the Black sea ports for reexport were compelled to leave one-third their caroges in Greece. Another feature of the Greek system was the establishment of foreign trading stations by certain cities which monopolized their trade. Both export and import duties were charged by Athens; and his taxation alike of outbound and inbound commerce was common among all the early tariff systems.

"Rome had little commerce in its early days and allowed commodities to come and go freely. When expansion set in and trade grew, the government began to mold economic currents, often by direct methods. Some commercial rivals, such as Carthage and Corinth were destroyed. Other conquered countries were divided into districts and customs houses were set up at the dividing lines. Both exports and imports were taxed.

"Rome's tariff system was probably closer to those in use today than any previous ones. The types of duties were the same that entered into curren tariff discussions! specific and ad valorem. A specific duty is a charge per unit, as 20 cents for each yard or pound or dozen of the commodity texed. An ad valorem duty is a percentage of the value of the commodity. In the early days of the Roman empire the most common ad valorem rate was 5 per cent. Later it was raised to 12½ per cent.

"Venice, the great trading republic of the middle ages, carried on the Roman tariff theories and went further. Her object was to obtain a monopoly in the handling of eastern goods and to regulate by duties the trade with the west and north.

"The Mameluke rulers of Egypt held a strategic position in regard to eastern trade during the middle ages, and put on as heavy duties as the traffic would bear. As a result of the tolls imposed by them and by tribal chiefs in Arabia, Indian goods increased 800 per cent in price between India and Europe. In the end the Mamelukes defeated their purpose. The Mongols, who gained control of an overland route farther north, charged lesser duties, and the trade flowed over the new route. After Vasco da Gama found the ocean path to the east, both the Egyptian and the overland route gave way to the cheaper, duty-free water route.

"About this time Marco Polo, traveling in China, found that duties were charged there in the realm of the Great Khan. He found duties collected at city boundaries as well as at provincial frontiers. These duties ranged from 3 1-3 to 10 per cent.

"In medieval Europe, tariffs became a nightmare to struggling traders. Every petty prince and feudal lord set up his toll gates and customs houses and took a share of the merchant's wares. After the feudal kings took over the barons' privileges there was a movement away from the collection of duties in every small area; but progress was slow, and in some countries, such as France and Germany, provincial customs continued to be levied. Even cities took toll from entering goods. The local taxes of Paris are survivals of this custom.

"It is almost universally recognized now that tariffs should be imposed by national units, and that they should apply to imports, not exports. The constitution of the United States prohibits all export taxes, and the charging of import duties between the states. In early ages tariffs constituted a minor factor in national taxation. Today they are the most universally important source of national income."

HOGS FED OUTDOORS GAIN MORE RAPIDLY

EAST LANSING, Mich.—(AP)—The hog doesn't require an expensive home, nor conveniences that go with it.

Experiments at Michigan State college show that hogs housed in portable cots and fed outdoors made more rapid gains than animals which lived in a central hog house and were fed inside.

Average feed costs for the "pampered" hogs was $7.07, compared with $6.77 for ones given few conveniences.

HERE'S THE LEGEND OF NAGS HEAD'S NAME

NAGS HEAD, N. C.—(AP)—An eerie, old legend of how this seacost hamlet received its name is told by the graybeards living here.

Tradition has it that natives used to lead an old nag with a lantern tied around its neck, up and down the shore to deceive ships and lure them on treacherous shoals nearby. Many seamen, the story goes, met disaster from this cause.

Although modern inhabitants scoff at the tale, old-timers insist this was the way Nags Head got its name.

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Stanley Works, New Britain

In 1842, Frederick Stanley, whose enterprise was to be the forerunner of the present The Stanley Works, set up a little bolt shop on Lake street, using the first steam engine in New Britain. After fashioning an assortment of bolts, he would drive into the country selling them to the farmers, even attaching the bolts to the barn doors himself.

Ten years later, several neighbors became interested and, pooling their savings, incorporated under the name of The Stanley Works, with a capital of $30,000. Butts and hinges were added to the line, and the working force increased to 25 men. During Civil war times, the plant was moved to its present location. Shortly afterwards, this company was the first to develop and use the process of cold rolling steel.

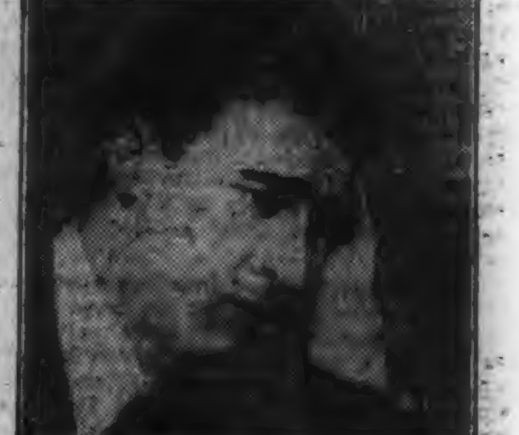
Steadily the Stanley Works has widened its list of products to include cabinet, screen door and window hardware, handles, brackets, and washers; hot and cold rolled strip steel; and has combined with itself other firms purchased, until now it is spread over several parts of the world. Today, steel mills in Bridgeport; factories in Niles, Ohio, Hamilton, Ontario, Canada; and Velbert, Germany send products bearing the Stanley trademark all over the world.

In 1920, The Stanley Works acquired the Stanley Rule and Level plant, originally a small enterprise, but which now has branches in Newark, N. J., South Shaftsbury, Vt., Pulaski, Tenn., and Roxton Pond, Quebec, manufacturing the foremost line of wood-working tools in the world.

The present officers of the company are: President, C. F. Bennett; vice presidents, J. E. Cooper, E. W. Christ, M. Farmer, W. H. Hart, J. E. Stone, E. W. Pelton, P. E. Pritchard; secretary, E. W. Christ; treasurer, L. W. Young; assistant secretary, P. F. King; assistant secretary, M. H. Pease; assistant treasurer, W. C. Milkey.

Tired Feeling Called Nature's Protest for Poor Care of Body

Constipation more apt to be cause than ordinary day's work . .



A regular well cleaned system is the first and perhaps the biggest step toward health and strength, according to many modern specialists. Bad skin, pimples, headache, biliousness and general run-down or tired feeling may all be signs of poor bowel functioning.

Yet there is now no real need to suffer from constipation and thousands and thousands of people are finding relief in Feen-a-mint—the modern chewing gum laxative that you can purchase everywhere. This is because Feen-a-mint works on an important new principle—that of uniform internal distribution.

Because you chew Feen-a-mint it is effective in milder doses than ordinary laxatives. For the effectiveness of a laxative is not so much dependent upon the quantity swallowed as upon the thoroughness of its distribution throughout the alimentary tract.

While you chew this delicious bit of gum the tasteless laxative it contains is gradually released and mixed with the saliva. Thus it is carried to the intestinal tract smoothly, evenly, without shock to the system or the distressing after-effects so common with old-fashioned laxatives. Each particle of the laxative in Feen-a-mint works with utmost efficiency, gently encouraging the intestinal muscles to resume the activity necessary for healthful elimination.

The action of Feen-a-mint is thorough, gentle, dependable. With the proper dosage, it is not necessary to increase the amount of Feen-a-mint you take nor to switch to another laxative for a change. Feen-a-mint is harmless and contains no habit-forming drugs. Truly the health laxative Ask for a package at any drug store. —Adv.

Norwich Produce Market

Furnished by Bureau of Markets Conn. Dept. of Agriculture

The apple and potato prospects as published in the Connecticut Market Bulletin are of interest:

The July first outlook for the Connecticut apple crop indicates a condition of 79 per cent of normal as compared with a condition of 60 per cent a year ago and 70 per cent for the five year average. The total crop is forecast at 1,572,000 bushels which would be 302,000 bushels more than the 1929 crop and slightly higher than the five year average. The commercial apple crop of Connecticut is forecast at 276,000 barrels. Reports from growers indicate that there was a very heavy drop of apples in nearly all sections of New England. It is believed that it is the heaviest June drop in many years and that as yet the extent of the damage cannot be determined.

There are approximately 16,000 acres in Connecticut planted to potatoes. The crop is estimated at 2,080,000 bushels which is the same as last year and slightly above the five year average. Acreage in Maine exceeds that of last year by 9,000 acres. The Maine crop is forecast at 47 million bushels as compared with 50 million last year and 38 million for the five year average. In spite of the fact that Maine acreage is larger this year than last, statistical data indicates that with the heavy rainfall this year the yield per acre will be reduced. The United States crop is estimated at 398,412,000 bushels as compared with 379,290,000 bushels last year and 379,796,000 bushels for the five year average.

Very few local changes were noted on the morning's market. Native corn, cucumbers and tomatoes were offered lightly and in active demand. Beans, beets and cabbage continued very liberal. Beets and cabbage were draggy but beans were finding a more ready market for good stock. Good peas and lettuce were scarce. Red and black raspberries were in active demand and light offerings. All poultry continued weak and eggs were firm. The range of wholesale prices follows:

PHYSICIANS PUZZLED BY THE POISONING OF FAMILY

NEWTON, N. J., July 15.— (AP) — With three of his children dead, and his wife and fourth child in a critical condition, Wilbur Stanton tonight was waging a losing fight for life against a poison which puzzles doctors.

The children, Elizabeth, 13; Fanny, 12, and Alice, 4, died today shortly after being stricken. Mrs. Stanton and William Cortwright, a step-child, two years old, are also suffering from the ailment but are expected to recover. Stanton was not expected to live through the night.

Returning to his farm yesterday in agony, Stanton failed to arouse his family. He dragged himself into the house and found his wife and children near death.

The farmer crawled to the main road which runs past his house and was found by a passing motorist who summoned Dr. Lamar Voorhees. By the time the doctor arrived, the three children were dead. Dr. Lamar called two other physicians and together they have labored to save the remaining three.

Sunday the family went on a picnic, taking with them sandwiches made of preserved meats. On their way home they stopped at a stand and ate some ice cream.

MAYOR URGES WATER BOARD TO PUT DEPARTMENT ON PAYING BASIS

At a special meeting held Tuesday night, the board of water commissioners, President Charles A. Hagberg presiding, had before it a communication to President Hagberg from Mayor Lee Roy Robbins in which the mayor called upon the board to consider the necessity of putting the business of the water department upon a paying basis. It was the mayor's suggestion that the water rates would need to be raised.

The board took the matter under advisement and postponed any action until its next meeting.

Mayor Robbins' letter was written to President Hagberg on Saturday and in substance called the board's attention to the fact that a deficit of $40,000 is indicated in the water department for this year because there are to be extra obligations falling due in the shape of $21,000 of Deep River reservoir bonds.

Mayor's Communication

The following is the mayor's communication addressed to President Hagberg:

CITY OF NORWICH,
CONNECTICUT
July 12, 1930.

Major Charles A. Hagberg, President, Board of Water Commissioners, City
Dear Mr. President:

On January 25, 1929, I sent the following communication to the water board. It is doubtless among the records of the department, but I repeat it for your convenience:

"Mr. John A. Mitchell, Acting Pres., Board of Water Commissioners, Norwich, Conn.
Dear Sir and Gentlemen:

You must all be aware of the fact that the balance of the receipts of your department for last year remaining on hand after paying your expenses, fell short by about twenty-five thousand dollars of meeting the interest on your outstanding bonded indebtedness.

I understand this same condition existed the previous year and will recur this year under the present schedule. Evidently you are doing business at a loss.

I trust that your serious consideration is already directed toward finding the means and taking the necessary action to remedy this situation.

If it is necessary to increase the present rates for water in order to place your department upon a self-sustaining basis this course, in my opinion, should be adopted without further delay.

The present policy of having the users of water pay for it in proportion as used by them has long proven satisfactory. Under the circumstances the tax payers should be relieved of the burden thrown upon them by the deficit in your department.

Very truly yours,"

As you were then the council member of the water board you may remember this letter and recall that consideration was given to increasing the water rates at that time.

In June of last year, when you became president of the board, rather than raise the rates, you decided to try to make up the shortage of the water department by savings in operating expenses. That your efforts succeeded in substantially reducing the deficit is commendable history.

This year, however, an entirely new problem faces the board, and although further economies in operating costs are possible, it is futile to attempt to so meet the new obligations. In addition to substantially the same interest charges and bond installment obligations existing last year, there is the $6,000 and the $15,000 installment of Deep River reservoir bonds falling due this year. In 1931 an additional installment of these bonds amounting to $10,000 becomes payable. After next year these increased annual charges against the water department remain constant for many years.

Assuming the revenue of your department for the current year to equal all that is hoped for it upon the basis of last year's splendid showing, a deficit of about $40,000 will nevertheless result, while next year and thereafter the shortage will increase to $50,000 annually.

As Mr. Jensen aptly stated in his letter to the water commissioners dated March 5, 1929:

"Of course we all know that under our charter any deficiency of your department is made up by taxing the citizens. This naturally suggests that the $25,000 might be raised by a smaller increase in rates and a corresponding decrease in the amount to be raised by tax."

If the shortage apparent for this and next year are not met by your department through greater revenue, it means an increase in taxes of nearly a mill and a half.

Consequently raising the water rates to produce sufficient income to meet these increased burdens is imperative in order to place the water department upon a paying basis and to avoid high taxes.

Kindly communicate this information to your board which, I am sure, will perceive the necessity and urgency of this course.

Very truly yours,
LEE R. ROBBINS,
Mayor.

PAY $50 FINE FOR HITTING DANIELSON MAN

After hitting George W. Wilson of Danielson, a hard smash on the jaw, at Hartford, Monday night, Peter Barrillo, 40, who owns a restaurant there, told Policeman James J. Healey that he didn't mind being arrested. His satisfaction was great. In police court at Hartford Tuesday he was charged with assault and battery and when Judge John L. Bonee imposed a fine of $50 and costs, Barrillo didn't seem to mind that.

The trouble was over a girl. Barrillo saw her sitting in Wilson's automobile on Jefferson street. Barrillo claimed she was his girl. He accused Wilson of being married and the father of five children. Then he struck Wilson. The girl was in court Tuesday but was not required to testify when Barrillo admitted the assault upon Wilson. While Barrillo was telling his story to the court, she became faint and was led from the court room.

BOSTON INVITATION TO AMERICAN LEGION CONVENTION

The following letter has been sent out the national convention committee of the Massachusetts department pertaining to the coming American Legion national convention to be held at Boston on October 6-9.

"Boston—Massachusetts—New England, which pride themselves on their ability to entertain royally, welcome you to the 12th annual national convention of the American Legion, to be held in Boston, October 6th to 9th, inclusive, this year. We plan at this convention to present a program of entertainment, which, we hope will surpass in variety and quality any offered in the annals of the Legion. The outstanding events, apart from the regular Legion features, such as parade, band concerts, reunions of state and wartime organizations, etc., include a stupendous aerial demonstration over the city, outboard motor races on the Charles river, a football game, a big golf tournament, offering many valuable prizes, two boxing carnivals as well as wrestling matches, a big naval display of battleships, an illuminated water festival featuring a night air raid on Boston, and a sail down Boston harbor, with a real old-fashioned New England clambake thrown in. Open house will be held at Revere beach (the Coney Island of New England). Then there will be an historical costume ball and pageant, special theatrical performances of wartime movies and plays and a grand and glorious midnight frolic. There will be sight seeing tours of historic Boston with 1,000 trained guides for group tours or personal tours.

"These will furnish the opportunity of a life time for you to climb Bunker Hill Monument, sit in Faneuil hall, the "Cradle of Liberty", overlook the harbor from Dorchester Heights, see where the tea was dumped overboard at the Boston Tea Party, tread the battlefields of Concord and Lexington, gaze upon Plymouth Rock, visit the scene of the Boston massacre, see Paul Revere's house and a host of other historic spots, where American history was made.

"Such is the specified program. But in personal service we hope to show that New England hospitality surpasses your greatest expectations. We hope you will come to Boston for the convention."

OUTSIDE COMPETITION FOR STATE'S VEGETABLE GROWERS

Connecticut vegetable growers are meeting steadily increasing competition from out-of-state produce, according to a bulletin just issued by the state department of agriculture entitled "Connecticut Market Demand for Certain Agricultural Products." The bulletin, by means of text and charts, gives an extraordinary picture that should be of great concern to vegetable growers.

While freight receipts of beans during the local marketing season dropped off from the high point of 20 carloads in 1923 to none in 1928, the receipts of carrots increased during the same period from 22 to 177 carloads. Freight unloadings of practically all vegetable commodities with the exception of beans are increasing both during the local marketing season and during periods when local producers are not in a position to supply market needs.

The specific aims of the bulletin are to show the number and contents of carloads of certain agricultural products shipped into this state, the season in which they are shipped, the area from which they come, the general trend of importations and the status of competing areas. The department hopes that with these facts and with a knowledge of the local situation, the Connecticut producer will be in a better position to participate in a well-rounded program that will meet prevailing conditions.

In 1920, 3,790 carloads of 13 different products were shipped into Connecticut during months when local producers might have supplied the markets. Last year the same products represented imports amounting to 5,053 carloads. This is an increase of 25 per cent. Eggs are the only product which showed a decrease during the ten-year period when shipments decreased from 1,150 carloads to 907 carloads. Connecticut poultrymen are strengthening this position on our local markets.

New York state is Connecticut's leading competitor on cabbage and apples and a close second on carrots, celery and onions. Maine is the leading competitive state on potatoes, Massachusetts on onions, Florida on cucumbers, California on cantaloupes and Virginia on spinach.

Copies of this new bulletin will be mailed by the state department of agriculture upon request to residents of Connecticut.

Music at Church Service.

The choir of St. James' Episcopal church, Poquetanuck, sang in an acceptable manner as an offertory on Sunday morning "Jesus, My Lord, My God, My All," music by Joseph Barnby, words by H. Collins. The opening organ voluntary by Miss Olive E. McKelvey, the organist, was a selection by an anonymous composer, taken from the "Selections of Organ Voluntaries," by the late John Zundel.

STATE HOSPITAL SUPERINTENDENT SEES NEED FOR MORE BUILDINGS

Dr. James J. Donohue was re-elected chairman, Judge Arthur F. Libby, secretary, and Judge Nelson J. Ayling legal adviser of the board of trustees of the Norwich State hospital at the annual meeting of the board which was held at the hospital Tuesday morning. Dr. E. S. Burdsall, superintendent of the hospital, made his annual report which showed the effective work which the hospital is doing and its constantly growing registration of patients, which increases the requirements of the hospital. After the business session dinner was served at the hospital.

Superintendent's Annual Report.

In his annual report submitted to the board, Dr. E. S. Burdsall, superintendent, covered the year up to June 30, 1930, giving registration statistics as follows: Patients admitted in year, 984 of which 552 were men, 432 women; entire number under treatment, 3,022, of which 1,582 were men and 1,440 women; sent out on parole, 434; discharged recovered, 150; discharged improved, 206; discharged unimproved, 60.

In the inebriate department, or state farm, where all the patients but a few have been men, there were 258 admitted, 305 entire number under treatment, 232 discharged, 67 remaining on farm.

The percentage of recoveries showed a gain this year over last and compares very favorably with the figures for all state hospitals, 1926-1927, U. S. bureau of statistics. In the Norwich state hospital for 1929 the percentage was 31.2 and in 1930 32.6. The average for all hospitals is 28.3.

The capacity of the hospital at present is 2,400 but there are 2,453 there now, indicating an overcrowded condition, which in certain buildings is acute, as in the north and south D buildings. During April the hospital received 108 patients, in May 107 and in June 122. At this rate of admission, Superintendent Burdsall pointed out, the hospital will undoubtedly have 2,700 patients before the expiration of 1930, and in order to prevent excessive overcrowding Dr. Burdsall recommended that the trustees ask the next legislature for additional buildings for the care of patients and the housing of attendants.

General Improvements.

Dr. Burdsall spoke of the following in general improvements and construction during the year:

Sewage disposal plant and retaining wall built, cost approximately $60,000; new wing for cattle barn and complete renovation of old wings; also new herd of 100 cows, approximately $45,000; at the power house—side track re-located, coal handling machinery and Babcock and Wilcox boiler installed, approximately $53,000; road building and ground improvements, about $20,000; lightning rods, cables and motors, $3,813; grand stand for baseball park built, about $500; ice boxes under kitchen and adjoining butcher shop completely renovated, about $6,000.

The farm was reported in excellent condition and the acreage of different crops was given as follows: silage corn, 60; potatoes, 40; sweet corn, 10; turnips and cabbage, 8 each; beets, tomatoes, carrots, beans and rye, 4 each; peas and squash, 3 each; mangel beets, cucumbers, parsnips, 2 each; onions, 2 1-2; celery, 1 1-2.

The poultry plant has raised more fowl than ever before. It has supplied 270 ducks, 300 turkeys, 6,800 chickens and provided 13,905 dozens of eggs.

Perfect Mark For Sanitation.

After inspection by a firm of sanitary engineers, the hospital has been given a clean bill along sanitary lines, being free from rats, cockroaches and bedbugs.

The superintendent reported that he was working for a general clean-up in the kitchen, scullery, pasteurizing room, and butcher shop, and that he plans to continue improvements to the grounds and to build additional roads. He is also endeavoring to secure money to replace some of the fire equipment and to make some of the buildings less of a fire hazard by the erection of lightning rods. He also aims to place metal tables and chairs in the ward and basement dining room, both contributing to the appearance of the place and sanitary conditions. General repairs on a number of the buildings will take place in the course of the year and Superintendent Burdsall hopes to be able to do some interior decorating in the hospital auditorium, where the patients gather two or three times a week. Beautifying this room will add much to their pleasure in occupying it.

AHERN AND GRANT HAVE GOOD ROUNDS IN PRACTICE FOR INVITATION TOURNEY

Bobby Grant, the youthful sensation of the Wethersfield club and one of the leading amateur golfers of the state, tried out the fairways and greens at the Norwich Golf club course yesterday in preparation for the annual invitation tournament which opens with the qualifying round on Thursday. Although Grant was not striving to turn in a low score, playing many of his shots over several times to get the feel of the course, he scored a 38 on the first nine holes, three over par. His tee shots were splitting the fairways and his seconds were true to the pin but he found the greens a little tricky.

Grant by virtue of his showing in the state amateurs is being considered as one of the threats of the tournament being exceptionally good at match play and having a world of tournament experience for one so young.

Another who tried out the course yesterday was Dow Ahern of Willimantic another of the rising golfing stars of the state. Dow had a brilliant 73 for his practice round, two above par. Ahern is one of the longest drivers of the young players and hits an exceptionally long iron shot with deadly accuracy. His weakest point is on the greens but yesterday he was running them down in fine style. Ahern was out in 36, one over par, and back in 37, one over.

Johnny Sayles local player shot a 77 in his practice round with Ahern. On the outgoing nine Sayles took only seven putts, chipping in two from off the green. On the incoming nine he had three greens on which he took three putts to boost his total to 77. Sayles is playing a strong game this season and should give some of the boys in the first flight plenty of competition.

Another familar figure on the course was L. G. Ripley of New York. "Rip," as he is familarly known, spent the afternoon in practicing and wound up with a few holes with Dr. Vincent Eldred. Rip is looking hale and hearty, bronzed and genial and was greeted by many of his friends yesterday. Rip says he never expects to win a tournament but he has a whale of a lot of fun trying.

Entries still continue to come in for the tournament and it is expected that nearly 200 will try to qualify for one of the six flights that have been arranged. As the entry list will remain open until late in the afternoon on Thursday many who have not sent in their names will come to the course on Thursday.

Superintendent Skelly has been kept busy during the past week getting the course in shape for the tournament and he has done a mighty nice job of it. The fairways and greens are in nice condition and the exceptionally heavy rough on some of the holes has been cut back. It was hoped that the new first green would be in shape for play but the green did not come along as expected making it necessary to use a temporary green. The eighteenth hole has been lengthened by the addition of a new tee which adds 50 yards to the hole.

SINGER WINDS UP HIS TRAINING FOR BOUT

NEW YORK, July 15.— (AP)— Al Singer, challenger for the lightweight championship, left his Delaware Water Gap, Pa., training camp today for New York where on Thursday he will battle Champion Sammy Mandell at the Yankee stadium. Mandell remained at Orangeburg, N. Y.

Singer boxed two rounds with Lou Paluso, two with Jackie Schweitzer, two with Sammy Benda, and pummeled the light and heavy bags. Then he suddenly decided not to wait until tomorrow before leaving for New York and caught a late afternoon train. He will spend the night at the home of his parents in the Bronx and have a light workout tomorrow afternoon in Stillman's gymnasium.

Champion Sammy had plenty of exercise but no sparring today, skipping rope, pounding the bags, working with the pulleys and shadow boxing. Four or five rounds of light work are scheduled for tomorrow.

Mandell was reported to be down to the lightweight limit of 135 pounds while Singer's weight was announced as 134 1-2.

YANKS CRASH OUT 18 HITS TO WIN 9 TO 5

CHICAGO, July 15.—(AP)—The New York Yankees won the series final from the White Sox today by unleashing their heaviest hitting attack of the current trip at the expense of Pat Caraway and Ed Walsh. The Yanks made 18 hits to win by a 9 to 5 score.

Herb Pennock was touched for a dozen blows but sent his floaters past the Sox bats in times of danger. He fanned six while nine Yankees struck out at the offerings of the two Chicago pitchers.

Blondy Ryan made his debut as a batter for Chicago and hit a home run and a single in four times at bat. He also fielded well. Sam Byrd hit a homer for New York.

REDS GIVE, GIANTS A SOUND DRUBBING

NEW YORK, July 15.— (AP)— The Cincinnati Reds outslugged the Giants today to gain a 14 to 8 victory and even the series at one game each. The Reds made 15 hits for a total of 25 bases while the Giants got 20 bases on their 12 hits.

Ray Kolp, who started for the Reds held New York in check for five innings but allowed Roettger and Hogan to hit home runs, each with two on base in the sixth and seventh. Benton then relieved him. The Giants used four pitchers in rapid succession. Curt Walker and Tony Cuccinello were the batting stars. Walker hit a homer and two doubles while Cuccinello batted in six runs with a homer, a double, a single and a sacrifice.

ATHLETICS WIN FROM BROWNS IN HECTIC GAME

ST. LOUIS, July 15—(AP)— Holding the Browns hitless until one was out in the ninth inning. The Philadelphia Athletics won their fourth straight victory from St. Louis here today, 11 to 6.

The Browns made three runs in the third inning off four straight bases on balls by Walberg, another by Rommel who succeeded him, and a force out which permitted a score. Four hits after one was out in the ninth then gave St. Louis three more counters.

The champions gained more ground in their fight to hold first place in the American league against Washington by the victory. Mickey Cochrane hit a home run.

CHOCOLATE OUTPOINTS QUADRINI IN HARD BOUT

NEW YORK, July 15.—(AP)—Kid Chocolate, Cuban Negro featherweight contender, outpointed Luigi Quadrini of Italy in a hard-fought ten-round bout at the Queensboro stadium tonight. Chocolate weighed 128 1-2; Quadrini 126.

Chocolate found the Italian featherweight a somewhat difficult opponent to fathom. The Italian fought a great defensive battle and Chocolate found few spots for a smashing right hand.

More than 10,000 persons gathered in the arena in the expectation of seeing the Cuban make short work of his rival. Instead they saw Quadrini tie up the Kid repeatedly, with an unexpected round or two by his aggressive tactics and force Chocolate to give his best to win. Only in the ninth was Quadrini in serious danger of a knockout. Chocolate smashed the Italian to the ropes with a right cross to the chin and then leaped in, tossing both hands to the face and body. Quadrini weathered the storm, however, and a moment or two later seemed none the worse for the beating he had taken.

BATTALINO KAYOES FERNANDEZ IN THE FIFTH ROUND

HURLEY STADIUM, East Hartford, Conn., July 15.—(AP)—Bat Battalino, a home town boy who made good right here, successfully defended his featherweight championship before the home folks tonight and knocked out Ignacio Fernandez in five rounds of ludicrous action that stirred a multitude of emotions in the breasts of the scant observers.

The little brown man from the Philippines, never counted out before in a career that has taken in bitter battles with the roughest and toughest punchers in the featherweight and lightweight divisions, put up an exhibition that had even Battalino's rooters laughing in derision while most of the crowd hooted "fake" and playfully demanded that the local pride signal them before the finishing punch. It was Battalino's first title defense since winning the 126-pound crown from Andre Routis in this same arena last September.

As early as the first round it seemed obvious to those down front that Fernandez, one of the stiffest punchers in his division and hitherto impregnable to the stiffest of punching, was not long for the challenging role. He punched with extreme care and was unable to hit Battalino anywhere but the elbows and shoulders. The champion boxed carefully through the opening session and most of the work was slow and at close quarters. The struggle went into its climax with amazing suddenness in the second round when Fernandez, slugged on the elbow with ruinous effect by the opening punch, went to the canvas six times before the closing bell rang. He was down for counts of 5, 6, 3, 3, 1 and 4 and before the gong called a temporary halt.

The Filipino gave an amazing exhibition each time he tumbled to the floor, rolling and struggling around the ring, flexing his body and bridging on his toes and hands but always rising dizzily to carry on. The punches that put him down, after the first sock to his "glass" elbow, were all but indistinguishable from the front row.

The crowd that numbered about 9,000 and paid about $20,000 to see the local pride defend his crown turned on Battalino after the second round and raised great gusts of raucous laughter each time the light hitting champion battered Fernandez into a state of apparent dizziness in the second and third rounds. Fernandez did little or no punching in these sessions and appeared to be rocked by almost every blow Battalino tossed his way.

With the crowd roaring its disapproval, Bat went out to finish his man in the fifth round. He started his going with another punch to the vulnerable wing, finally cornered the moon-faced brown man on the ropes, and dropped him to the floor with a left hook to the head and right to the chin. Ignacio dropped on his face, rolled over on his back, and was counted out without a struggle. The fifth round lasted 2 minutes, 50 seconds.

CLARK ALLOWS PIRATES ONLY A SINGLE HIT

BROOKLYN, July 15.—(AP)—Pitching after only two days of rest, Watson Clark, Brooklyn southpaw, hurled the nearest thing to a perfect game the National league has seen this season to give the Robins a 5 to 0 victory over the Pittsburgh Pirates. Clark gave only one hit and walked but one batsman in the nine innings and neither of the men who reached first got past second.

Glenn Wright led the Robins in hitting with a single, a double and home run in four times up. He scored three times. The Robins bunched four solid hits off Ervin Brame for three runs in the second inning and two more of their eight for another tally in the fourth.

BOOTS GREENE BLANKS SMOKE SHOP ALLOWING THE WEST SIDERS ONE HIT

Another for the Greenes. Bootsy, brother of Johnny Greene, added another hurling jewel to the family treasury at the campus last night, shutting out the Smoke Shop, 6 to 0. As a result, the Citizens moved up to within a half game of the league leading Thermos Bottlers in the City league chase.

Last Friday night Johnny pitched the Citizens to a one hit victory over the Royals and apparently he provided inspiration for his younger and less experienced brother. Boots also barely missed a one-hit game last night, allowing the Smokers but a single bingle. During the entire game but two of the O'Brienmen got past first base and at no time did they threaten. The only West Side hit came from the bat of Chubby Gibbs in the second.

The winners bunched their runs, counting three in the first and as many in the sixth. Two bases on balls, two hits and an error accounted for the first three runs while four safeties and two sacrifice bunts produced the sixth inning scores.

Outside of Greene, Lloyd Jarvis was the star performer, his club playing an important part in the Citizen offense. In three attempts Lloyd poked out a brace of doubles and a single. The real thrill of the entire contest, however, was provided by Buck LaCroix, Smoker left fielder, in the fifth. With men on second and third and only one away Buck made a beautiful running catch of West's smash to the fence and doubled Leo Jarvis off second. The score:

Tonight's Game

The Royals, who last Friday night dropped from the runner-up berth into a deadlock with the Italians for third place in the league chase, tonight do battle with Tony Bernards Ideals. Anxious to get back into the thick of battle once again, the Panek-Oney combine is raring to go and promise to give the servicemen a lacing.

Bernard, the Ideal mentor, however, thinks differently. He insists that his club is through losing ball games and that from tonight on it will be just too bad for the opposition. In all previous encounters the Ideals have performed with a makeshift lineup and as a result have never shown at their best. Tony claims that all hands will be on the deck tonight and that the fans will see the Ideal club work as it should.

Buck Shahan, Montville speed artist, will work for the Ideals and Tommy Simcox will in all probability do the serving for the Royals. Jimmy Murphy will backstop Shahan and Jab Burns will work behind the bat for the Royals.

JAIL HILL DEFEATS EAST SIDE IN SWIMMING MEET

In one of the most thrilling of swimming meets held at Mohegan park the Jail Hill swimming team defeated the swimmers of the East Side, 21 to 20, the diving events throwing the balance to the Hillies. Joey Evans and Billy Hill performed brilliantly in this event and it was through their work that Pheno Tombari's charges were able to nose out. In the sprints Bruno Pedace's men showed to advantage, especially Red Caufield who won the 60-yard dash and swam in the relays.

The meet was in charge of Johnny Greene, the popular playground instructor, assisted by George Mullins the life guard at the park who acted as referee. The summary:

60 yd. dash (Senior)—"Red" Caufield, (East Side); A. Frocko, (East Side); Joe Evans, (Jail Hill). 40 yd. dash (Juniors) —Joe Evans, (Jail Hill); A. Frocko, (East Side); Bill Hill, (Jail Hill). JOHNNY KOP RETURNS TO RING ON FRIDAY NIGHT

Johnny Kop, hard-punching junior welterweight, of Norwich, returns to the ring after a fourth-month layoff due to a broken hand, on Friday evening at Westerly. Kop is scheduled to swap punches with Julio Rossi of Westerly in the sixth round semi-final of the Knights of Columbus show. Kop has fully recovered from his injury to his hand, which he suffered at Taftville early in the spring, and is punching as hard as ever. He has been working out at Hickey's Gym for the past three weeks.

Snooks Lacy, West Side colored boy, makes his debut in a four-round preliminary against a Westerly boy. Lacy is fast and clever and with more ring experience will make any of the boys in the 118-pound class step.

The Senators bunched hits off Hoyt in the fourth and sixth innings to score their three runs. Two Washington double plays were instrumental in preventing the Tigers from scoring.

DUWELLS TAKE ON-SIDED CONTEST FROM ITALIANS

The league-leading Duwell team of the Junior loop continued their onslaught on opposing pitchers last night at the Duwell field by taking the strong Italian Young Men's club into camp by the score of 13 to 1.

Stepanik, Duwell pitcher proved complete master of the situation, holding the Italians to five hits, being aided by faultless support by his teammates who collected a total of 12 hits off Connell, for 13 runs, although he deserved a better fate, errors accounting for some of these runs.

The Italians' lone tally in the last inning prevented a shutout for Stepanik, when Angelone hit safely, stole second, later scoring on Fidryck's two bagger.

Tombari and Burke, newly appointed umpires by the local recreation commission worked faultlessly on the field. The score:

Will was dated January 15, 1930, and all the witnesses, Edward B. Coy, Dr. J. Gordon Anderson, and a nurse, Mary E. Tanner, appeared in court to testify and to be examined by Attorney William S. Flynn, who stated that he appeared in the interests of the widow, Ella J. Drysdale and her son by previous marriage, William Booth.

Each witness was asked the conditions of testator and the circumstances of their witnessing the will. Attorney Flynn stated that he was also interested in the approximate value of the estate when Robert Drysdale, Jr., stated that he did not know exactly as he had previously no access to testator's strong box at bank. In naming the appraisers, Attorney Flynn asked for the appointment of Thomas A. Kennely of Providence, Mr. Drysdale for Lewis Stanton of the Westerly branch of the Industrial Trust Co., and on agreement Judge Burke named Attorney John J. Dunn of Westerly. Bond was made $400,000, without surety, joint and several and Attorney Flynn declared that he had not appeared in any hostile sense. Will was admitted and Robert Drysdale, Jr., and George H. In a statesman it's Vision in a cigarette it's Taste

FORESIGHT—an essential of statesmanship and of good cigarette-making too.

KNOWING WHAT SMOKERS WANT—and giving it to them in fullest measure—that's the sound basis on which Chesterfield's popularity has been built.

GOOD TOBACCOS, accurately blended — cigarettes of uniformly good quality and satisfying taste; no wonder that every day sees more and more smokers changing to this skilful blend of quality tobaccos ... for mildness and for better taste.

We state it as our honest belief that the tobaccos used in Chesterfield cigarettes are of finer quality and hence of better taste than in any other cigarette at the price.

AN ASSORTMENT OF SLIGHT GAINS AND LOSSES IN STOCK MARKET YESTERDAY

NEW YORK, July 15—(AP)—Wall street's baby bull market lost a little weight today.

Perhaps the professionals who have been nursing it along were not impressed by the size of their following and decided to take profits while the profit-taking was good. Perhaps, also, there was a renewal of short selling.

Doubtless both factors were influential in the irregularity of the day's price movements, which resulted in a scrambled assortment of minor gains and losses.

With the exception of last Friday, the market had been advancing for a week. The virility displayed last Saturday and yesterday had caused some concern in conservative quarters as to the advisability of over extending a demonstration of bullishness at this time.

Publication of favorable earnings statements by General Electric and National Biscuit, with American Telephone's report still fresh in mind, served to strengthen the confidence of traders working for higher prices and by noon the list had lost its earlier irregularity, although the advance was not as vigorous as yesterday's. Trading during the afternoon was more nervous in character and profits were accepted rather freely.

Short selling was somewhat stimulated by the weekly estimates of steel operations, published shortly before the close. The average for the industry was set at 57 per cent, which represents a gain from the Fourth of July week but a decrease from a fortnight ago. U. S. Steel's ratio was put at 63 per cent compared with 55 per cent in the holiday period and 69 per cent two weeks ago.

Nevertheless, the bulls refused to be depressed. Selecting American Telephone as the leader, they carried the stock across 220 to the highest price in more than a month for a net gain of 8 3-4 points. Some of the smaller steels and a fair representation of miscellaneous stocks finished the day one to five points higher.

These included Electric Auto Lite, Vanadium, Houston Oil, Hudson Motors, Otis Steel, National Steel, Michigan Steel, DuPont and A. M. Byers. Missouri-Kansas-Texas, was bought in anticipation of the dividend declaration and rallied a couple of points.

With most of the seasoned investment shares, however, operators for the advance had only indifferent success. American Can, U. S. Steel, General Electric and General Motors, were dull and their net changes inconsequential. Allied Chemical and Union Pacific lost 4 points. Other soft spots embraced J. I. Case, Bethlehem Steel, Delaware and Hudson and Worthington Pump, off one to three points. The closing price index for 90 leading stocks revealed a decline of three tenths of a point.

Commodity prices advanced. Wheat rallied more than a cent, reflecting bullish weather forecasts and crop damage in Canada. Corn was up one to two cents and cotton closed 3 to 10 points higher.

Call money was in rather liberal supply and the rate was again cut to 2 per cent after renewing at 2 1-2. The firmer tendencies recently noted in time funds were continued and rates were increased a quarter of a per cent on all maturities as demand quickened.

Foreign exchanges were irregular. The French franc virtually reached the gold point, pointing to the possibility of exports of the metal to Paris.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 15—(AP)—Profit taking, particularly during the closing hour of today's session, gave an irregular appearance to listed bonds on the New York Stock exchange.

Many railroad and utility bonds were sold at slight concessions, and prices moved irregularly lower. Although losses were nominal in most instances, activity was somewhat improved.

In the lethargic course of the domestic section, the five point advance of the American Telephone 4 1-2 on the breadest activity it has experienced in several weeks, stood out. The rise was coincident with the sharp gain in the equity issue on the big board. A good demand developed for some of the foreign government bonds.

The offering of $25,000,000 Austrian 7 per cent bonds maturing in 27 years, the American portion of an international issue of $55,000,000, was slightly over-subscribed when the books were closed by the offering syndicate this afternoon, it was reported.

Among the railroad issues, price movement was irregularly lower. Pennsylvania 4 1-2s, were very active and after selling at a new year's high, sold off 1-8 of a point. Baltimore and Ohio refunding 5s lost nearly two points on a few sales. St. Paul general 3 1-2s gained about the same amount. Erie 4s, and Seaboard 6s, gained one point each.

Rock Island 4s, Atchison 4s, Missouri Pacific 5s, New York Central 4s and Union Pacific 4s, were firm. Big Four 4 1-2s, Delaware and Hudson 4s, Erie 5s, Wabash 4 1-2s, St. Paul 5s, San Francisco 4 1-2s, were under pressure, and closed about 1-2 point lower. Convertible rails moved lower with the exception of Rock Island 4 1-2s, and St. Paul adjustment 5s, which were firm.

Utilities maintained a firm trend most of the day, but some recessions took place before the close. North American Edison 5s, Public Service 4 1-2s, American Telephone debenture 5s, Consolidated Gas 5 1-2s, Columbia Gas and Electric 5s, closed lower. San Antonio Public Service 6s, an inactive issue, and Cincinnati Gas and Electric 4s, were firm. Brooklyn Union Gas 5s, and Detroit Edison 5s closed at the year's peak prices.

Warrant issues attracted considerable attention. Pathe 7s gained more than a point. Trans-Continental 6 1-2s were active and steady. Southern Pacific 4 1-2s dropped 1-2 point. Among industrials Certaineed 5 1-2s, gained 3 1-2 points; Colon Oil 6s nearly two. Fish Rubber 8s dropped 3.

The widest changes and broadest trading occurred in foreign issues, with South American governments especially active.

United States governments were little changed. Most activity was entered in Liberty first 4 1-2s, which gained a small fraction.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 15—(AP)—Treasury receipts for July 12 were $5,580,554.54; expenditures $19,642,306.77; balance $225,490,526.73.

The General American Tank Car corporation, has received from William H. Bremmer, receiver of the Minneapolis and St. Louis railway, an order for 500 box cars.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 15—(AP)—Curb stocks again made substantial progress in today's trading, although a little irregularity cropped out among some of the more popular trading stocks in the afternoon. The market was fairly active during the morning, but turned dull as the session wore on. Total sales aggregated 618,300 shares.

Some of the industrials were buoyant. Driver Harris, an unusually wide mover for its price, sold up 12 points to 85, and closed at 83. Aluminum company gained more than six, and Columbia Pictures recorded a similar advance.

Johnson Motor, Deere Cuneo Press, and others advanced a point or two.

Aviation stocks were in better demand, reflecting reports of better transport business and sales. Output this year, however, is expected to fall somewhat short of last, and earnings continue low. Aviation Corporation of the Americas gained 4, and National Aviation sold up fractionally. Detroit Aircraft also sold up a fraction, as the issue again turned active, reflecting report of six months sales of more than $1,600,000 and unfilled orders July 1 of over $1,100,000.

Utilities turned irregular. Consolidated Gas of Baltimore, gained 3, and Standard Power and Light, 2 points. Electric Bond and Share sold up about 1 1-2 points, then lost its gain. American Light and Traction, American Super Power and Middle West Utilities sagged a fraction. In the gas stocks, American Utilities and General gained a point in active trading, on announcement of acquisition of large acreage in Kentucky.

Several of the investment trusts were in fair demand. Securities corporation general gained 5 points. Shenandoah common, a point, Trans-America 3-4, and Prince and Whitely, 3 8. United Founders closed off 1-4. Oils were inclined to sag, although Cities Service closed up 1-4, and was again active. Gulf lost 2.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 15—(AP)—Corn instead of wheat became the price maker today. The chief reason was apparent likelihood of a new hot wave threatening serious curtailment of the 1930 corn crop. Besides, the stock of corn now on hand here is meagre, and the present difference between quotations on July delivery of corn, and July delivery of wheat, is said to be the smallest since 1895, when corn sold at 5c a bushel over wheat for a brief period. Later in the same year, wheat went to 51c over corn.

Closing quotations on corn were strong at nearly the top level reached, 1ca2 1-4c higher than yesterday's finish. Wheat closed unsettled 1 1-4a1 5-8c advanced, oats 1-2a5-8c up, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 12c.

Provisions reflected improved export demand for lard.

Today they were even more surprised when at the close of business quotations were identical, $139 bid, $142 asked, for each.

Raw silk futures, which have recently tumbled to new low levels on the national raw silk exchange, rallied in active trading today. The turnover of 2070 bales was the largest since June 11. July reached $2.85 a pound, and other positions, $2.86. In the past four days, silk futures have advanced approximately 10 per cent. At the annual election of officers of the exchange today, Jerome Lewin, of Hentz and company was re-elected president.

POETRY

EARLY SUMMER IN VERMONT

Summer's friendly days are here,
Sol is all devotion;
Comes a picture 'fore your eyes
Of a month of motion;
Will you spend it 'mongst the hills
Or beside the ocean?

Life is earnest, life is real
'Round the filling-station;
Smoking brands beside the road
Indicate migration;
There's a strain of wildcat blood
In the tamest Nation.

Bumblebees are drinking hard—
Pouring down the nectar;
Fish are listening through their gills
For the fish inspector;
Bills go outlawed every day
'Cause there's no collector.

Hammock guy ropes feel the strain,
Back piazzas busy,
Every car you see almost
Is or ain't a "lizzie";
Gals become engaged so fast
Makes their heart throbs dizzy.

Take your Christmas present pipe
And your college banner;
Polish up your French a bit,
Preen your Spanish manner;
P'raps you'll mix with Montreal,
P'raps you'll hit Havana.

Sudden friendships will you make,
Sweet as clover honey!
Next day, though, you'll have a fight
'Bout some ferry money,
Or a salad that your "friends"
Vow damnation "funny."

Hurry home and get some rest
'Fore you start a-clerking;
Get that oar-whacked head in shape
So 'twill stop its jerking;
Show the boss your purest joy
And highest jinks is working.
—Daniel L. Cady, in Burlington Daily News.

THE TANGLED WIND

There's a tangled wind in the trees tonight,
And a little lost moon in the sky,
And a driftwood fire on a purple beach,
And sail where a boat goes by.

The world is across an ebony sea,
Far as the shore of Cathay,
The night is glamorous with a dream • •
Must a dream always pass away?

For the fire will die when the dawn-light comes,
And the moon will be old again,
And the fire will turn to a thin gray ash,
What happens to stray dreams then?

And children will bring their pails and dig
Sand castles when it is light.
I wonder if any of them will find
The castles we built last night.
—Helen Welshimer, in the Chicago Tribune.

Johnson, was color bearer to General Wayne and after the war he took home the flag he had borne on the fields of Ft. Recovery, Ft. Defiance and Fallen Timbers. The Hand and the Needle

THE difference in the cost of clothing is determined largely by the value of the hand that guides the needle. A master tailor demands a master's wage and the human hand is costlier than a machine. Those who demand the craftsmanship of the human hand are willing to pay the additional cost.

Whether the needle is guided by a master's hand or a machine there can be no finer fabric selected than Ram's Head guaranteed cloth.

Before they leave, arrange to have them telephone home regularly while away. Tell them to reverse the charges to your home telephone—then they will not need to carry additional funds to pay for the calls. The voice-to-voice contact will mean much to them—and you will be relieved of unnecessary worry.

Rates for out-of-town telephone calls are really very low. A station-to-station call during the day costs only 60c for 100 miles. The cost per mile decreases as the distance increases.

The charges on station-to-station calls may be reversed and there is no extra cost for this convenience when the rate is 25 cents or more.

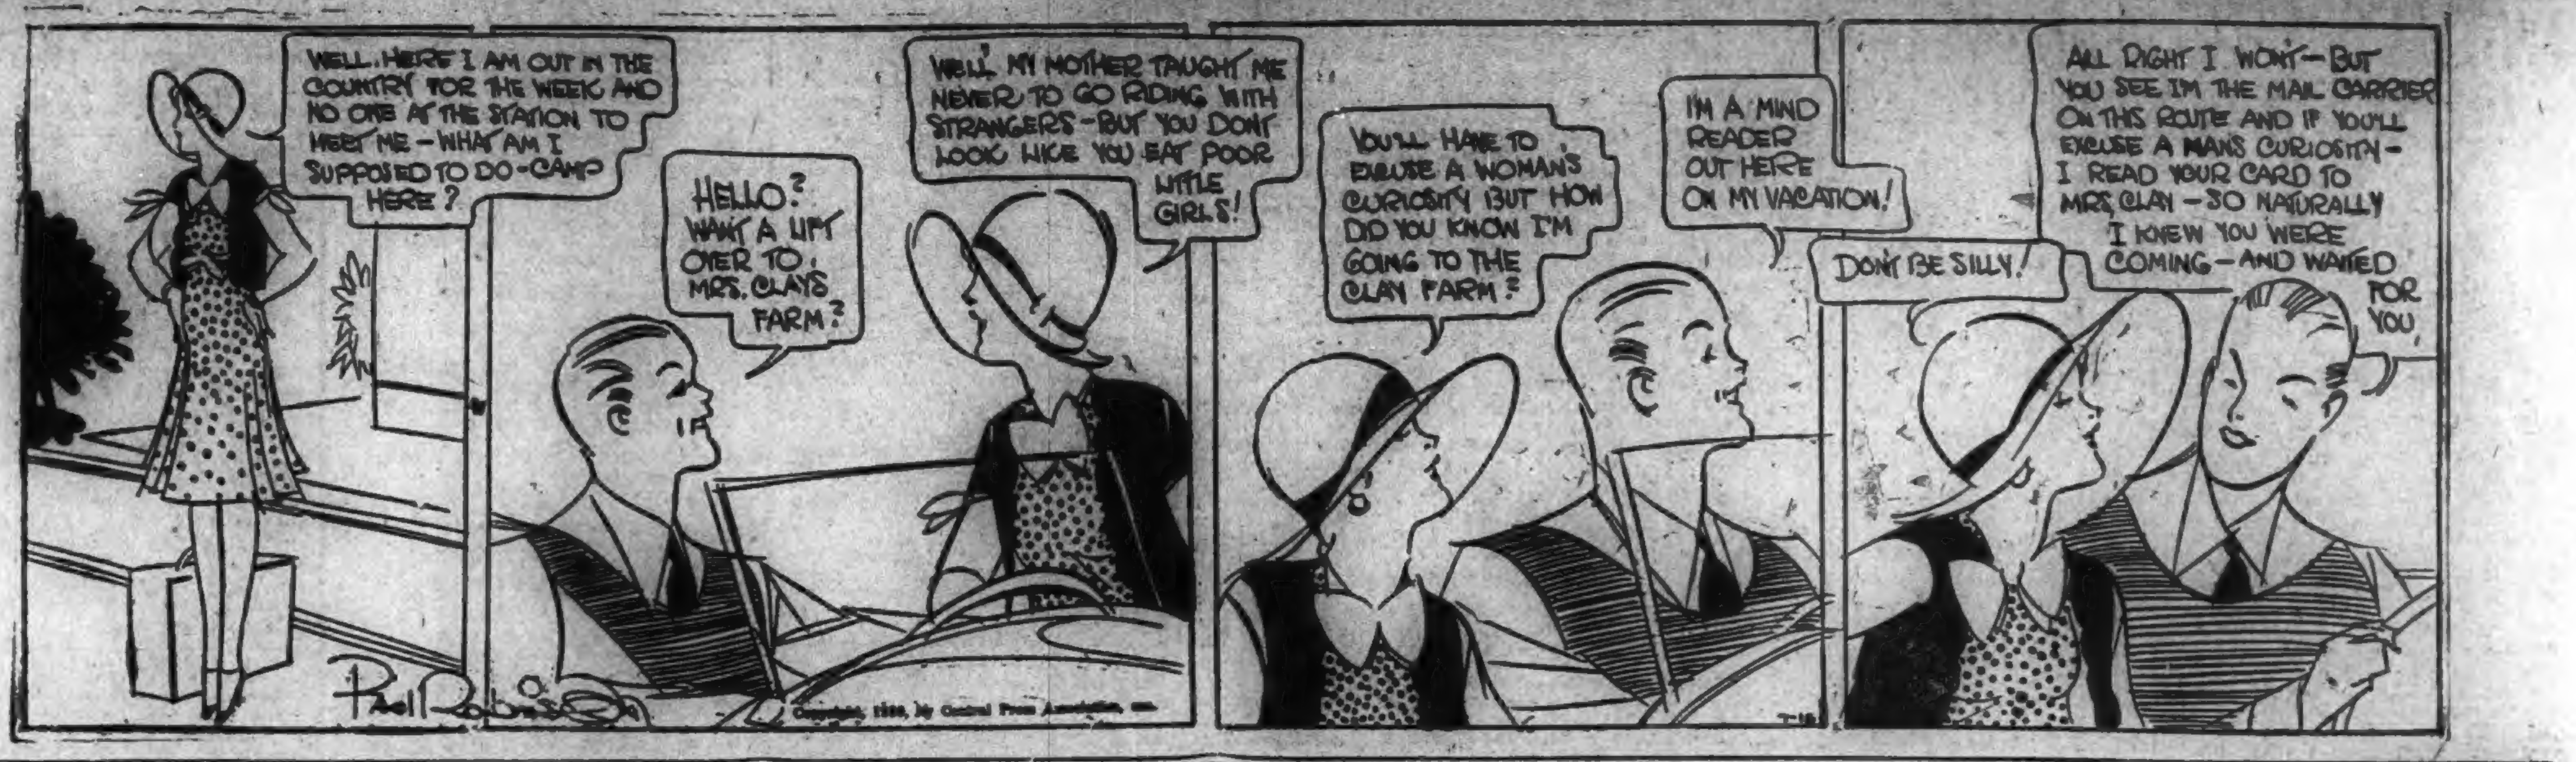
ETTA KETT Not So Dumb! —By PAUL ROBINSON



WELL, HERE I AM OUT IN THE COUNTRY FOR THE WEEK AND NO ONE AT THE STATION TO MEET ME — WHAT AM I SUPPOSED TO DO - CAMP HERE?
HELLO? WANT A LIFT OVER TO MRS. CLAY'S FARM?
WELL! MY MOTHER TAUGHT ME NEVER TO GO RIDING WITH STRANGERS — BUT YOU DON'T LOOK LIKE YOU EAT POOR LITTLE GIRLS!
YOU'LL HAVE TO EXCUSE A WOMAN'S CURIOSITY BUT HOW DO YOU KNOW I'M GOING TO THE CLAY FARM?
I'M A MIND READER OUT HERE ON MY VACATION!
DON'T BE SILLY!
ALL RIGHT I WON'T — BUT YOU SEE I'M THE MAIL CARRIER ON THIS ROUTE AND IF YOU'LL EXCUSE A MAN'S CURIOSITY — I READ YOUR CARD TO MRS. CLAY — SO NATURALLY I KNEW YOU WERE COMING — AND WAITED FOR YOU.

SAWTELLE COASTED IN ORANGE, CONN., ARRESTED IN NEW LONDON TUES. EVE.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 15.— Arthur Sawtelle, 15 Mountain avenue, was arrested tonight by Detective Sergeant Nelson Smith on a warrant issued by the authorities of Orange, Conn., charging him with reckless driving. He will be tried in the Orange town court next Monday, having been allowed his liberty on his own recognizance. Sawtelle was driving through Orange Sunday last. Being in charge of a fish truck, his employer ordered Sawtelle to proceed to New York Monday, so that it was impossible for the accused to appear in court. The driver was also assured that his case would be taken care of by his employer. The latter failed to do this, however, and when Sawtelle did not present himself in court the warrant for his arrest was issued. The specific charge against Sawtelle is coasting on a steep grade. He is the sole support of his father, who is about 90, and his mother, also of advanced years.

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 15—It became known today that Mrs. Emily Speirs, who is persistent in her endeavor to occupy a chair in the city council although defeated every time she has sought election, is to make one more effort to join the group in the council chamber. Petitions are being circulated by Mrs. Cora E. Lewis, Mrs. Mary Collins, Miss A. F. Lovell and Mrs. Annie O'Brien. It is hoped by Mrs. Speirs supporters that she will be elected and she is already assurred the nomination. So far Mrs. Speirs is the only candidate for city office seeking a nomination. Because of election not coming until September it is rather soon to circulate petitions, but Mrs. Speirs has taken an early start.

Must Eliminate Crossings

As a result of a petition of the New Haven railroad to the public utilities commission, Hartford, to eliminate the dangerous crossings of Spicer avenue and Main street, the following plans have been approved. It is ordered and decreed that the railroad company and the state highway commission eliminate the dangerous conditions found to exist at the crossings by the construction of a new highway on the southerly side of the railroad location along the former street railway line commencing at a point approximately opposite the intersection of Sylvan street and Main street and at a point southeast of Main street crossing running in a general northerly direction to a point at or near the present street railway bridge; thence northwesterly by the means of a half through steel girder bridge of reinforced concrete design, resting upon concrete piers and abuttments carrying said highway over the tracks of the railroad company. Said bridge having a length overall of approximately 100 feet, a width overall of almost 42 feet, a clear roadway width of about 28 feet, a medium clearance of about 22 feet, measured from the top of the rails to the lowest point of the underside of the bridge; thence continuing in a general northwesterly direction on a grade to an intersection with Elm street at a point west of the intersection of Elm street and Spicer avenue. Also the construction of a highway on the southeasterly side of the railroad location and approximately parallel, commencing at the southerly approach of the bridge over the tracks just before said approach crosses the track and connecting with Front street at a point southeasterly of Spicer avenue crossing. The said new highway ascending on a grade from Front street to the southeasterly approach of the bridge. Also by constructing two sidewalks on the bridge, one sidewalk on the east side of the southerly and northerly approach to bridge and one sidewalk on the southerly side of the highway connecting the southerly approach with Front street. This will leave sufficient space on the opposite side of each said highway for the addition of sidewalks in the future. The railroad company and highway commission agrees that the apportionment of the cost of elimination upon the approved plans should be to the state of Connecticut and the railroad company, one-half each of the total cost of elimination less the $10,000 apportioned to the town and commissioners apportions total cost of such elimination in this case including land damage to the party, 50 per cent railroad and 50 per cent state of Connecticut. Following are the interested parties: State highway commissioner, state of Connecticut, Groton and Stonington Traction Co., estate of George P. Wilbur, Emma Wilbur agent; Mrs. Elizabeth F. Anderson, George M. Fish, William I. Spicer, James R. May, estate of Ella O'Neil, Julian P. ANNONCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Imbued with the real spirit of the old west, "The Arizona Kid," Alfred Santell's great outdoor romance in Movietone, opens at the Warner Broadway today with the incomparable Warner Baxter in the title role.

To the man who hailed Baxter's gallant outlawry in "In Old Arizona," this new picture will come as a joyous piece of screen reincarnation. For Baxter again plays the part of a reckless and amorous bandit, whose love affairs with a dance-hall girl and a gambler's wife, together with his impudent use of an alias to defeat the officers seeking him, serve to motivate the swift moving and gorgeously photographed story.

The picture's beginning "plants" the widespread search that is being made for the elusive "Arizona Kid." In Rockville, a little Utah village, the Kid is living under the name of Chico, a somewhat mysterious but highly respected citiezn. His shooting of a highwayman who holds up the Rockville stage further buoys his reputation, and his affair with Lorita, the queen of the dance-hall entertainers, is one of the town's favorite conversational topics.

Palace Theatre.

Patrons of the Palace theatre will be given a treat today, tomorrow and Friday, for Manager Hamilton has arranged one of the finest double feature programs ever to be shown in this or any other Warner Brothers playhouse. It includes that startling society drama, "Good Intentions," featuring Edmund Lowe and Marguerite Churchill and "Children of Pleasure," a Tin Pan Alley romance starring Lawrence Gray, Helen Johnson and Benny Rubin.

"Good Intentions" is the vivid, dramatic story of a man who drew himself up by his own sheer strength, almost by his own bootstraps up from the gutters of the slums. Wealth and power and social position he won for himself, but when romance came into his life he found that his vast fortune, his sinister power and all the rest were not sufficient to prevent the past from reaching out relentless fingers toward him.

There is mystery aplenty in this daring film. It begins when David Cresson, himself a mystery, is warned by "Flash" Norton to expect a little delegation of underworld characters at his home that evening. This warning comes hot on the heels of the announcement of Cresson's engagement to Helen Rankin, a society girl whom he loves better than all the world.

"Children of Pleasure" gives a lighter touch to this admirable program. It has a superb cast, recruited mainly from the stage, and the plot is one that combines swift action, comedy and melody. Harry Beaumont, creator of the "Broadway Melody," directed this film, which tells the story of a song writer who married an heiress. It gives the public the inside on how songs are composed. We see the song plugger at work, and we get vivid, intimate little glimpses of Broadway night life, theatrical life and society in New York.

FEDERAL OFFICERS MAKE ARREST AND SEIZURE IN TAFTVILLE LIQUOR RAID

A squad of federal men raided the alleged speakeasy at No. 163 Norwich avenue, Taftville, better known as the "Blood House," about 5 o'clock Tuesday afternoon and arrested Louis Allard of Taftville on a charge of violation of the liquor laws. Twenty-five cases of the home-brew variety of beer and a small quantity of alleged illicit liquor was seized.

When the federal men entered the building, which is situated on the main highway from Norwich to Jewett City, the man behind the bar attempted to dispose of the liquor by dumping it into the sink, but the feds were too quick for him and recovered a quantity of it, which will be used as evidence against him when he appears before United States Commissioner Earl Mathewson in this city.

WILL HOLD DEATH INQUEST IN DEATH OF KASPAROWITZ

Next Monday has been set by Coroner Edward G. McKay as the time when he will hold an inquest on the death of John J. Kasparowitz, 22, a sailor attached to the submarine base, who was killed on the night of July 3 in an automobile accident at Gales Ferry.

The sailor, whose nearest relative was his mother in Lowell, Mass., was instantly killed when he was returning to the base after attending the marriage here of Edward Leo Drager, also a sailor, and Miss Mary T. Gibson of this city. Kasparowitz, who was driving the car, had with him at the time of the accident, Thomas Baker, also attached to the submarine base, who was badly injured and is now in the sick bay at the base.

The car left the road at a point alongside the Carl W. Brown property, where the highway is perfectly straight, struck a telegraph pole, and knocked three good-sized boulders from the side of the highway into the field.

Mrs. Niederman constitutes her son, Edward, as executor and trustee, leaving the entire estate to him in trust, to hold the same, invest and re-invest and collect the income therefrom arising as it shall from time to time accrue, and to pay the net income thereof as collected, to her husband, Ignatz Niederman, for and during the term of his natural life. At his decease the trust fund shall terminate and the principal sum shall be paid in equal shares to the children then surviving, free of all trusts.

In case Mr. Niederman in the enjoyment of income from the estate shall, by reason of prolonged illness, or actual need, be in a position to require a larger income than what is derived from the estate, together with such income as such beneficiary may have from other sources, then the trustee is ordered to advance so much from the principal of the estate as may be necessary in order that he might receive proper medical attendance, nursing care and support as long as such illness or need continues.

Mr. and Mrs. Bromley were married in 1891, and have lived at Westerly, R. I., but for the past 15 years in Jewett City. Two years ago, according to the complaint in the suit, Grace W. MADE PARTIAL INQUEST IN THOS. MORTON DEATH

An inquest into the facts surrounding the recent death of Thomas F. Morton, Waterford hotel clerk and former New London newspaper man, from injuries received when he was struck by an automobile while crossing the Boston Post road, near his home, was begun Monday afternoon at the Waterford town court rooms at Jordan by Coroner Edward G. McKay of this city.

Morton was injured July 2 and died several days later at the Lawrence Memorial hospital in New London. The driver of the automobile was Anthony R. Augusta of Falmouth, Mass., and he was one of the witnesses examined Monday by the coroner.

State Trooper Frederick Johnson of the Groton barracks, who arrested Augusta was the first witness and others were: Arthur T Ruell and his mother, Vera A. Ruell, both of Pine street, Waterford; James F. Loomis, also of Waterford, and William Echo, Lloyd Nickerson and Ellen M. Farrell, all of Falmouth, who were passengers in Augusta's car at the time of the accident.

Augusta was the last witness and after taking his testimony, Coroner McKay adjourned the hearing without date and until such time as he is able to summon other witnesses who are being sought for questioning in connection with the fatality.

CONTINUANCE FOR WEEK IN FINDLAY CASE

The case of Isobel Dickinson Findlay of Norwich and Lord's Point and of John James of Niantic, arraigned Tuesday morning on a statutory charge, was continued for one week by Judge William A. Wilcox in Stonington town court.

Both James and Mrs. Findlay who is the wife of George Findlay, formerly a washing machine salesman in New London, are at liberty under bonds of $500 each. They were arrested Saturday after Mrs. Findlay had testified in a probate court hearing at Poquonoc Bridge before Judge Arthur P. Anderson that she gave birth to a child out of wedlock three months ago in a hospital in New London. She also testified at that time that James' relations with her in her cottage at Lords' Point were only those of a lodger and that the child's father was neither her husband, George Findlay of Norwich, nor James. James was formerly the proprietor of a select riding academy at the Stoneridge Country club, Stonington.

ST. SWITHIN'S DAY PROMISES DRY PERIOD

If there is any efficacy in the St. Swithin's legend, the next 40 days should be a period of dry weather Tuesday was St. Swithin's day, which regulates the weather for the following 40 days, according to the old belief.

Dr. James H. Kimball of the United State weather bureau has no concern over the legend, however, and in no wise permits it to interfere with his weather predictions. The New England Almanac and Farmers' Friend, calculated for the meridian of Norwich, appears to be in accord with the legend, however, and predicts fair weather for the next two weeks and a drought continuing until Aug. 15.

The legend arose from the fact that when St. Swithin's body was exhumed to be reburied in the church at Winchester, England, rain postponed the ceremony 40 days. The prolonged rain weather had a supernatural effect on the people of that day and was accepted as an act of God. The legend has been carried down through an old verse which carries the prophecy, as follows:

St. Swithin's day, if thou dost rain,
For forty days it will remain;
St. Swithin's day, if thou be fair
For forty days 'twill rain nae mair.

J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the republican state central committee, will be unable to attend the outing at Gales Ferry, but Miss Katherine Byrne of Putnam and Clarence Willard of New Haven, vice chairman and secretary, respectively, of the committee, will be present to address the gathering. The premises are subject to a mortgage of $2,800 to the East Hampton Bank and Trust company. They are the first pieces of land purchased by the Connecticut Farm Association, Inc. CONAN DOYLE MESSAGE RECEIVED AT BALTIC

In a letter sent to a Hartford paper, dated at Baltic and signed with the initials J. J. H., the claim is made that spirit communication with the late Conan Doyle has been had at Baltic. The letter follows:

I have read with interest your editorial regarding communication by the late Sir Arthur Conan Doyle from the next world, and am prepared to say that Sir Arthur has communicated with us in no unmistakable manner.

His words, or thought projections, were clear, and they were emphatic. He even made an attempt to estimate the distance from here to there, and sent a friendly message to his family, and after commenting on various subjects, scientific and otherwise, held out the hope that he would be enabled to throw a great deal of light on this question.

Certainly one can think of no one better fitted to do this than he. He was humanitarian, scientific, and had rugged honesty and common sense, and his ideas of how anything, or any life, which ends its usefulness here, means that it will go elsewhere, to help build or inhabit its new world were both startling and profoundly interesting.

GIFT TO COL. MOGENSEN BY OFFICERS OF THE 192ND

Col. M. J. Mogensen, commander of the 192nd Field Artillery, C. N. G., now encamped at Niantic, was given a surprise testimonial dinner by the officers of the regiment at Ferry tavern, Saybrook, Monday night. The commander of the regiment was presented a set of white gold colonel's eagles as the climax to a series of talks in which the esteem in which he is held by the officers of his regiment was extolled.

The dinner was arranged as a complete surprise for the colonel and until he entered the tavern where the 60 officers of the regiment had assembled he thought he was simply going out to lunch with a few intimates.

Capt. Robert C. Rice, adjutant of the regiment, presided as toastmaster. The principal testimonials were given by Lieut. Col. Nathan Horowitz and Maj. H. Spencer Strubie, army instructors with the 192nd; Maj. F. N. Neuendorf, regimental surgeon; Capt. Hamilton H. Kellogg, chaplain; Maj. George J. Schoen, commander of the Second battalion; Maj. Otto H. Schroeter, commander of the First battalion; Maj. Charles H. Metcalf, commander of the Third battalion; Capt. W. Joseph Littiefield, plans and training officer, and Capt. Kieran Harford, commander of Battery E.

The presentation speech was made by Lieut. Col. C. Hadlai Hull, executive officer of the regiment. Colonel Hull spoke feelingly of the service of Colonel Mogensen and paid high tribute to the commanding officer in presenting the eagles.

Colonel Mogensen was deeply affected by the warm words of fellowship from his subordinates and with his voice choked by emotion briefly thanked the men for their kindness.

Impromptu remarks were also made by several other officers.

SUMMER BOARDER MAKES SUICIDE ATTEMPT ON FARM IN MONTVILLE

Despondent over ill health Mrs. Martha Linkowich, 41, of Maspeth, L. I., attempted to commit suicide about 9:30 o'clock Tuesday morning at a summer boarding house in the town of Montville, located about seven miles off the Norwich and New London highway, by slashing her neck and wrists with a razor. She was found lying on the floor of her bedroom about two hours after the suicidal attempt by relatives and members of her family amidst a pool of blood. She was in a semi-conscious condition.

As soon as the discovery was made Dr. John W. Suplicki of this city was summoned and he immediately rushed to the boarding house, where the woman with her husband and four children were staying on a vacation. After stopping the flow of blood in her wounds Dr. Suplicki had her brought here to the W. W. Backus hospital for further treatment. At the institution he sewed up the injuries, using eight stitches in the neck and 12 stitches in the wrists.

Earlier in the day Mrs. Linkowich received treatment from a Montville physician and it was only a short time after he departed that she committed the act.

At the hospital late Tuesday evening the condition of Mrs. Linkowich was reported to be fairly good. She is expected to recover.

CLOTURE MAY BE INVOKED ON LONDON NAVAL TREATY

Proponents of the Pact Have Been Aroused By Indications of a Filibuster—Leaders Predict That More Than 70 Senators Will Be Present For the Final Roll Call—No More Than 12 Votes In Opposition Are Foreseen, Thus Assuring the Necessary Two-Thirds For Ratification—Efforts Are Being Made For a Vote Next Tuesday.

WASHINGTON, July 16.—(AP)—Leaving the opposition to bear the whole burden of debate, negotiations were begun by administration forces in the senate today looking to an agreement for a vote by next Tuesday on the London naval treaty.

Senator Johnson, republican, California, leader of the treaty opponents, withheld any promise for an agreement pending the return to the capitol of his chief lieutenant, Senator Moses, republican, New Hampshire, called away by death in his family.

The dominant treaty forces grew restless, however, as speeches of the opponents stretched into hours. Senator McKellar, democrat, Tennessee, spoke three hours. Senator Pittman, democrat, Nevada, followed with a spirited attack upon President Hoover for his refusal to give the senate all the papers relating to the London meeting. Senators Copeland, of New York, and George of Georgia, democrats, closed the last two hours of debate.

There was little hope held out for final disposition of the pact by Saturday night.

Aroused by what they considered indications of a filibuster, some treaty advocates were moving tonight to invoke cloture to shut off debate. Senator Watson, Indiana, republican leader, said a cloture petition had been drafted, but had not been circulated for the necessary 16 signatures and would not be unless a definite filibuster against the treaty developed.

Senator McKellar formally introduced his reservations late in the day, one providing for freedom of the seas and the other calling for the elimination of British naval bases in the vicinity of the American continent.

In a bitter attack upon the treaty, the Tennesseean termed the pact a "sham" and he protested that no printed record existed of the London negotiations. Senator Johnson said the state department was engaged in printing a volume embodying its own views on the agreement, Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, said the secretary of the London conference kept a record of the proceedings.

An attendance today of 64 members led leaders to predict more than 70 would be present for the final roll call.

They foresaw no more than 12 votes in opposition, thus assuring the necessary two-thirds for ratification.

George said the president had established an "evil precedent," out of harmony with the Constitution, in declining the senate's request for all the papers relating to the London meeting. Submission of the documents, he added, would have cleared up for all time "any suspicion that there was an ulterior thought of an alliance between the United States and Great Britain."

"The president lost an opportunity to advance the cause of peace," he said.

TRACING $246,000 SHORTAGE IN PROVIDENCE BANK

PROVIDENCE, R. I. July 16.—(AP)—Federal bank examiners tonight continued their efforts to trace the false entries which for five years have concealed from them defalcations totalling $246,000 from the funds of the National Bank of Commerce.

Peter L. Simonini, general bookkeeper at the bank, was arraigned today before U. S. Commissioner Fred A. Otis on a charge of making the false entries. He pleaded not guilty and was released in $10,000 surety. U. S. Attorney Henry M. Boss, Jr. said the May term of the federal grand jury will be reconvened in September to consider the case.

According to Simonini, he did not receive a cent of the missing money. He is said by authorities to have confessed that in 1925 he allowed a friend, who is now dead, to make an overdraft of $6,000 on condition the friend return the money within two days. The money was not returned. Instead, Simonini said, the friend forced him again and again to permit other overdrafts. Simonini assigned the amounts to other accounts, he declared, concealing the defalcations so effectually that 10 federal audits and an independent one by a well known firm of accountants failed to reveal anything amiss.

Recently, however, federal examiners discovered the shortage and action against Simonini followed.

A statement issued today by the bank said in part:

"A preliminary examination indicates that the maximum amount involved is $246,000, of which $150,000 is covered by insurance, leaving a possible loss of $96,000.

"Our surplus and undivided profits account now stands at $1,264,000."

"K OF NEW HAVEN" WRECKED; CREW LANDED SAFELY

MONROE, Ga., July 16.—(AP)—The proposed non-stop refueling flight of the monoplane K of New Haven from New York to Buenos Aires, ended near here today when the ship crashed and crew of three leaped to safety in parachutes.

The fliers, Garland Peed, Jimmy Garringan and Randy Enslow, were lost for eight hours. With her gasoline tanks empty, the K went out of control. Peed ordered his men to leap, and followed them.

They landed without a scratch, a mile from Bostwick, which is 15 miles from here. The ship plowed into the ground about one-half mile away and was demolished. The men rested at a hotel here tonight, "lucky to be alive," and determined to try again. They expect to leave for New York within two days.

Low visibility and a sticky fog down the seaboard forced the fliers over Georgia's inland and the fuel which they hoped would take them to Havana was wasted as they flew blindly.

MACDONALD GOV'T SUSTAINED BY THE HOUSE OF COMMONS

LONDON, July 16.—(AP)—The MacDonald government scored a victory tonight in the house of commons when a conservative vote of censure moved by former Premier Stanley Baldwin was defeated 312 to 241. The vote was posed on the labor government's alleged failure to provide safeguarding duties.

The former conservative premier sprung a sensation this afternoon when in the midst of a debate on the Egyptian situation he challenged the government on the unemployment issue and Philip Snowden, laborite chancellor of the exchequer, reported that the government would be no party to imposition of food taxes or taxes on raw materials or protective duties. Tonight's vote was the upshot.

RAINBOW DIVISION VETS HAVE SAILED FOR FRANCE

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—One hundred Rainbow Division veterans, many with their wives and families, sailed for France today on the President Roosevelt to hold their annual reunion at Chalons-sur-Marne, near the battlefields where they were engaged during the World war.

In France the veterans will be the guests of Gen. Henri Gouraud, now military governor of Paris, who commanded the division on the battle-field.

BRITISH LABORITE COAL BILL CRISIS AVERTED

LONDON, July 16—(AP)—The political crisis caused by the tussle of the lords and commons over the laborite coal bill was temporarily averted today.

A. J. Cook, secretary of the miners' executive committee, announced that after a meeting of the committee, the miners' officials had met William Graham, president of the board of trade, and had "reluctantly accepted the government's proposals to keep the bill alive."

This proposal, it was revealed, was that no "spread over" scheme should become operative without the consent of the Miners' association and the Miners' federation.

The "spread over" scheme was introduced as an amendment by the house of lords. It provides for a permissive 90-hour fortnight instead of a compulsory 7 1-2 hour working day in the mining industry. The laborites contend this would entail the loss of one day's pay every fortnight for the miners.

IMPROVEMENT NOTED IN UNEMPLOYMENT CONDITIONS

WASHINGTON, July 16—(AP)—Although there was an increase in demand for certain classes of labor in the United States during June, there was, nationally a surplus of workers above jobs in practically all trades.

The United States employment service in its monthly bulletin on industrial conditions today attributed such additional demand for labor as became evident in June to municipal and state improvement programs, and to the seasonal increase in farm operations. Factory organizations in general showed part-time and part-force programs, with some curtailment because of inventory and vacation periods.

One of the unusual additions to demand for labor, the summary noted, arose during June from a new trend toward extension of pipe-lines for gas and oil. Public Utility enterprises, in addition were maintaining good forces on construction and improvement.

NAVAL MEN INJURED IN CRASH OF BOMBER PLANE

PHILADELPHIA, July 16—(AP)—Lieutenant Commander O. W. Erickson, chief inspector at the naval aircraft factory in the Philadelphia navy yard, was seriously injured today in the crash of a navy bomber on the flying field at the yard.

W. B. Smith, naval hospital apprentice, and E. L. Talley, civilian inspector, were also injured.

Commander Erickson may have a fracture of the skull. He also suffered a fractured nose, a gash on the cheek that required sixteen stitches and cuts on the right leg.

Officers at the naval hospital declined to indicate how seriously the three men were injured until a complete examination was made.

The bomber had been testing parachutes with 200 pound dummies. The parachutes were released from the bottom of the plane. One of them opened prematurely, causing the plane to lose its equilibrium and it crashed to the ground about 25 feet from the edge of the river. The men were said to have been unconscious when picked up.

DECLINE OF FACTORY EMPLOYMENT IN PENN.

PHILADELPHIA, July 16.—(AP)—Factory employment in Pennsylvania declined 2.2 per cent and wage payments 6 per cent between May and June, the Philadelphia Federal Reserve bank reported in a statement today. Delaware factories showed a decline of 2 per cent in unemployment, the report stated, and nearly 3 per cent in wage payments.

WOUNDED MAN MYSTERY BAFFLES NEW HAVEN POLICE

NEW HAVEN, July 16—(AP)—Police of this city had a mystery on their hands tonight as baffling as any which might be devised by the most ingenious writer of thrillers. For its solution they sought a corpus delicti or a person believed to be seriously injured.

An automobile bearing Tony Isto, 22, and Thomas Blake, 23, both of this city, was stopped tonight on suspicion by Motorcycle Officer Overill Lane. Examining the car, the patrolman found a man who appeared to be badly hurt on the floor. Isto and Blake told the patrolman that they had picked up the injured man on the highway and were taking him to a physician.

Officer Lane directed the men to follow him to police headquarters. When they arrived there, the patrolman found a blood-stained shirt in the car instead of the injured person. Isto and Blake were unable to account for the wounded person's disappearance from the car and were held without bonds on technical charges of idleness.

RUTH HANNA M'CORMICK DEMANDS CALL OR OPPONENT

CHICAGO, July 16—(AP)—Ruth Hanna McCormick today demanded that James Hamilton Lewis, Illinois democratic senatorial nominee, be called before the senate campaign fund committee to explain an article in which he was quoted as saying $1,000,000 was used in her campaign for the republican nomination.

Senator Gerald P. Nye, chairman of the committee, said he would consider summoning the democratic nominee, and would make known his stand tomorrow.

Mrs. McCormick reappeared before the committee with a newspaper clipping in which Lewis was quoted as saying her campaign cost a million dollars. She challenged the statement and said it was a duty of the committee either to have Lewis appear and substantiate the statement, if he made it, or else clear her of the charge.

The three Stanton children, Elizabeth, 13, Fanny, 12, and Alice, 4, will be buried tomorrow.

The six members of the family were stricken Monday night by what physicians diagnosed as ptomaine poisoning.

Only 26 Stage Plays On In The Whole U.S.

Dullest Week In Theatricals Since the World War Summer of 1917.

NEW YORK, July 16—(AP)—Only 26 plays and musical comedies were on view in the whole United States tonight.

Chicago, for the first time in 95 years has but one play this week and New York has only 16, establishing this as the dullest July Broadway has seen since the World war summer of 1917.

Distributed about the rest of the country are ten more shows, according to producers' records—four musical tabloids, five stock productions, and one—minstrel show.

The annual survey made by Actors' Equity association on July 19, considered the dullest day in the whole year in New York, will reveal the lowest number of productions ever listed by Equity, whose records run back to 1922.

At this time a year ago Broadway had 26 productions, but six of them had been closed by July 19 when the Equity survey was made. On July 29 in 1925 and 1926, there were thirty shows playing in New York.

PASSENGERS SHAKEN UP IN TRAIN DERAILMENT

BALTIMORE, July 16.—(AP)—Several score passengers on the Pennsylvania Limited, crack east-west flier, were badly shaken up this afternoon, when the locomotive was derailed, plunged from the tracks and dragged the baggage car and two passenger coaches with it. One was seriously injured.

Railroad and city police immediately started an investigation to determine whether a boyish prank or malice resulted in the placing of a track spike on the rails, believed to have been responsible for the derailment. The inquiry was started after the spike was found beside the track, along with a .32-calibre pistol. Both the spike and the rail showed marks believed to have been caused when the front wheels of the locomotive hit the obstruction.

German Cabinet Overrides Reichstag

Invokes Article of Constitution to Make Deitrich Financial Program [illegible]aw.

BERLIN, July 16.—[illegible] the desperate measure of [illegible]ing parliamentary opposition [illegible]binet tonight with President [illegible]urg's authorization under a[illegible] of the constitution declared [illegible] contested financial program[illegible].

The acti[illegible]ed a situation making the [illegible] the present reichstag seem p[illegible]tical. That body will be inform[illegible]ially of the cabinet's decision in [illegible]e Gazette. The reichstag then will have the opportunity tomorrow, if unwilling to passively consent to the measure, of voting down the government's application of article 48.

As the government, on first indication of a majority against it in the reichstag will doubtlessly dissolve the reichstag it was declared by observers tonight that further opposition to Finance Minister Deitrich's plans would be highly improbable.

It was declared in circles close to Chancellor Breuning that a vote against tonight's action would be forestalled if necessary but that in view of important bills still pending, among them relief programs for farmers and the eastern provinces, every effort would be made to prolong the reichstag session.

Decision to take the step was made early this evening and soon was followed up by a cabinet meeting at which Finance Minister Deitrich, backed by Chancellor Breuning, had the resolution moved and paved the way for a formal procalamation of his revised financial program by President Hindenburg.

Action of the cabinet would be followed, in natural sequence, by a meeting of the reichstag, early tomorrow, if not tonight, at which the presidential proclamation would be made effective.

BRIBERY GUILT ADMITTED BY EX-CUSTOMS OFFICIALS

Two Former Examiners Accepted $7,000 Cash For Passing About $1,000,000 Worth of Swiss Watches As Earthenware—Sentence Was Deferred to Let the Convicted Men "Think Over" the Advisability of Revealing the Identity of Their Confederates.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—Two former customs examiners who admitted accepting bribes of $7,000 each for passing about $1,000,000 worth of Swiss watches as earthenware, had their sentences adjourned for ten days today to let them "think over" the advisability of revealing the identity of their confederates.

When the prisoners, Samuel Stansfield and William Gilroy, were brought up for sentencing on their plea of guilty the federal prosecutor said that millions of dollars of merchandise had been smuggled into the country right through the customs warehouses by means of conspiring importers and government agents.

While admitting that they had taken bribes from six jewelers who have since all been sentenced to Atlanta penitentiary, Stansfield and Gilroy denied that they knew which inspectors on the docks had marked the watches as earthenware and sent them in to the central clearing house to be passed without duty by the two examiners.

"I don't believe your story," Judge Henry Goddard told them. "Both of you men have got to unburden yourselves about this entire business of corruption in the illegal importation of merchandise into this country. I shall give you two weeks to think it over before passing sentence."

LINDBERGH AND TUNNEY BENEFICIARIES IN WILL

NEW YORK, July 16—(AP)—Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh and Gene Tunney were named as contingent beneficiaries in a will filed today. But they will not receive any legacies because the testator's nine-year-old son in Memphis, Tenn., survived his father.

The will of Wylie N. Jameson, dated in 1928, left all but $20,000 of the entire estate, valued at "more than $40,000," to Wylie Blount Miller Jameson, 9, with the proviso that if the boy died before his father the money should be divided between the aviator and the former heavyweight champion "to use between them as they shall see most fit." Jameson died on March 14, his son surviving him.

A codicil to the will establishes a trust fund of $20,000 for the benefit of Jameson's widow, the boy's step-mother, so it does not appear from the will whether the estate Lindbergh and Tunney might have got is large or small. There was no explanation of the reason for naming the flier and fighter.

MAY HELP CONVICT FORMER SWEETHEART

MINEOLA, N. Y., July 16.—(AP)—Once a "glorified" show girl, Natalie Chadwick was brought down from Auburn prison today to aid Nassau county officials in their attempt to convict John Sheldon, her former sweetheart, on a burglary charge for which she herself is now serving a two-and-a-half year sentence.

Miss Chadwick recently was convicted of selling $10,000 worth of furniture from the home of Polly Lux, former actress, at Atlantic beach, Long Island. She took the entire blame for the burglary, but now she alleges Sheldon engineered the deal.

She had a change of heart against Sheldon, she said, after she was in prison when she learned he pawned some silverware which belonged to her.

IOWA REPUBLICANS PLEDGED TO HOOVER

DES MOINES, Ia., July 16—(AP)—Support was pledged to President Hoover and the federal board by the platform of Iowa republicans adopted in state convention today.

The platform commended congress for "giving agriculture the best tariff rates that it has ever had," but declared that the "present level of farm prices is inequitable and unfair." Support was pledged to President Hoover and the federal farm board.

"Let there be no misunderstanding, however, as to the position of the republicans of Iowa," the document read. "The fight being waged to secure equality as between agriculture and other industries will be continued until the operation of this nation will insure a fair, just and reasonable return."

Adoption of a replacement state income tax law was urged.

VETERAN CHICAGO POLICE REPORTER DISCHARGED

CHICAGO, July 16—(AP)—The undertow of Jake Lingle's assassination dragged Jimmy Murphy under today.

A veteran police reporter, after 28 years of service with the old Chicago Journal and recently with the Chicago Daily Times, Murphy was discharged because, he admitted, he held a partnership in a neighborhood speakeasy for six months three years ago.

Murphy, one of the few remaining "old time" newspapermen, regarded as "dean" of the guild in Chicago, was made famous throughout the country recently by being taken as the prototype for one of the amusing characters of "The Front Page," a newspaper play.

The Daily Times, chronicling his dismissal, printed a statement by the publisher, which concluded with "the Daily Times has nothing but good wishes for Jimmy Murphy."

MANAGUA, Nicaragua, July 16—(AP)—A United States marine Corsair plane crashed today while making an aerological flight near Tecuantepe, 10 miles south of Managua. It was reported tonight that one of the two occupants had been killed.

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—Charles Shongood, former United States auctioneer, who in 26 years service, for the government sold $20,000,000 worth of assets, went on trial with his son and a woman associate today on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy.

The complaint cites instances of an offered bribe, falsified returns and conspiracy to defraud the government in the auctioning of bankrupt assets.

COMMUNISTS SPONSORED STRIKES FOR MONEY

NEW YORK, July 16—(AP)—Growth of organized violence in strikes and demonstrations staged by communists today was attributed largely to the cessation in 1925 of the justice department's efforts to curb Soviet activities due to insufficient laws under which to act.

Charles B. Wood, conciliation commissioner of the labor department at Washington, told a special house committee investigating communist activities that organized violence had become a "serious menace" to the nation's industries in the past five years.

Testifying for five hours as the only witness of the second day of hearings, Wood charged communist activities were directed in this country from Moscow, but expressed the belief that the Soviet government did not spend any money officially to aid in formulating a basis for a revolutionary movement.

As author of the book "Reds and lost wages," and in charge of negotiating strike settlements for the government, Wood said, he had found communists sponsored strikes, not to better conditions of workers, but to raise money from strike sympathizers. Money intended for women and children of strikers went, he said, largely to communist propagandizing work.

GREETINGS SENT BY PRES. HOOVER TO VON HINDENBURG

WASHINGTON, July 16—(AP)—President Hoover today communicated to President Von Hindenburg, of Germany, the greetings of the American people upon the occasion of a dinner in honor of General Von Steuben, who fought with the American forces in the Revolutionary war.

The letter will be read at the dinner in Berlin tonight. Ambassador Sackett will attend.

General Von Steuben's invaluable service in the cause of independence is taught in every American school and is gratefully remembered by every American citizen.

The people of the United States have also never forgotten the other great contributions to our national life that have been made by men of German birth or German blood in this country. They have influenced our educational ideals and methods, our scientific and technical thoughts, and our cultural and artistic life.

"They have greatly served the land of their adoption and have done honor to the land of their origin."

PACIFIC COAST FOREST FIRES UNDER CONTROL

SAN FRANCISCO, July 16—(AP)—Hundreds of exhausted Pacific Coast forest workers late today apparently had won their first great battle of the summer over fire.

All major forest fires were believed under control, although fitful winds which pushed flames out of bounds last night, presented extreme hazards.

Several large fires near Bend, Ore., were reported burning themselves out. The Matlake burn in the O'Dell lake district, was controlled today after leaping out of bounds last night and covering 3,000 acres.

With the aid of new trenches and back firing other blazes of the Bend district were halted. More than 5,000 acres were burned, but damage to merchantable timber was believed light.

A sheet of fire had spread over 4,000 acres of brush land near Bakersfield, Calif. The blaze was believed controlled yesterday but fresh winds spread flames through dense brush. Cattle grazing land suffered most damage.

CEDARTOWN, Ga., July 16.—(AP)—William and Fred Hulsey, father and son, tonight were convicted of the murder of Cliff Jones, one of three men whose bodies were found in an abandoned well near Rockmart, June 20. The verdict carried no recommendation, making the death penalty mandatory under Georgia law.

They are under other indictments charging the murder of Lige Harper and Ernest McCullough, the other two men slain.

Ray Hulsey, brother of Fred, and Tom Hicks, their brother-in-law, are under indictment as accessories after the fact. The latter two were state witnesses in the trial concluded tonight.

The state charged three men were killed after being inveigled into a gambling game in which the proposed victims of the game won.

KELLEY GOES TO JAIL AS RESULT OF ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, July 16.—Henry Kelley, 23, of South Coventry, whose car figured in a collision with a machine driven by Jabez Bigelow of Princeton, N. J., on Columbia avenue bridge last Sunday night, nearly precipitating Bigelow and his family into the Willimantic river, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving while under the influence of liquor in Columbia justice court this afternoon. Justice of the Peace Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch imposed a fine of $100 and costs, amounting to $182.97. In default of payment of the fine, Kelley was taken to Tolland county jail, but is expected to be released in a few days when the amount is paid up. Grand Juror Joseph N. Clarke prosecuted the case, the arrest having been made by Deputy Sheriff Harvey S. Collins.

William J. McCoy of Newark, N. J., with offices in Hartford, drew a fine of $100 and costs of $21 when found guilty of owning illegal outdoor advertising signs at a session of the Columbia town court this afternoon. State Policeman James A. Buckley of the Stafford Springs barracks had torn down ten or more of McCoy's signs in a drive being made by the state troopers against this form of violation. Justice of the Peace Mrs. Fannie Dixon Welch found McCoy guilty on four counts, imposing a fine of $25 on each. McCoy lacked sufficient funds and was taken to the Tolland county jail. The signs in question were advertising "Rolling Green Hills" which McCoy has been developing in the town of Columbia and which is described by residents of the town as a wooded stretch of land lying between Columbia lake and the Hartford-Willimantic highway. The case was prosecuted by Grand Juror Joseph N. Clarke. Previous to the arrest of McCoy, Sergeant Harris J. Hurlburt and Officer Buckley had been engaged for some two days tearing down a total of about 30 "Rolling Green Hills" signs that had been spiked to trees and other objects all along the route from Hartford to Columbia. The law violations involved were for placing the signs within 15 feet of the highway and nailing them to living trees.

ELKS PLAN ENTERTAINMENT FOR WILLIMANTIC KIDDIES

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WILLIMANTIC, July 16.—The kiddies of Willimantic, especially those without the privileges that moneyed parents can provide, will again be guests of Willimantic lodge, No. 1311, B. P. O. Elks, in a day's outing at Crescent Beach, Niantic, this year. The date of the outing has been set for Aug. 13, Clerk's day, in the hope that a number of store owners and employes who have been unable to take a "load of kids" to the beach in the past may be able to do so this year. Although some 200 cars and trucks participated in the novel procession to the beach last year, an expected "bumper" registration of kiddies is looked for this year, making a corresponding increase in the demand for car capacity.

Children between the ages of 7 and 10 years, inclusive, are requested to register at Liberty cottage, Elks' park, from 2 to 5 o'clock this coming Saturday, which will be the only registration day. Children qualifying for the trip will be provided with tickets and those intending to go bathing should have a bathing suit and a towel.

The annual outing committee this year is headed by Esteemed Lecturing Knight John H. Wilcox and comprises Past Exalted Rulers John B. Edgarton, James F. McGlone and Maurice S. Leonard, Esteemed Leading Knight William B. Sweeney, Esteemed Loyal Knight Harry S. Gaucher, Eugene E. Hickey, John D. Roy and C. Howard Chaffee.

Today's mails brought scores of greeting cards to Mrs. Angelina Loring Avery, youngest "real" daughter of the American Revolution, who celebrated her 91st birthday at the home of her son, Fred L. Avery, of 132 Chestnut street. There were also many callers at the house, several of whom brought suitable gifts. Among the birthday cards most cherished by Mrs. Avery is one from Rev. Harry S. McCready of Kingston, R. I., former pastor of the First Congregational church here. During the day Mrs. Avery thoroughly enjoyed an automobile trip with Mr and Mrs. Fred L. Avery. She is enjoying her longevity and remains active in the pursuit of such tasks as sewing, embroidery and knitting.

When Mrs. Avery was born in Lebanon, her father, Solomon Loring, was 74 years of age. Her mother was Angelina Sawyer, third wife of her father and whom he married in 1827 when he was 63 years of age. Her mother died at her birth and her father three years later. Mrs. Avery was married to Elisha B. Avery on July 1, 1856, at the age of 17 years. Her husband died March 4, 1907, and since 1914 she has made her home with her son, Fred L., and her daughter-in-law.

Scouting operations for the Japanese beetle started in earnest today by field scouts of the United States department of agriculture working here in cooperation with the state department of agriculture. One crew assigned to this locality consists of a foreman and three scouts. The scouts examine the preferred food plants of the beetle to determine the extent of the spread of the beetle. In order to do this it is necessary for them to enter the yards of residences and other premises in which plants may be found. The scouts are in uniform and are furnished with identification cards which will be exhibited on request. The scouts do not molest any plants or property.

The summer repair and construction program of the city street department is now in full swing. Superintendent Edwin O. Sumner stated today that three-quarters of the work of oiling streets is completed, oil being laid today on Walnut, Bank, Union, Center and Broad streets in the business section and on a number of residential thoroughfares. The reconstruction of Summit street from Oak to Turner street will be resumed as soon as blasting has been completed for the laying of a water main on this stretch. Mansfield avenue is being regraded to conform with the lines of new concrete sidewalks and gutters which have been constructed there this season and which serve to greatly enhance the beauty of the avenue. The final and largest street job of the year will be the permanent construction of Jackson street from Union to Valley streets, this construction to be of a tarvia preparation. Superintendent Sumner also has a force of men installing a new sewer line on Young street, off South.

A well known local chef discovered to his discomfiture Tuesday night that practical jokes sometimes boomerang. During the Battalino-Fernandez title bout at Hartford there was considerable local speculation on the outcome. The chef called up a fruit dealer and stated that the champion had been knocked out in the third round. Supposing he had good information, the fruit dealer passed the word along and it reached police headquarters. Some time later the chef, curious for authentic information on the fight, telephoned police headquarters and was informed that the champion had been knocked out in the third round. Everybody, including the joking chef, believed this to be true until subsequent and correct reports disclosed the outcome of the fight to have been very much to the contrary.

DANIELSON

BROOKLYN BANK TRANSFERS $50,000 TO SURPLUS ACCOUNT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

DANIELSON, July 16—This afternoon the annual meeting of the corporators of the Brooklyn Savings bank was held at the institution, with the president, J. Arthur Atwood, presiding. The report of Secretary-Treasurer Sidney W. Bard showed a surprisingly good year, for the period ending June 30 and net earnings above what had been anticipated.

In this 58th annual report there was incorporated numbers of interesting facts and figures. Since its organization deposits in the bank have been in excess of $19,000,000. There are now more than 8,000 depositors, representative of every community for many miles about, and many from distant places. It is a curious fact to contemplate in these days that for brief periods during the early days of its existence this bank paid interest at one time at the rate of 6 per cent per annum and at another time 7 per cent. For years the interest rate was four per cent, later four and a half, while at the present time it is five per cent.

The outstanding action today at a meeting of the officers and trustees following the meeting of the corporators was the transfer of $50,000 to the surplus account, increasing it to $300,000. This surplus is in addition to upwards of $265,000 in the profit and loss account. This action was made possible by the splendid record of earnings that the bank has been making and thereby adding to its already very strong position. It was also found possible by the trustees at today's meeting to declare the semi-annual dividend due Sept. 1, at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, another evidence of the exceptionally fine condition of the institution.

All officers and trustees were re-elected today at the corporators' meeting, the list being as follows: President, J. Arthur Atwood; vice-president, Frederick A. Jacobs; secretary-treasurer, Sidney W. Bard; assistant-treasurer, Harold E. Field; trustees, Charles Bragg, Central Village; Dr. George M. Burroughs, Frederick E. Bitgood, Ernest R. Warren, Joseph N. Lavallee, Herman M. Coulter, New Bedford; Irving W. Davis, Fred W. Tillinghast, Central Village; Thomas J. Seaton, Moosup; Edward A. Sullivan, Judge Sabin S. Russell, Herbert H. Pepler. Unless otherwise indicated the trustees are resident in Danielson.

New Road Planned.

Today there was what appears to be authentic information that the state of Rhode Island is to undertake construction of a triple track highway on the Danielson-Providence route, and that this year's part of the construction will be from the Providence city line to North Scituate, and next year's to the Connecticut line at Little Rest, five miles east of here. The information is that there will be few major changes from the present route, though some curves will be eliminated and some grades changed. The road will be wider than at present to allow of building one concrete track on one side of the highway and another on the other side, with the central, or passing track of amesite.

Arrives From Coast.

Richard Martin, 19, completed what amounts to a coast to coast hitch-hiking trip when he arrived at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles S. Bil on Academy street this morning. About six months ago he left for California to visit with relatives. Recently the longing to get back east became so strong that he fared forth, hiking and riding as fate ordained. One kindly motorist that picked him up brought him along 300 miles on his journey. He was mighty weary when he arrived here today, but delighted to be back in town again.

James Curtis, a colored resident in Foster and East Killingly for well toward half a century, died this morning at an institution at Howard, R. I. where he was committed last Thursday. Recently Mr. Curtis had been living in a shack in that area between Bear hill in this town and North Foster, his place of abode being in Rhode Island. Early this evening the body was brought to A. F. Wood's funeral home here. Mr. Curtis, who is believed to have been nearing 80 years of age, left no immediate relatives, insofar as could be learned in East Killingly today. Years ago he married Miss Phoebe Henry of East Killingly. She has long since been dead.

Distribution of the summer issue of the telephone directory began today in the territory of the Danielson division. This division lists 1,685 stations, which is less than the number of telephones in actual use, for there are many extension instruments. This figure is an increase from 1617 in the January directory of this year, a gain of 68 stations.

This afternoon at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry E. Magoon, in Brooklyn, Miss Gladys Magoon had a birthday party for her 6th anniversary and had as guests the little children who attended kindergarten with her here in Danielson last winter. Thir favorite games were played under the guidance of their teacher, Miss Mildred Tillinghast. Later in the afternoon refreshments were served by Mrs. Magoon and her sister, Mrs. Warren Root.

Helen (Mickey) McCall and her hitch-hiking pal, Esther (Jerry) Wernicke, who were at East Killingly for several days last month have written to friends there of their safe arrival at Jerry's home town, Rochester, Minn., after an absence of about 11 months during which they covered nearly 12,000 miles from coast to coast. Miss McCall will remain in Rochester two weeks before proceeding to her own home in Glendive, Mont. It took them two weeks to make their way from East Killingly to Minnesota.

Four more boys left today for the "Y" summer camp at Black pond in Woodstock to remain for a fortnight. They are Robert Marland, Walter Holehouse, Franklin Jones and Roland Boyd.

The Misses Mae and Annette Young and Miss Amelia Hutchins have taken a cottage at Annasquam, Mass., to remain for a month.

Upon their return from Canada in August, Mr. and Mrs. Aldee Paquin, recently married here, are to be given an elaborate reception by their relatives and friends.

Good weather is helping speed the work that it is being done on the construction of the three miles of concrete highway to be built this summer between Wauregan and Danielson. Grading and filling work is advancing steadily.

Fred Swan, manager of the Wauregan company market, has been confined to his home because of having stepped on a nail and driving it into his foot to a considerable depth.

After spending a vacation here with her parents, Mr and Mrs. Moses Berthiaume, Sr., Miss Anita Berthiaume, a student nurse at St. Joseph's hospital, has returned to Providence.

A job being done today by a state highway crew was the oiling of the shoulders of the state highway between Danielson and Elmville.

Police advise that it is hazardous to pay deposits to lingiere or hosiery salesmen who are unknown in Danielson and come here to canvass from house to house for orders. Pay only when goods are delivered are the added suggestion from official quarters.

Fayette Wright, a resident of Pomfret, for many years, but now of Clearwater, Fla., called on numbers of his friends here today. He and Mrs Wright and their daughter are visiting with relatives in Pomfret.

Dr. Robert F. Souther, who as a lieutenant colonel medical reserve officer of the 76th division has been at Fort Adams for a tour of duty, has returned to his home here.

The garden party to have been held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Field in Brooklyn Friday afternoon in the interest of the Nurses' Home fund of the Day Kimball hospital has been postponed to August 2, because it would conflict on Friday with another large event being held for the same purpose in Pomfret.

Alexander's lake has yielded up a bass that weighed 4 pounds and 7 ounces. It was taken near the island. Fishing is permitted in this lake on Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays.

It is of interest to local motorists that no great difficulty is being experienced now in getting past highway construction work at or near Jewett City.

Mrs. Alfred Pluze, who has been visiting with relatives in Stamford, will return to her home here the first of the week.

It is now regarded as possible that construction work on the repeater station for the A. T. and T. company on the West Side will be underway within 30 days. The building will be of brick and will be located on the southerly side of South Main street, about opposite Day street.

The Men's club of the Methodist Episcopal church will have their outing Thursday evening at Alexander's lake, and are inviting the women of the church to be their guests.

For the first time in days there was no session of the Killingly town court today.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Loiselle and their children, Florence and Norman, have gone to Canada for a vacation of two weeks. They are to visit in Montreal and in various communities near that city.

These are the days that berry pickers are getting into action. Huckleberries, blue berries and raspberries are to be found in quantities in some localities hereabouts, but are scarce in others where they have been found in other years.

Furniture, lawn mowers, rakes and other such tools for sale this week at the Blanchard home, High street, Dayville.—adv.

JEWETT CITY

INDIANS DEFEAT CLERKS AS 14 TO 5 SCORE SHOWS

Three hundred fans were at the slaughter Tuesday evening when Sullivan's Indians tomahawked and scalped Terry McGovern's aggregation of clerks in a most shocking manner and laid them quietly to rest, following a 5 to 14 score. It was first intended to make up a box score of the onslaught, but the places for runs became so over-crowded that it was given up. Dolly Liberty started off in the twirling for the Clerks, but he retired to the showers at the end of the fourth frame. Bud Jodoin mounted the slab and drilled holes in the atmosphere where they had never been before. Bud is a budding pitcher, enthusiastic, and a stayer, but against the murderous onslaught of the Indians' heavy bludgeons, he proved of no avail. Dick Dudkowski, out of a lot of new bats, especially purchased for this game, unfortunately drew one that had a hole in it through which Pizzo, the Indians' pitcher, managed to throw the ball. Jiggs Slonski furnished the feature of the game. He caught a short fly in left field, and executed a complete somersault in the operation, but held fast to the pill.

Dan Shea did the umpiring and proved an arbiter of a special class. He is a man of unquestioned bravery, for when all others failed, Dan put on that winning smile of his, and after tightening up his belt, and filling his pockets with stones, he went to his fate. Now and then at critical moments, both teams were in the field at the same time. Excitement ran high but Wednesday, as far as reported the stores opened as usual, and barring the fact that some of the massacre perpetrators peeked around the corners to see that all was clear, everything seemed at peace.

Score by Innings:

Clerks	0	0	2	0	0	1	2—5
Indians	2	3	1	2	5	1	x—14

PUTNAM

IMPROVEMENTS MADE AT WINDHAM COUNTY HOME

(Special to The Bulletin.)

PUTNAM, July 16.—A building and additional equipment installation programme has recently been completed at the Windham county temporary home in Sawyer district, County Commissioner Arthur C. Keith of this city said yesterday. The purpose of the extensive renovations was to increase the standards of efficiency with regards to fire protection, Commissioner Keith said. With the completion of the work the children's institution has been made as safe from the ravages of fire as is possible under the circumstances and the renovations, in addition to increasing the mark of safety there, have brought the Windham county home to and above par rating with the homes of other counties.

The most important feature of the safety programme is the enhancing of the water supply and water pressure, by the installation of pressure pumps. To accommodate the requirements of the pumps it was necessary to enlarge the size of one of the supply wells, in order to obtain a greater volume of water. With this done, the pumps were connected to the system, making a large supply of water with an increased force available at all times.

Another improvement has been the replacing of old fire-escapes with new outside stairways, and the erection of additional escapes at strategic points. The number of hand fire extinguishers has been augmented with the placing at various places in the building of a supply of modern chemical extinguishers approved by the underwriters.

The county home came under fire in remarks made by Kenneth C. Messenger, commissioner of the state bureau of child welfare, at after dinner talks before clubs in the western part of the county. Mr. Messenger attacked the alleged deplorable conditions at the Sawyer district institution and also criticized the policy of the board of county commissioners as to the placing of inmates in private homes.

The commission never reproached Mr. Messenger publicly for his remarks, but after a conference with him, decided upon the initiation of a programme for the increasing of efficiency standards. The home in its present condition ranks among the best in the state in equipment and management.

Philip Dean of Woodstock, a student who recently returned from a tour of France, Italy and Germany where he made extensive studies of the languages of each country, spoke at the social session of the Putnam Rotary club's meeting at the Putnam Inn today. Mr. Dean gave a highly interesting account of the origin and use of various languages in which he is exceptionally well versed. At the conclusion of his talk he illustrated many of his points with an exhibit of curios collected during his travels in the foreign countries.

Vice President Ray C. Bosworth presided at today's luncheon and meeting in the absence of President Alex Gilman who is away on his annual vacation. Visitors at Rotary today were Sidney O. Butler, S. The campaign against speeding and reckless driving being conducted in the neighboring state of Rhode Island and fostered by the state police department of that state is still underway, out of state drivers failing to adhere to the road regulations of the state are finding. Since the wholesale inauguration of the safety campaign on July 4, state officers have maintained an almost ceaseless vigil over the highways in an effort to keep speed of automobiles at a minimum. The drive has met with marked success. The number of accidents occurring on the state roads this month is less than half the number recorded during the preceding month and indications are that a greater record will be established before the expiration of the year. Captain J. H. Harwood, executive officer of the Rhode Island state police department and a champion of moderate rates of speed on the highways, in commenting on the outcome of the state-wide safety campaign said "The results have been most gratifying, even exceeding our expectations."

Putnam undertakers today advised that they have not been communicated with relative to the taking charge of the body of William Fischer, said to be a Putnam resident, who died in Providence at the Rhode Island hospital last Thursday evening. His death was caused by exposure, the result of falling into the Providence river and identification marks on his clothes informed that the dead man hailed from Putnam. Efforts made last week to obtain information concerning Fischer were fruitless. Henry N. Benoit, town clerk, said this afternoon that he had received no word from Providence authorities purporting to show that the body had been shipped to Putnam for burial.

New England's largest post-war time assemblage of troops will take place on Sunday, August 10, at Camp Devens when the 43rd division, comprising national guard units of Maine, Vermont, Rhode Island and Connecticut pass in review. The headquarters company of special troops of the division of this city will take part in the maneuvers expected to be reviewed by the governors of four states. It is expected that there will be many Putnam people on hand to witness the military spectacle, since it will occur on the second Sunday of the tour of duty.

The annual meeting and election of officers and trustees of the Putnam Savings bank will be held on next Monday afternoon in the banking rooms on Main street, Treasurer Arthur F. Hughes announced today.

A large number of the north shore cottages at Alexander's lake are occupied by Putnam residents who commute between this city and Dayville daily.

Coach Lauriston F. Noyes of Putnam high school who is vacationing in Maine, will return to the school in the fall as sub-master and head coach of athletics. During the past four years that Coach Noyes has been in charge of athletic supervision at the high school, he has turned out many teams which have achieved supremacy in their respective classes.

With the mercury descending to 58 Tuesday evening, Putnam people found little trouble in getting a good night's rest between the blankets.

Work on the state road over Putnam Heights, which has been under construction work nearly a year, is fast nearing completion. On the Grove street end workmen yesterday were sinking holes along the side of the highway in preparation for the erection of the protective fence. On the north side the work is going forward at a rapid pace and undoubtedly will reach completion before fall.

WATER DEPARTMENT DEFICITS

At the recent city meeting the taxpayers had an opportunity to learn why taxes have been steadily mounting in the past and they had reason to appreciate that they would continue to do so if the practices of the past are continued.

In years gone by there have been poor business methods used in handling the affairs of the city. Instead of meeting the obligations when they arise or gradually paying them off, floating debts have been created. The interest has been paid from year to year but the obligation still remains until, with the original and the interest, the city pays twice and thrice. In addition, deficits have been piled up year after year.

In his communication to the board of water commissioners, Mayor Robbins has directed attention to another situation which operates to the boosting of taxation. More than a year ago he showed the board where it was failing, by nearly $25,000, to meet its interest on the outstanding bonded indebtedness. That meant that it had to come out of the taxpayers in the form of taxation. It may not have been generally recognized, but that was the situation.

While curtailed expenditures served to cut the deficit in the past year, the department closed the year still in the red. He points out now that the department is facing additional obligations this year. It will be necessary to pay $21,000 additional in bond interest this year because of Deep River reservoir, with an increase of $10,000 next year, these additional interest charges then continuing for many years.

Mayor Robbins thinks that the liability of increased taxation through the continuance of past methods should be known now instead of just before the next annual city meeting. He recommends that the situation be given attention at this time by the board and suggests the idea of changing the rates so that the burden should fall where it belongs, on the water users, whether in the city, the town, or outside the town. With the department meeting its obligations it will not be burdening the city tax rate with its deficits.

The mayor has presented to the water board a business proposition which deserves the most careful consideration.

ROADS AND GAS TAX

New York was one of the states which waited for a long time before it adopted the gasoline tax as a means of securing revenue for road construction. It was won over by the results obtained in other states and the desirability of getting away from the frequent resort to bond issues in order to obtain money to build highways. New York turned to the tax and its experience is particularly gratifying. It is getting a satisfactory demonstration and perhaps realizes that it would have been much better off had it resorted to it long before it did.

But while New York is getting and making good use of its tax on gasoline, those directly interested in and using good roads paying in proportion to the use that is made of them, it is also giving consideration to the country roads.

Of its 80,107 miles of roads on the first of January, 1929, there were 49,643 unimproved, mainly in the country districts, according to the New York Times. But these country roads are not being left for the towns to improve for, under a new law adopted this year, the Times sets forth, "the poorer towns will receive on the average double the old state aid for their roads. They are gradually to be improved by better surfacing. In the future, the pay-as-you-go plan will be in order in this state, and the motorists will doubtless find, as has been the case in other states, that the gasoline tax is the fairest way of providing the cost of the expense."

The gasoline tax is unquestionably a fair way of providing for the construction and maintenance of highways, but in its application to road building there is justification for the claim being made here in Connecticut that more of it should be devoted to the improvement of the country roads. Connecticut should see that they get better surfacing, as is being done in New York state. Those on the country roads who pay the gasoline tax are entitled to some consideration. Certain gasoline taxpayers never travel on anything but the best highways. They are so situated that that is possible. Those living on country roads and paying the gas tax just the same have to negotiate bad and sometimes next to impassable roads before they can get to the roads which they have helped pay for. Their claim for a little consideration is a fair one.

"VOTE, QUIT, AND GO HOME"

The reaction throughout the country to the efforts to defeat the London treaty has been decidedly adverse. There is a firm belief that the treaty means progress toward a desired goal, even though it may not accomplish all that was desired, and there is little patience with the efforts that have been and are being made to prevent ratification or to delay action on the matter at this time.

The country, it is believed, has confidence that the treaty is worthwhile, that it will give the nations a chance to see the desirability of continuing the limitation effort before or at the time of expiration and that it is a sound move in the direction of world peace.

Even those in congress are most unfavorably impressed by the tactics employed to prevent the majority in the senate from giving voice to its desires. Congressman Cyrenus Cole of Iowa gives expression to his feelings, as follows, in a letter to Senator Moses:

"Why prolong the nation's distress by holding the senate in session? I am a thousand miles away. I have not heard of one word of approval of what the senate is doing. Vote on the treaty and go home, reserving, if you must, the right afterward, in the Congressional Record, in which no wise man looks for wisdom.

"The conscience of the country is back of the treaty that quibblers are still seeking to emasculate. That same conscience was shocked by four days of debate on a resolution to force the president to violate all traditions of international intercourse. Even in Russia they would hardly propose such a diplomatic indecency.

"The sons of the wild jackasses, which once on a time you envisaged in the sage brush beyond the Missouri, are not clattering their hoofs in the effete east.

"If the senate is going to brawl through another summer the country will feel disposed to shut up shop. It has already been talked into all the distress it can stand. In the name, not of the party, but of patriotism, vote, quit and go home, and give the country a chance to recuperate."

That is a letter to which we can hear "Amens" shouted from all parts of the country.

GUARD THE ELMS

Norwich has long been fond of its elms and has done much for their preservation since the loss of some of its best. Each year it uses preventive measures for protection against the elm tree beetle and it is certain to be interested in the discovery of a new elm tree disease to which attention has been called in another column by the agricultural experiment station in Ohio and Henry G. Gilbert, tree expert, who knows Norwich trees and the interest its people take in them.

The Dutch elm disease has raised havoc among the elms of Holland and stripped that country of them almost as thoroughly as the chestnut blight has wiped out the chestnuts in this country. That this disease has been discovered in Ohio doesn't necessarily mean that it exists in Norwich or in Connecticut, and yet the knowledge that it has gotten to this country from Holland, or somewhere else, is good and sufficient reason why we should be alert to its existence and be prepared to give warning if discoveries are made which indicate its presence.

To be forewarned is to be forearmed. Knowing that there is a disease which may eliminate the elms is not good news. It calls, however, for the giving of careful attention to our elms in order that the most effective means as yet known of preventing the spread of the infestation, that of destruction, may be employed. It would be far more satisfactory to check such disease by the loss of a few trees than by permitting it to carry on its ravages without action. Through the spreading of the information concerning Ohio's discovery, valuable steps in the way of prevention can and should be employed in other states and in cities where the elm trees are a decided asset, and Norwich isn't the only city or community that is proud of its elms.

TO ARMS AGAINST MOSQUITOES

Those who live or have summer homes along the shore in eastern Connecticut and western Rhode Island, and particularly in the latter state, are displaying much interest at this time in an effort to accomplish the elimination of mosquitoes in that area.

It is a laudable ambition. The mosquito has no friends. It is a pest and a nuisance whose eradication is desired both from the health and peace standpoint, and it is by united efforts that results can be expected.

The Watch Hill Improvement society has been taking a leading role in this movement. It has interested the Misquamicut fire district and secured its cooperation, and tonight efforts are to be made to get the town of Stonington interested in joining hands in a general assault upon the mosquitoes and their breeding places in that locality in which all are directly interested.

Fighting the mosquito cannot make any appreciable headway by simply resorting to swatters. That helps the individual to relieve his feelings but it makes no inroads against the myriads of others. Where one is swatted, phalanx after phalanx is ready to give battle. The successful method of attack is to strike at the stagnant pools and ponds where they breed by draining or oiling. Prevention in the case of mosquitoes is the recognized scheme and an ounce of it accomplishes many a pound of cure.

It is quite apparent that if Watch Hill and Misquamicut are going to start in fighting the mosquitoes in that region their efforts would be seriously handicapped unless a similar movement was begun against the Stonington mosquito breeding places in lower Pawcatuck. Mosquitoes know no boundary lines. Their breeding places should go, wherever they can be located.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The man on the corner says: Did you ever anticipate the feelings of a fellow upon finding he was going the wrong way on a one-way street?

Now that New England is promised a large apple crop it is time to think of getting the barrels and the cider mills ready.

If there is nothing else to speculate over there is the date on which the treaty will be ratified and the chairmanship of the republican national committee.

When those in the west remind Senator Moses that all the sons of wild jackasses are not in the sagebrush beyond the Missouri there can be no surprise.

ITS LAST EFFORT

No doubt about it. Aunt Kate, though fat, was romantic. Cissy's affair with this overpoweringly handsome, careless but assured young man who drove up in a long, sleek car nearly every evening and carried her off to evening-gown and silver-slipper affairs had enthralled her ever since her first day of visiting.

"Well, if you aren't engaged," she wanted to know disappointedly, "why aren't you? He can't seem to live without the sight of you!"

Cissy drew a careful finger over the dash of lipstick she had just plastered on. "I don't know," she said at last ruefully. She turned eyes full of pathos on Aunt Kate. It was a relief to find somebody in whom to confide. "Sometimes I think he is just crazy about me—and the minute I am all self-satisfied I get a jolt and I am positive he isn't. He gets sort of absent-minded—maybe he's worrying over whether I care for him and then again maybe he isn't! It's wearing me down!"

"Shucks," said Aunt Kate in grand disdain, regarding her pretty niece. "That young man just dilly-dallies. He needs a push. If you want him, I'm telling you that you shall have him, Cissy. He won't make you any happier than would a homelier man, but he'd be an ornament to any establishment and in this decorative age that counts. Let me tell you something—you just stay home once in a while and let him sit on that old carved davenport by the staircase—that'll do it. Your father proposed to your mother on that sofa. Your Grandfather Burton asked your grandmother to marry him while she sat right there doing some knitting. And my sister Sarah's two husbands both asked her to marry them while they sat on that sofa when it stood in the bay window back home!"

Cissy shrieked. She kissed her Aunt Kate and kept on laughing. "You're priceless!" she told her. "Do you actually think that an old piece of furniture on its last legs had anything to do with all that? Anyhow, George is so strong-minded that it would take something more active than a bunch of wood and mohair to——"

"I've seen him look at you," Aunt Kate interrupted darkly. "I guess if I have never been married I can tell when a man's in love. Most of them need to have it called to their attention and I must say I'm surprised to find you so backward if you have your eyes on that young man. You ought to help him out. Very few men realize what they actually want. And you needn't jeer at my davenport story because it's just as true today as it was in the past!"

That night at 2:30 o'clock, Cissy giggled to herself when she and George reached her home after a party. She had just recalled Aunt Kate's harangue.

He looked very masterful and important," she suddenly invited her astonished escort. "Mother always leaves some hot chocolate for me and I'll warm it up. You can sit right here by the stairs on this davenport!"

"I'll help you," George suggested. He looked very masterful and important in his evening black and white. Cissy fluttered about, a feminine wisp of blue tulle and blue eyes. Her heart might ache, but she was resolved that George should never know the havoc he had wrought. Carefully carrying their cups of hot liquid with cookies on the saucers they marched back to the front of the house, Cissy leading the way. She headed again for the hall.

"Why out here?" George wanted to know. "It was cozier in the kitchen if you ask me! And this ancient heirloom isn't so comfortable as it might be. Sort of starched and rigid."

Cissy looked up at him. He looked down at her. "I want to sit here," she said suddenly and perversely with flaming cheeks.

Expertly balancing their cups they sat down simultaneously in the center of the old davenport. There was a snap, a splintering crash and the antique mahogany frame parted and smashed. Cissy and George were catapulted into each other's arm in a jumble of white shirt front, blue tulle, shrieks and chocolate. He did not let her go when he found where they were. In fact he drew her closer and kissed her.

"Darling!" he began after the most approved and everlasting used pattern.

Above on the landing, Aunt Kate tiptoed away, satisfied. The family davenport had lived up to specifications.—Chicago News.

A Washington Bystander

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

WASHINGTON, July 16—When the 1920 census is complete, what it discloses both as to the extent and the cause of unemployment will be not the least important aspect of its massed statistics.

And just what the census will show as to the amount of so-called "technological unemployment" is going to be especially interesting. That means folks thrown out of jobs by new machines which do the work once turned out by big groups of men and women.

The Bystander has heard, for instance, of a machine to make automobiles frames, which covers three acres of ground, takes a hundred or so operatives to feed and tend it and turns out its products in thousands every 24 hours.

Speedy Work

Or here's another illustration, right at home in the census bureau itself. A new "gangpunch," or machine for perforating the individual census cards so that the subsequent mechanical tabulators can glean their amazing statistical deductions and conclusions from them, has just been developed and installed by the bureau.

It will handle about 175,000 cards a day, an increased output of some 500 per cent over 1920 equipment possibilities. It used to take ten machines and their operatives to do the work.

There also is a new card sorting machine this year capable of sorting 140,000 cards a day. In 1920 it took 50 hard working clerks to do that.

So there you have it technological unemployment resulting from increased mechanical efficiency.

No Names Now

Obviously it would be almost impossible for a modern census to be taken with any degree of accuracy by old hand methods.

You could not get enough clerks and tabulators simultaneously grouped about the individual records to get anywhere. Probably it would be time for the next ten year nose count before you got through with the first.

Back in 1790 when there were only 4,000,000 to be enumerated, that was the way it was done. Every name taken by the field force itself figured in the subsequent tabulation. Nowadays the names do not get in to it at all.

There is a card for each individual, of course, but it does not bear a name, merely the punch holes for sex, race, occupation, age and all other inquiries involved.

Yet back in 1790, with 4,000,000 to handle, it took nine months to tabulate results.

Little Talks on Thrift

Judgment in the Investment of Savings One of Benefits of Thrift

It was officially stated recently that during the first six months of the present year the huge sum of $32,500,000 was lost by people of New York state alone through investment in fraudulent securities. This is at the rate of $65,000,000 a year and inasmuch as the Empire state contains about one-tenth of the population of the country, it would seem within the bounds of reason to assume that considerably more than a half a billion dollars are lost every year by the people of the United States through this shameless type of fraud.

Many laws have been passed to put a stop to these fraudulent practices and state officials everywhere have been anxious to protect the public from dealers in "blue sky" securities. The chief fault, of course, lies in the gullibility of large numbers of persons who do not stop to think that it is impossible to expect money to grow on trees in a figurative sense.

Persons who are not sure of their own judgment in investment matters should seek the advice of those capable of giving sound and honest advice on this problem.

It will only be through thrift education that an end ever will be brought to this disgraceful situation. The masses of the people must learn that thrift does not consist merely in saving money and that it is just as important to know what to do with your money after you have saved as it was to have earned it and saved it in the first place.

It is to be borne in mind that one of the great benefits to be derived from a study of thrift principles lies in the fact that it gives one judgment and perspective in money matters. We learn that it is foolhardy to expect the investment of a small sum of money to make us wealthy overnight. Glib-tongued salesmen may tell you tales of financial miracles but the truly thrifty man or woman will always remember that such phenomena rarely, if ever, occur. Sensible saving; sensible spending; sensible investing, this is true thrift.—By S. W. Straus, President American Society for Thrift.

YOUR HEALTH

Health And Safety

By A. D. Lazenby, M. D., Baltimore
(From Gorgas Memorial Institute)

Accidents will happen in the best regulated families,—and industries. They kill and maim more of our people every year than the Great War. They continue to increase despite the guards on machines and the other safety precautions which industry is now adopting so universally. We wax enthusiastic over our guarded flywheels, our safety posters, and our safety speeches, but usually we lose sight of one of the most frequent causes of accident, and the most readily preventable,—our general health.

A man's reaction time is the time elapsing between his perception of approaching danger and the action of his muscles in removing him from its path. A healthy man's reaction time is normally rapid. But the man who is constantly absorbing toxins into his system, either because of chronic constipation or kidney disease, infected tonsils or abscessed teeth, or who is suffering from some acute trouble such as a headache or a boil on the back of his neck, or one who has a mind upset by personal worries, almost always has his reaction time increased so that danger is likely to overtake him before he can remove himself from its path.

Over one-half of the employees of a certain large manufacturing plant were found upon examination to have defective vision, and only one-fourth of them had properly fitted glasses. It is easy to realize that in this modern day of hustle and bustle, keenness of all of our senses is necessary to keep us safe from harm. If we cannot see or hear the approaching automobile, or if the rush of traffic confuses us because our senses are not keenly tuned, we must often suffer injury. A constipated man cannot be an alert one because his system is constantly absorbing poison from his intestinal tract. Danger lurks on every hand, in the shop, in the home, in the street, and the fellow who cannot see its approach and quickly remove himself, is the fellow who must suffer the consequences.

Many diseases do not make their presence known to us until they have reached the point where they cannot be cured. Most of these diseases, however, can be detected by the physician by physical examination. One abscessed tooth which "never gave a bit of trouble," might mean a serious accident, simply because that tooth was constantly poisoning your senses of perception and dulling your mental processes. And after the accident that one apparently harmless tooth might well be the reason for complications that delay recovery or perhaps prevent forever your return to work.

A varicose vein in your leg, which you may have for years and which may never have given you any inconvenience, may be injured by a simple blow and produce a sore which will be months in healing. You may think you have perfect eyesight, but perhaps after an examination of your eyes, you may find yourself mistaken. A pair of glasses will show you many things that you have missed. You will work during the day with much less nervous tension and with more accuracy, and when the day's work is over you will find yourself less fatigued when you return home. You will read with more enjoyment, you will enjoy the movies more and you will sleep better.

Perhaps a simple word of advice is all you need to make it possible for you to enjoy that big steak that you have craved so long but that you never eat because "heavy food does not agree."

Best of all, you will have your mind on your work and not have your attention divided between your work and that uncomfortable feeling in your stomach. Not only will you be safer if your physical processes are functioning automatically, as they should, but you will be more productive and your earnings must increase.

Your family doctor should be of more value to you than simply to treat you when you are sick. He should be your constant health advisor and he can do much for you to keep you well and free from accident. A regular physical examination, even if you feel perfectly normal, should be the rule of every intelligent man. Many large industries provide the opportunity for the periodic physical check-up on their employees. If the industry in which you are engaged offers this opportunity, by all means avail yourself cheerfully of it. If it does not, the expense of a physical examination on your birthday by your family physician will pay dividends in safety, efficiency and longevity.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORY

Farmer Brown's Boy Hears a Gun

The killer has a heart of steel;
No pity does he ever feel.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

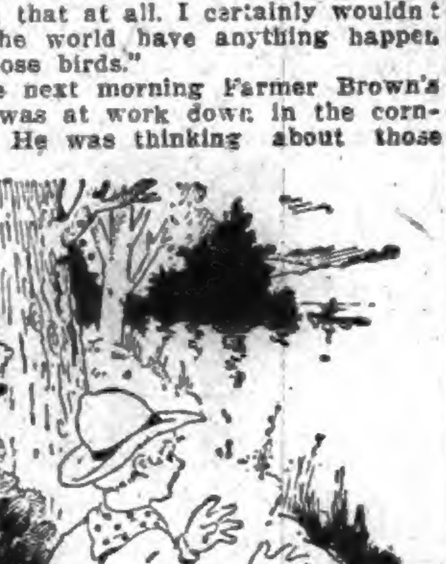
Farmer Brown's Boy had had a great thrill. When Egret the Great White Heron and the three white Little Blue Herons took to their wings and flew away from the Smiling Pool over to the Big River, Farmer Brown's Boy had been near enough to see them. He had rubbed his eyes. In fact, he rubbed them twice. "Did I, or didn't I?" said he to no one at all, for there was no one there to talk to.

He watched the four Herons until they had disappeared behind the trees along the bank of the Big River. He guessed just where they were going. Then he started in that direction. When he got near to the bank of the Big River, opposite the place where he thought he would find the Herons, he crawled, being almost flat on his stomach. You see, he didn't want to be seen. At last he was where he could peep over the edge of the bank. At first he experienced great disappointment. He could not see those Herons. But, at last, farther down along the shore, he saw something white. He just crept back and then circled around so as to reach the bank opposite that point.

This time when he peeped over the bank his heart fairly leaped with joy. He could plainly see all four Herons standing out in the growing wild rice. "One of those is an Egret," said Farmer Brown's Boy to himself. "Yes, sir, the biggest one is an Egret! I can't be sure, but I think those others are young Little Blue Herons. I've read about these White Herons, but I never expected to see any up here."

Farmer Brown's Boy remained watching those Herons just as long as he could. Then he had to get back home to do his chores. Such an excited boy as he was when he told Farmer Brown and Mother Brown about those four big white birds. He could talk of nothing else. "It would be just like some killer with a terrible gun to try to shoot one of those birds," said he. "The more rare and the more beautiful a bird is, the more some people want to kill it. I don't understand that at all. I certainly wouldn't for the world have anything happen to those birds."

The next morning Farmer Brown's Boy was at work down in the cornfield. He was thinking about those



"I hope he wasn't shooting at those herons," muttered Farmer Brown's Boy

Herons and hoping that he would find time to slip over to the Smiling Pool, or the Big River, to look for them. Suddenly he heard the bang of a terrible gun in the distance. The sound seemed to come from the Big River. Farmer Brown's Boy dropped his hoe and you should have seen him run! Straight across the Great Meadows he ran. In the distance he saw a man with a gun running up along the bank. Then he disappeared. When Farmer Brown's Boy reached the bank of the Big River, he saw the man in a boat out in the middle. It was too far for him to see who it was.

"I hope he wasn't shooting at those Herons," muttered Farmer Brown's Boy, as he began to anxiously search the shore with his keen eyes. At first he saw nothing out of the way. Then he saw a white feather floating in the water. Patiently and anxiously he then searched through the growing wild rice and so at last he discovered a beautiful white bird with wonderful plumes that was trying to hide. At a glance Farmer Brown's Boy saw that that bird had been shot and that one wing had been badly hurt.

"You poor, poor thing!" said Farmer Brown's Boy. "You poor, poor thing!"

Flying Across the Equator

For a lonesome airplane trip one need not seek out the north or south poles. A flight across the equator, from Cayenne, in French Guiana, to Para, in Brazil, was almost as devoid of any sight of human habitation, according to a dispatch from Frederick Simpich, in charge of the National Geographic society's aerial survey of seaplane paths from New York to Buenos Aires.

"We zoomed across the equator one afternoon at 2:15 o'clock," Mr. Simpich writes. "On an 8-hour flight from Cayenne to Para we hit the Big Mark in the Amazon delta, just east of the north end of Mexiana Island, on our 169-mile hop across the mouth of the world's mightiest river.

"For more than an hour we were out of sight of land. Even before that, in the huge northeast shoulder of Brazil, what an empty land! For more than two hours, after flying over the Oyapock, near the Guiana border, we saw no human habitation.

"Flying thus into Brazil from the north, one wonders where its 38,000,000 people keep themselves. It was not till after we turned inland, halfway down the inside coast of Maraca Island, in search of a lonely gas station on Lake Monte Negro, that we again caught sight of human beings. Now far-separated, straw-roofed huts appeared, and finally a tiny settlement. Then little known Lake Monte Negro, a mere puddle of fresh water in an infinite waste of salt marshes.

"'I flew around for two hours hunting for it, the first time I brought a plane down this way,' said Pilot Hawkins. 'To get gas here from Para we have to use first a steam launch, then canoes, and on the last lap the Indians carry the cases on their backs. Gas delivered here costs a dollar a gallon.'

"This jungle, from high above, seemed too small to land in. But, after many turns and careful calculations, Hawkins set the big 'Argentina' safely down; although at the last minute he had to jump a floating log which would have smashed our hull had he not seen it in the nick of time. Our Indian helpers, with bows, arrows and spears, and some fish and turtles they had killed, were waiting to man the gas pumps. A storm blew up while we worked, ruffling the little lake and aiding us with its strong wind to get our heavy craft off the water.

"Heading into the blinding rain, using all our 1500-horsepower, Hawkins raced the big boat the full length of the pond and jumped into the air. With only seconds to spare we cleared the tree tops and headed south. A purgatory indeed, a watery wilderness of empty islands, dismal swamps and dead trees stretches for weary miles till you reach the river Araguary. Crossing it, we came soon to the muddy banks of the incomparable Amazon itself—a vast, yellow, sinister sea before which puny man can only marvel at the majesty of nature. You sense the colossal power and magnitude of its mighty, moving bulk when you fly its far-flung delta banks and see its mud-flats covered with countless thousands of giant forest trees, wrenched by the roots and scattered like matches.

"Bearing southeast, we skirted the channel islands of Caviana and Mexiana, split by the equator, crossed the east end of the great wooded isle of Marajo with reed fish traps in its estuaries, countless herds of cattle, giant snakes, crocodiles, jaguars and wild river pigs, and turned south for Para, or Belem as it is also called.

"I crawled up into the pilot house to get a full view of the city from high above. Wheeling over its busy docks, coal barges and many visiting steamers, we landed, completing the first great lap of the long aerial survey of seaplane paths to Argentina."

A HISTORY OF CONNECTICUT INDUSTRY

Released by Manufacturers Association of Connecticut

The Sterling Fibreboard Company, South Coventry

The Sterling Fibreboard company, of South Coventry, organized in October 1925, enjoys the distinction of being the "baby" in Connecticut paper and board manufacturing circles. The mill which was built in 1902 by the Nichols Paper company, has been operated under several ownerships, the last one prior to the present company being the Commonwealth Paper company. The Sterling Fibreboard company realizing that a small single-unit mill could not produce the cheaper grades in sufficient quantity to compete with the larger mills has avoided the mistake of its predecessors by specializing in the better grades suited to a small mill.

The first two years were devoted mainly to experimental work which was carried on by part-time operation. During the past two years sales have shown a gratifying increase which has necessitated the installation of several units of modern machinery. It has also been necessary to build two additions to the mill, as well as a fire-proof stock house.

J. A. De Cew, of New York city, nationally known paper sizing expert, is president of the company, and the experimental work has been carried on under his able supervision.

Products manufactured are: High grade insulating fibres, Sterling variegated fibre, specialties and Sterling matrix papers. Sales on all grades with the exception of matrix papers are directed from South Coventry. The matrix paper sales are handled by Henry W. Sutphin, of the Sutphin Paper company, No. 439 Lafayette street, New York, N. Y.

The present officers are: J. A. De Cew, president; Henry H. Sutphin, vice president; Herman Wunderlich, treasurer; B. M. De Cew, secretary.

This Woman In 4 Weeks Lost 19 Pounds of Fat

Here's a letter written October 21, 1929, by Mrs. Fred Barringer of Lewiston, Montana, that ought to be read by every overweight woman in America.

"Gentlemen: I first saw your advertisements in a Billings, Montana, paper and decided to try Kruschen Salts.

I started taking them every morning as directed as I was very much overweight and wanted to reduce.

I had tried going on a diet but would get so hungry that my diet would not last long, so I decided to give "Kruschen Salts" a fair trial. The day I started to take them I weighed 256 lbs. and at present, which has been just four weeks, I weigh 239 lbs. And I must say, I feel much better. Kruschen Salts had a decided effect upon the quantity of food I took and stimulated my desire to greater activity.

I have recommended Kruschen Salts to many of my friends, in fact, have a number of them taking Kruschen Salts.

May all large people, both men and women, who want to reduce in an easy way, give Kruschen Salts a fair trial. I am sure it will convince any one."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts four weeks costs but 85c at any drugstore in America.

V. F. W. STATE BOARD TAKING UP AVIATION

Maj. Gen. Morris B. Payne of New London was appointed chairman of a special committee on Citizen Military Training camp activities and Joseph Perrone, also of New London, was selected as a member of a special committee on aviation at a meeting of the council of administration, Connecticut department, Veterans of Foreign Wars, at Meriden Monday night. The state department intends to go extensively into the subject of aviation and it will be the duty of the committee to devise a program.

Tentative plans call for the holding of air meets by the state posts during the fall, with prizes for the winners of the various events. It is also planned to have the various posts arrange for painting the name of the towns on buildings for the guidance of aviators. The New Haven railroad has offered the Veterans of Foreign Wars the use of the roofs of all its depots for the painting of such signs and it is expected that one of the first things the aviation committee will do will be to take a vote on the acceptance of the offer.

Mr. Perrone was named as a member of the council of administration.

It was announced that posts throughout the state, would open their rooms and furnish an attendant to assist veterans in applying for compensation and pension under the provisions of the recently adopted pension amendment to the World war veterans' act. The amendment provides that any honorably discharged ex-service man who served 90 days or more during the World war and who may be suffering from disability as defined by the proper authorities, not the result of his own willful misconduct, even though such disability was not received during the war, is entitled to receive disability allowance at the following rates: 25 per cent disability, $12 per month; 50 per cent, $18 per month; 75 per cent, $24, and total permanent disability, $40 per month.

The bill provides that except in the event of legal proceedings, no claim agent or attorney, except the recognized representatives of the American Red Cross, the American Legion, Disabled American Veterans, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars, shall be recognized in the presentation of any claims made under the terms of the amendment.

FORM COUNTY REPUBLICAN CLUB WITH ROGERS GUEST OF HONOR

Lieut.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers and Congressman Richard P. Freeman, both New London men, were guests of honor Wednesday at a dinner conference of republican town committee chairman and vice-chairmen of this county at Thames tavern, Gales Ferry, where Mr. Rogers was hailed with enthusiasm as the republican candidate for governor and a county republican club was organized.

Congressman Freeman, who will be a candidate for renomination, was given assurance of hearty support, as was also County Sheriff George H. Bradford, who was also a guest and will be before the voters for continuance in his office.

The state central committee was represented by Miss Katherine M. Byrne of Putnam, vice-chairman, and Clarence Willard of New Haven, secretary, while J. Henry Roraback, chairman of the state central committee, sent a letter of regret that other business engagements kept him from attending.

Before the gathering of 40, which included 15 women members of the town committees, got down to the business of the day, they were regaled by Mine Host Hayes with a fine clambake that included steamed clams, sword fish, lobster and watermelon, with the usual accompaniments, and after this had been disposed of Judge Daniel M. Cronin of New London, who was chairman, cordially welcomed the gathering and William L. Appley of New London, secretary of the committee, read the letter from Mr. Roraback.

Enthusiastic applause greeted Lieutenant-Governor Rogers when Chairman Cronin introduced him as the next governor of Connecticut, and Mr. Rogers expressed his appreciation of this gathering of the republican leaders of the county, which indicated a proper spirit of citizenship, as they came together to discuss the best means for good government in the state and in their local situations. New London county, he said, would rank with the other counties of the state in the activity of its republican organizations and the spirit of co-operation which this gathering showed was most encouraging.

Mr. Rogers commended Congressman Freeman for the work he has done in Washington, where his record shows that his voting is absolutely correct, and he spoke of the long and successful career of Sheriff Bradford, for whom he predicted a continuance in office when he comes before the voters in the fall.

Miss Byrne was the next speaker, who was introduced by Chairman Cronin with a complimentary reference to her ability in enlisting the support of the republican women of the state, to which Miss Byrne responded that it was pleasant to bask in the republican atmosphere in which she found herself in Mr. Rogers' bailiwick. The lieutenant-governor, she said, has been around the state and has captured the affections of the people wherever he has appeared. He has learned his craft in the service of the state and any ticket he heads deserves a full measure of success.

All over the state, Miss Byrne continued, there is to be seen a quiet, deep sense of party progress. The thinking electorate wants a continuance of republican government for the welfare of the state and it would be an economic crime to turn this over to those absolutely incapable of handling it. She predicted republican victory at the polls, but said it meant work for all together and she wanted to be considered a friendly member of the county organization and to be used as such.

Congressman Freeman, introduced as an active republican with long years of faithful and distinguished service, which could continue as long as he desired, drew applause when he responded that the house had stood loyally back of the president of the United States.

The congressman went on to say that congress had passed a tariff bill, from which prosperity would result, and had also passed a proper pension bill. We are here, he said, to honor a distinguished citizen of New London, a man he had known since boyhood and one who was a gentleman of kindliness and courtesy. Lieutenant-Governor Rogers has made good throughout the state. He carries a level head, and a youthful spirit, is dependable and absolutely human.

This gathering, said Congressman Freeman, has for its honored guest the next governor of Connecticut, a prediction that was met with an enthusiastic burst of applause.

Mr. Willard, secretary of the state central committee, followed with a brief talk along organization lines, in which he spoke of the importance of local committees looking after the making of new voters and of the increasing importance of the foreign vote, so-called.

He congratulated the county upon the large proportional representation at this meeting, declaring that this showed the county was on its toes ready to go for republican victory, and that it could have no finer incentive for the support of the republican state ticket than it has now.

P. Leroy Harwood of New London spoke for the formation of a county organization which he said was especially fitting in the interest of a son of New London and of the county.

County Republican Club.

Upon motion of J. M. Mallon, Jr., of New London, the meeting voted the formation of the New London County Republican club and Chairman Cronin named William L. Appley of New London, George Charbonneau of Norwich and Mrs. Maud Manning of Stonington as the nominating committee to bring in a slate of officers.

While the committee was out Albert J. Bailey of Norwich spoke in favor of a county-wide meeting some time in August and his suggestion was endorsed by Mrs. Frank A. Mitchell of Norwich.

Officers Elected.

Mr. Apley presented the report for the nominating committee which was accepted and officers elected as follows:

President, Daniel M. Cronin, New London; vice presidents, Albert J. Bailey, Norwich; Mrs. Maud Manning, Stonington; Mrs. George D. MacDonald, Lebanon; treasurer and financial secretary, John M. Mallon, Jr., New London; recording secretary, Mrs. Alice Roode, Lisbon; with the advisory committee consisting of the state central committee members and the county commissioners.

President Cronin thanked the gathering for the honor of making him president and upon motion of Mr. Harwood the officers were empowered to arrange for a gathering in August.

After a rising vote of thanks to the guests of honor, including the representatives of the state central committee, the gathering adjourned about 4 o'clock.

HUNTINGTON HEIRESS AND HER HUSBAND HIDE

A dispatch from Logansport, Ind., reads: Seeking relief from wide publicity that has followed them since their marriage four months ago in London, Alfred Cecil Durban, 23-year-old former London newsboy, and his bride, Mrs. Vivienne Huntington Durban, 28-year-old reputed heiress, have taken up residence in a two-room furnished apartment here.

They came here from Ontario, where the young husband entered upon his apprenticeship as an electrician. They expect to make Logansport their home.

Durban seeks employment here to complete his apprenticeship.

"Throughout the three months we resided in Toronto we were subjected to continuous publicity so that it became a bore to us," the Durbans declared.

From one of their traveling bags Mr. Durban brought out hundreds of letters that had been received by them from persons who sought gifts from his wife.

The two explained that while Mrs. Durban was reputed to be an heiress, her estate was made up of real estate from which there was but little income.

The bride is the daughter of Charles Pratt Huntington, English army officer, and a granddaughter of the late Daniel D. Pratt, pioneer resident of Logansport.

She is a descendant of Governor Samuel Huntington, one of the signers of the Declaration, whose home at Norwich Town is now the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Carl M. Welte.

SHOWS BUSINESS SPOTTY THROUGHOUT THE STATE

Business in Connecticut continued to be spotty during June, 1930, increases in a few lines being offset by decreases in many others, according to the monthly business survey of the Connecticut chamber of commerce conducted in collaboration with the leading local chambers of commerce throughout the state. A substantial gain in savings bank deposits in several communities was in evidence, deposits in Willimantic being 42 per cent greater than in June, 1929 and those in Naugatuck having increased 42 per cent over the same period.

Building permits issued in the leading construction centers decreased on the whole 13 per cent in number and 27 per cent in value compared with the permits issued in June, 1929. The number of real estate sales was 26 per cent less than those of June a year ago. Total carloadings in 14 Connecticut cities decreased 16 per cent, the totals being for June, 1930, 11,425 and for June, 1929, 13,748.

Electricity consumption on the whole increased 1.3 per cent, while gas consumption was 2 per cent greater. Industrial conditions remained far below the level of June, 1929; retail conditions, while reflecting a continued depression, in many communities were slightly better than in May, 1930. Post office receipts decreased to some extent in practically every community reporting, the average being a 3 per cent loss as compared with June, 1929.

PILOT AHEARN MEETS DEATH IN FALL IN NEW JERSEY; FLEW HERE YEAR AGO

TETERBORO AIRPORT, N. J., July 16.—(AP)—Roy Ahearn of Ware, Mass., was killed in a crash today after the left wing of his monoplane fell off while he was doing an outside loop.

Ahearn was practicing stunts which he was to have performed at the Bergen County Elks' air circus for the benefit of crippled children.

A pilot at the field said that the plane was up about 10,000 feet when the steep climb tore the wing loose. It struck the flyer in the head, apparently knocking him unconscious, and he fell, unable to free himself from his ship.

The wing fell on the Teterboro Golf club course and the fuselage imbedded itself in a swamp. The body was thrown clear of the wreckage.

Pilot Ahearn, representing the Red Wing Flying Service, Inc., was stationed in Norwich for three weeks in June in 1929, making his headquarters at Beebe's aviation field on the Gallows Hill road between Norwich and Taftville. He came here heralded as one of the best licensed pilots in the country, having made a record of flying hours.

Pilot Ahearn established the record of taking up more Norwich persons than any other pilot in a like period and during the many flights here had only one mishap. A deaf and dumb Norwich youth, who sought to regain his faculties through a trip to a great height, was a passenger at the time. While they were flying over the Greeneville district Pilot Ahearn noticed that his gas supply had become low and was compelled to make a forced landing but without injury to the passengers or damage to the plane.

While making passenger flights at Groton about the time that he was in Norwich, the pilot found himself in difficulties when he allowed an unlicensed parachute jumper, who was a youth, to do the parachute stunt from his plane. Officials of the state aviation commission interviewed the boy and the pilot, but later the matter was dropped. Pilot Ahearn was allowed to keep his flying license and no action was taken against the boy.

HORNSBY AT LOSS TO KNOW WHY HE IS CALLED A TROUBLE-MAKER

By PAUL MICKELSON

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

CHICAGO, July 16 —(AP)— Rogers Hornsby, for 16 seasons one of the brightest stars under baseball's big top, wonders if it pays to mind one's own business after all.

As the "Rajah" completed a short workout with his crippled legs on Wrigley field today, preparatory to rejoining the championship Cubs at Philadelphia, July 24, he reviewed his baseball career from the day he came out of Texas until the present to determine why the irritating label of "trouble-maker" had been plastered after his name.

"I can't understand why they call me a troublemaker or why someone started the report that I had turned out to be a troublemaker for the Cubs," Hornsby said. "Maybe it has been because I minded my own business. Maybe baseball people can't understand a fellow of my type. Maybe it doesn't pay to mind your own business after all.

"You know ever since I started to play baseball way back before the war. I have made it a big rule to do two things—give the best of my ability and to keep my nose out of the other fellow's affairs. I believe I have done that. Yet year after year someone starts a report that I am again a big troublemaker and that the team I am with is shot full of dissension because of me. I don't worry about it. I have been in the game too long not to know that worrying doesn't get base hits. But it does puzzle me."

With that the "Rajah" recalled his days with the St. Louis Cardinals, the Giants, the Boston Braves and his first season with the Cubs last year.

"I minded my own business while I was with the Cards until I was made manager and then I had to make the players' business my own at times. I gave every man a chance to say what he believed. Then when I helped the Cards win a world's title Sam Breadon and I had a dispute not over baseball but over a contract and money. I told him I was in the game to make money and that the Giants would pay me what I wanted. I was sold to the Giants.

"With the Giants I can't recall any arguments. I played good baseball and batted .361. Yet I was awakened one night by reporters who told me I was sent to the Braves. Ever since I have wondered why the Giants let me go. I got along with Manager McGraw first rate although in my customary fashion I kept to myself off the diamond.

"Now a report has come from I don't know where that I have caused trouble among the Cubs. I don't think Manager McCarthy said it. Maybe one of the boys said the club may not need me after all this year because it went along so well after I left. I'm not worried. I'm just puzzled that's all. As long as Mr. Wrigley, Mr. Veeck and Manager Joe McCarthy want me to play baseball for the Cubs, I'll be in there doing the best I can. The Cubs are playing great baseball without me. They are a great bunch of fellows. Brooklyn will be hard to beat but I think the Cubs will do it."

Nothing certain could be determined about Hornsby's physical condition in today's brief workout during which he fielded a few rollers and batted out a few. The cast was removed from his broken left ankle only this week and it is still sore. His right heel, irritated by a bony growth since last fall, appears definitely healed, however, and Hornsby has been more concerned with it than the broken ankle.

"I use my right foot in batting" he said "while the left is a pivotal point only, if the right is healed as I think it is, I can get along with a weakened left."

He will workout daily until July 23 and then depart for Philadelphia to join the Cubs.

REDS CONTINUE TO HIT AND BEAT GIANTS AGAIN

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP) — The Cincinnati Reds kept up their timely swatting today to win the odd game of the series of three from the Giants, 8 to 1.

After a wobbly start. Red Lucas settled down and kept the Giants away from the plate except in the seventh, when they scored their lone run on three singles. Cuccinello and Walker again led the Reds in effective hitting. The former hit a double with the bases full and Walker cracked out a homer with two aboard.

In the last two games Walker has reached first base ten consecutive times on five hits, four passes and an error, and has scored eight runs.

ATHLETICS HIT LYONS HARD TO BEAT WHITE SOX

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—Although they knocked Bob Grove out of the box early in the contest today, the White Sox dropped the first game of the series to Philadelphia 14 to 7. The league leaders hopped onto Ted Lyons in the second inning and scored seven runs, but McKain, who finished for the Sox, pitched well except in the last two innings.

SIMCOX BLANKS IDEALS WITH 3 SCATTERED HITS

Tommy Simcox, ancient Royal moundsman, added another to his twenty year old record last night, shutting out the Ideals 6 to 0 in the daily City league contest at the Academy campus. He allowed but three scattered hits in the seven innings of play and during the course of the evening whiffed an even half dozen.

Shaw was on the hill for the Bernard clan and yielded a total of 12 bingles in the seven frames. Backed by good support, he held the Royals to a lone run until the final frame. In the seventh, however, the winners broke through with a barrage of bingles, which, aided by a hit bateman and an error, yieled a total of five runs.

The first Royal run came in the third and was the result of a single, a walk and Fontaine's double into left.

Next to Simmy, Moroweky and Eddie Hamil were the best players of the evening. The Royal first sacker led the offense with a double and two singles and Shorty turned in a sweet all around game. He handled seven chances without a slip, collected a hit and stole home in the seventh.

Tonight's Game

Big game tonight. The league leading Thermos Bottlers go to work at the campus this evening meeting the Italian club in their only scheduled appearance for the week. The latter outfit has not shown in nearly two weeks and is raring to go. The Italians, who have been idle because of two rainy nights, are in fourth place in the league standing with two wins and as many defeats. By defeating the Hastedt combine this evening they can cause a terrible shakeup in the loop standing. A Thermos defeat will send the Citizens into first place and topple the present leaders into a near triple tie with the Royals and Italian club.

Anxious to cop off the big game, Manager Mike DeFronzo has tuned his favorite hurler, Lefty Lucier, to a high pitch and is confident of a big night. Bill Hastedt will make it a fast ball pitchers battle by sending Mike Nickerson to the Thermos hill.

The Thermos team, to date, has won five games and lost one.

PIRATES SPLIT WITH BRAVES IN TWIN PROGRAM

BOSTON, July 16—(AP)—Pittsburgh secured an even break in today's double header with the Braves by taking the second game, 9 to 5, after Boston won the opener with a two run ninth inning rally, 4 to 3.

The Pirates hammered Sherdel and Brandt for seven runs in the fifth and sixth innings of the second game after Grantham and Comorosky had hit home runs in successive times at bat in the fourth inning.

Wally Berger of the Braves made his 25th circuit clout of the season in the fifth inning of the nightcap Score:

MANDELL IS SLIGHT FAVORITE FOR TONIGHT

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—For the second time in two years Cagey Sammy Mandell, debonair king of the lightweight clan, will set up his crown tomorrow night for another eager youngster to shoot at in the ring at the Yankee stadium.

Two years ago the challenger was Jimmy McLarnin, the belting Irish kid, who struggled for fifteen desperate and despairing rounds to corner the fleet, skillful champion. This time the youngster is Al Singer, sleek Jewish boy, the Bronx believes will develop into another Benny Leonard. But once more the craft and experience of Mandell, the Italian, is favored over the sheer physican powers of youth.

This time, however, the margin of superiority conceded Mandell in advance is decreasing. Sammy, the shiek of Rockford, Ill., is getting along in years as prize fighters go and his legs are beginning to show the strain of long campaigns in the prize ring. He is having considerable trouble getting down to the weight limit of the class, 136 pounds, and the boys who risk their bankrolls on the happenings in the battle pit are considering this angle of the battle carefully. Sammy is a 6 to 5 favorite but may enter the ring the underdog.

A Challenge

The Versailles Cubs challenge any of the following teams for an out of town game Sunday, July 20: Fitchville, Dayville, Wauregan Greys, Willimantic All Stars, Jewett City, Montville Indies or any other fast team in this part of the state. Any team accepting challenge, call Norwich 617-5 after 4 p. m.

AMBITION PLUS

He was an ambitious man, a man who must always be doing something, either for himself or for his friends. In other words he had that unusual and rare faculty of wanting to work. A friend of his was building a house and day after day he would go over and help his friend in the construction of the building. Besides being ambitious he also had an eye to beauty and took great pride in beautifying the grounds about the new house.

One day his friend was absent from the premises and the ambitious man decided that he would surprise his friend in beautifying the back yard. The first object that jarred on his sense of beauty was an unsightly but yet very necessary little shed-like structure. This structure certainly marred the scenic beauty of the grounds in back of the house, and the view from the rear windows would be greatly enhanced by its removal.

So with the fire of ambition in his eye he set to work. His hammer cracked merrily against the boards of the building, nails squeaked as they were pulled out and board after board fell to the ground. Within a short time only the skeleton frame of the little structure was standing and then that fell under the rain of blows of the hammer in the hand of this most ambitious man. He packed the lumber in a neat pile and stood off and surveyed the work. It was a decided improvement. He leveled the ground where the structure had once stood. He surely had improved the appearance of the yard and he smiled to himself when he thought of how pleased his friend would be to see what he had done.

So he waited for the friend to come that he might see the pleased expression on his friend's face. Finally he heard his friend arriving and he went to meet him. Taking him by the arm he led him to the rear of the house and standing looking out over the yard he pointed. His friend looked, he looked long and intently, then he turned to the ambitious man and asked:

"Where is it?"

"Gone," said the man, "doesn't it look better?"

"Good Lord, man," said the owner of the house, "Don't you know that this is an unimproved street. What am I to do now?"

The ambitious man didn't know but he was still proud of his work.

SECOND GAME OF TAFTVILLE SERIES ON SUNDAY

Local interest is keyed to a high pitch over the current series between the J. B. Martin and Army-Navy, the second game of which will be played next Sunday at Martin field.

It is rumored that the manager of the Army and Navy in a vain attempt to stem the Velvetmakers has taken the rubber band off his bank roll and gone out and secured the services of a leading college twirler, the identity of whom he refuses to disclose. He admitted, however, after the game last week that the lucky breaks rather than incompetent pitching decided the contest.

Local critics and a few of the Army and Navy's staunch supporters have it, that dumb base running on the part of the service team turned the tide in favor of the Velvetmakers. They also attribute the close score of last week's game to the fact that the boys from the upper village played "over their heads." Many of the supporters go so far as to predict a decisive victory for J. B. Martin in the next encounter.

ANNUAL INVITATION GOLF TOURNEY OPENS TODAY WITH 150 ENTRIES

Over 150 golfers will tee off today in the qualifying round of the annual invitation tournament of the Norwich Golf club for which the Noyes Trophy is the prize emblematic of the title. From all appearances the field this year will not only be a record field but it will also be the fastest one that has ever competed for the trophy. Many of the leading amateurs of the state are entered and the championship flight this year will be productive of brilliant golf.

The qualifying will be in twosomes starting at 8 o'clock this morning and continuing until late afternoon. The first and second round match play starts on Friday with the semi-finals and finals in all flights except the championship sixteen being played on Saturday. The 36-hole finals of the championship flight will be played on Sunday with 18 holes in the morning and 18 in the afternoon.

Among the players arriving Wednesday was Max Kaesche of Ridgewood, N. J., defending champion. Kaesche played a practice round in the late afternoon but kept no card as he was trying out the greens and fairways, playing a number of balls and replaying many of his shots. The champion has been playing brilliant golf this season and his shots yesterday were straight and true with good distance. He found the greens exceptionally fast and tricky, a factor that may make the qualifying scores run high. Those who played the course Wednesday complained of the fastness of greens and many of the putts were running by the cups.

Louis Stoner of Hartford was another who arrived yesterday for a practice round. Stoner is playing a better game than last year and expects to make a much better showing than in the tournament last year.

Dow Ahern of Willimantic, youthful sensation, played a practice round and returned with a card of 74, one stroke over his practice round of Tuesday. Ahern is regarded as one who is likely to upset many of those in the first flight and is a favorite to be medalist. Bob Wilson of New Bedford arrived late in the afternoon and played a few holes.

Among the young entries in the tournament are three Willimantic youths, Bob and Bill Mustard and Russell Potter. Bill Mustard playing with the Willimantic Rotarians yesterday shot a 81. Potter had a 96 while Bob Mustard had a card of 105. The boys are only about 15 years of age.

Nothing has been heard from W. K. Lanman twice winner of the cup or Sam Wilcox, twice runner up in the tournament. It is possible that this pair of contenders will arrive today. Last year Lanman was one of the late arrivals getting in just in time to qualify. Bud Gegehan of Middletown and Bobby Grant of Wethersfield will arrive today for the qualifying round.

There is some speculation as to the medalist for today with the favorites being Kaesche, Ahern, Grant, Geogeban and Stoner, with Ahern having a slight edge as his rounds of 73 and 74 in practice show that he is playing hot golf. But as is the case in any tournament some unknown may slip in with a low score to take the honors from the favorites.

The pairings for the tournament will be made this evening and will be posted on the board at the club with the starting times and will also be published in this paper on Friday morning.

After the qualifying play today there will be a banquet in the Norwich Inn for the participants of the tournament.

CUBS AND ROBINS BREAK EVEN IN DOUBLEHEADER

BROOKLYN, July 16.—(AP)—Brooklyn's Robins maintained their three game hold on first place in the National league today by beating the Chicago Cubs, 5 to 3, in the second game of a doubleheader after Pat Malone had humbled the league leaders in the first contest, 6 to 4. A capacity crowd of 31,000 saw the exciting start of the important five game series.

The even break left the Robins where they can not be displaced from the lead in the remaining three contests.

The occasion marked the season's debut of thrown pop bottles at Ebbets field with Gabby Hartnett as principal target. The crowd held him responsible for the fact that Del Bissonette, Brooklyn first baseman, was knocked out at the plate in a close play late in the first game although players reported that he had struck his head on the ground in sliding. An argument between the rival pitchers, Root and Luque after the Chicago hurler had dusted off the Cuban, was choked off just before firsts began to fly.

Luque weakened in the closing innings of the second game but had enough left to hold the Cubs in the ninth inning after Stephenson and Hartnett had hit home runs. The Robins did most of their hitting early in the game. Malone was out in front all through the opener and allowed the Robins only five hits. These were bunched sufficiently for the Brooklyn team to make the issue close.

ELKS SWAMP Y. M. C. A. IN ONE-SIDED GAME

The Elks swamped the Y. M. C. A. in Wednesday's Junior league game, 19 to 1. The winners made the most of their opportunities while the "Y" could do little with men on the base paths. The Elks gathered 15 hits and turned them into 19 runs, while the "Y" was only able to score a single counter on 9 hits.

LaVarge twirled for the Elks and although hit fairly hard at times was invincible with men on the bases, turning them back several times with the bases full. Where the Elks especially outclassed their rivals was in long-distance hitting, collecting three doubles and three triples along with their collection of one-base hits.

The "Y" scored their lone run in the first, while the Elks tallied three in the first, five in the second, one in the third, two in the fourth and eight in the fifth.

LaVarge led the hitters with a single, a double and a triple out of four trips to the plate, while Bamber collected two doubles and a single and Butkiewicz of the "Y" three singles, each out of four attempts.

Tonight's Game.

The first real crucial game in the Junior Twilight league thus far is scheduled for tonight at the Duwell field when the strong Rotary nine meets the Duwells. Each team has won every game they have played to date, the Duwells having three and the Rotary two games to their credit. If the Duwells win tonight they will be strongly entrenched at the top of the league, while if the Rotary wins, they, too, will be right on top. Probable batteries are Stephanik and Kos for the Duwells and Caron and McKenna for the Rotary. The game is scheduled to start at 6.30 p. m. sharp.

FISK TEAM CLINCHES FLAG IN JEWETT CITY LEAGUE

(Special to The Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, July 16 — With Derda on the slab allowing but three hits the Fisk team had an easy time clinching the pennant in the Jewett City Twilight league, tonight, by winning from the Kaceys by the score of 14 to 1. YANKEES SCORE VICTORY ON TWO HOME RUNS

ST. LOUIS, July 16—(AP)—Two home runs plus the fine pitching of Southpaw Ed Wells gave the New York Yankees a 2 to 1 victory over the series today. Harry Rice hit one homer to give the Yankees a tie in the fifth inning while Lou Gehrig won the game in the seventh with his 24th circuit blow of the year.

Wells allowed only five hits and the only St. Louis run came in the second inning. With two out, Schulte tripled and Melillo brought him in with a double. Wally Stewart did some good pitching, holding New York to seven hits, but got no backing from his mates. It was the sixth straight defeat for the Browns.

CLEVELAND, July 16.—(AP)— The Cleveland Indians and the Washington Senators split even in a doubleheader today with both contests lopsided. The Senators won the first, 10 to 4, and dropped the second, 13 to 6.

Alvin Crowder in the first game annexed his sixth victory in eight starts for Washington. The Senators made 16 hits. Cronin, Harris and Spencer each cracked out three.

Milburn Shoffner's pitching was too much for the Senators in the second game. He held them runless until the ninth when they made their six.

The Indians collected 13 hits, Earl Averill knocking out a homer and three singles.

WESTERLY

WESTERLY YOUTH SERIOUSLY INJURED IN AUTO ACCIDENT

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 16 — Charles Campbell, son of Rep. and Mrs. Clifford W. Campbell of Westerly narrowly escaped death and his companion, Byron Hiscox, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Hiscox, was probably fatally injured in an auto accident at Misquamicut beach late today. The car in which they were riding along Atlantic avenue suddenly became unmanagable, skidded around in the road and turned turtle in the ditch. Campbell was thrown clear, but Hiscox was pinned beneath the wreckage.

Cottagers of the vicinity and other motorists rushed to the scene and after some trouble succeeded in lifting the car off of Hiscox. He was given first aid while an emergency call was sent for the Westerly Sanitary corps ambulance.

Driven by Councilman Archie Meikle the ambulance made a record run to the beach six miles from town and took both youths to the Margaret Edward Anderson hospital. Campbell was found to be but slightly bruised and cut, while Hiscox had suffered grave internal injuries.

Neither youths could give an explanation for the accident. They had just left their summer homes for a run to town and gone but a few rods when calamity overtook them. Both are graduates of Westerly high school. Hiscox is a sophomore at R. I. State college. Campbell is to enter college this fall.

To Discuss Mosquito Problem.

Selectmen of Stonington will meet tomorrow evening with representatives of the Watch Hill summer colony and of the Misquamicut fire district to discuss the mosquito problem. The summer residents launched the movement and are now seeking financial aid from Stonington and the town of Westerly.

Experts from the Connecticut Agricultural college have made a survey of the country and swamps included and estimated the cost as about $15,000.

Watch Hill residents are ready with their share of the money which will be expended through the Watch Hill Improvement society, but it is believed the work will be useless unless the town of Stonington participates in the campaign and cleans up the Lower Pawcatuck section. Similar action is hoped for from the town of Westerly in the Misquamicut section.

After several weeks of waiting the asphalt top dressing for the new surface of West Broad street, Pawcatuck arrived today. The street will be resurfaced from the end of the Pawcatuck river bridge to the junction of Liberty street.

Work was begun on the north side of the street to allow as little traffic conjestion as possible. One side will be completed before the other side is begun. The resurfacing is the final part of the street improvement job which included setting back the curbing to permit a wider thoroughfare, new curbs, new street lights and the elimination of telephone poles.

Plans have been made by Judge Oliver H. Williams of the Third District court of Westerly and Judge William A. Wilcox of the Stonington town court to leave Westerly this week by motor for Point Judith to witness some of the triangular course trial races of yachts entered for the international America's cup to be the contender with Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock.

On Wednesday the contractor on the recently rebuilt Rhode Island state highway known as Granite street in Westerly was engaged in placing the last top coat dressing of sand on the asphalt road surface. Since the past week-end the street has been open to traffic on evenings and from now on it will be open for traffic daytimes on this .97 miles of length and an added link of excellent road construction on the Boston Post road or Federal road U. S. Route 1. Already many motorists and taxi drivers are using the newly built highway in going to Watch Hill via Granite street, East avenue and the Westerly Watch Hill road.

The week-end excursion train of eight coaches on the New Haven railroad, Bridgeport to Boston and return, passed through Westerly shortly before 9 a. m. east-bound and 10 p. m. returning west-bound. The coaches were filled to capacity and proceeded at limited express train speed.

The new green arrow traffic lights for motorists have already been received and installed. At first on Broad street it was located below the series of red, yellow and green semaphore lights and later changed to a position above the top light or in a better position to be observed by motor operators crossing the Pawcatuck river bridge into Westerly and which will permit them to make a right turn on the red light down Main street.

Mr. and Mrs. Floyd K. Young and Lafayette L. Foster of Pawcatuck were visitors the first of the week in New London.

Former Rhode Island Governor William S. Flynn left Westerly Tuesday night to return to his summer home on the shore of Narragansett Bay, near Quonset Point. He was accompanied by his wife.

The Misses Mary L. and Ruth C. Burdick of Westerly were in New London the first of the week to visit with Mrs. Sarah Rogers.

Joseph Keefe of New London was a Tuesday evening business caller in Pawcatuck.

James Burleigh returned to his Providence home on Tuesday after a business trip to Westerly.

Not a White Robin.

A matter of three weeks ago Miss Ruth C. Burdick of Westerly wrote Thornton Burgess, naturalist, of the Springfield, Mass., broadcasting station, relative to what she considered a white robin and which was observed by Mr. and Mrs. William R. Chapman of Westerly as it ran across the Watch Hill road. At the regular broadcasting period of the nature program put on the air last week "Mr R. C. Burdick of Westerly, R. I." was informed by radio that his letter had been received.

Naturalist Burgess declared in his estimation that the bird seen was not a white robin of the robin family for if it had been, the statement continued "it would have flown across the Watch Hill road and not run," according to the habits of this specie of bird.

A special express car of the American Railway Express Agency, Inc., arrived at the Westerly freight yards and its contents of four automobiles was unloaded on Tuesday for J. Frederick Byers of Pittsburgh, Pa., who will occupy their summer home at Cedarhurst, Aquidneck avenue,

CITY VISITOR CRABBING GETS MONSTER TURTLE

Pat Long has always lived in a city and worked in a factory and never had a vacation. The city is New York, where it is so hot you can fry an egg on Fifth avenue. So Pat thought he would come to Noank, pay a visit to William Franklin and spend two weeks where a breeze from the salt water is blowing and an army blanket is put on the bed every night.

He came Tuesday and the New Yorker thought he would go after blue shell crabs at Palmer cove. It was his first time with the crab net. Pulling an oar as the sun was shining on Elm street, in the row boat, "Come Again" was the white-skinned young man from Father Knickerbocker's city. In the cove soon were crabs to the right and the left of him. Alfred Dunn was with him to show the city chap the place. Making a scoop and getting a blue shell crab he gave an Indian war cry. Never did he see anything like it. He was doing well and in one hour had the bottom of the boat loaded with crabs. Then making a deep scoop he found the net getting heavy and Alfred said, "You must have the record big crab!" "Gee some heavy!" Pat said. He soon got the mystery catch on top of the water and found it was a monster snapper turtle, full of life. Scotty Dunn was heartbroken to see such a turtle, instead of a crab. Putting the scoop net in the bottom of the boat, to light up his corn cob pipe and reaching for the net again he found the handle gone, where the turtle had bit it off. That ended the crabbing and the only thing left to do was to beat it to the North cove, a distance of 1 1-3 miles with a good catch of crabs. Reaching the dock at a late hour in the afternoon the two fellows started to count the crabs and it took 25 minutes; the city chap had 258 and one snapper turtle. They filled a wash boiler and a wash tub. He had his first meal of Palmer cove crabs and gave plenty away. Mr. Long's skin was not white any more but brown as a cocoanut from the sun.

He went down to the village and put on the scales the turtle that spoiled his scoop net and fun. The snappy animal weighed 29 1-2 lbs. It had T. A. B. on its shell that was 7 1-2 inches across. It must be about 101 years old and some fellows had a good joke on Mr. Long going after crabs and catching a turtle but he took it in good part. How did that turtle get into the salt water? Did some boys throw him there, or did he find himself on shore and go to live in salt water? The finder will take the monster turtle out in the woods and give it a chance to get a smell of the fresh air again, better than killing it. He things too that he caught the largest crab for one was about 9 1-2 inches from claw to claw and across the back it was 5 3-4 inches. The shell will be given to Rudy Packer and a picture of Grossman's market will be painted on it.

Smiling Pat cannot get over Noank being so cool and with such good air to sleep in; he is enjoying his vacation great. His next stunt is to go after round clams and see if he can beat the record of Leo Harris, 175 clams in one afternoon.

One thing he cannot do is swim, because he has always lived in the city and had to work. But before his time is up he is going down to the dock where the fellows go in swimming and jump overboard and learn to swim—that is the only way to do it quick. He told Alfred Dunn to come down to New York and he would take him to a baseball game with the Yankees playing, for he knows Babe Ruth and will get the visitor a chance to shake the hand of the only home run hitter in North America. Also he knows several other players. Good Looking Dunn said he will go down to that city and take in the ball game. That sure did please the city chap to pay back what Dunn did for him while he is staying in the village. He says he will never forget his first vacation in a small village where more is doing than in a city. He is out in a boat to watch the fishermen unload their catch, he can go crabbing and claming and has one more week to go. He says will enjoy it trying to beat Leo Harris' clam record.

Pride Impels the Finest Quality

IN 1646 the shoemakers of Boston, provoked by "much bad work produced by their craft," petitioned "Ye Governor of Ye Bay Colonie" that "all boots might be alike made well." So began America's pride in Craftsmanship.

Pride in the production of the finest Quality still lives. It is the spirit upon which in 1874 at Manchester, New Hampshire, Roger G. Sullivan founded 7-20-4 —now the largest strictly hand-made cigar industry in the World.

Quality workmanship and the finest tobaccos have been traditional with 7-20-4 since its beginning. It is the same spirit today, after fifty-six years of public confidence—which refuses to lower its standard of manufacture at the sacrifice of the finest Cigar Quality.

We cordially invite you to visit our factory

PERIOD OF SHORT SELLING FAILED TO HALT THE BULL FACTION IN MARKET

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)— Stocks easily rode out a squall of short selling today and the bull faction piloted the market to net gains of one to three points in a broad list of issues.

Trading, although reduced in volume, was particularly active in the motor and oil shares, led by General Motors, Chrysler, and Standards of New Jersey and New York. Most of the day's net declines seemed to be the result of profit taking, which was especially noticeable in American Telephone, off 3 1-2 points after yesterday's advance of nearly 9.

The irregularity of Tuesday's movements emboldened the bear crowd, especially in the early and mid-day dealings. Pressing the advantage gained in the lower opening which reflected further profit-taking, the shorts sold rather steadily during the morning and were instrumental in breaking prices one to four points. It was soon evident, however, that strong resistance was being offered and the market turned extremely dull. The bulls brought the list out of its lethargy with an afternoon demonstration which embraced a wide representation of stocks, including the rubbers.

More favorable news from the petroleum fields attracted good buying to the leading producing and refining shares. The daily average output in the past week proved to be the lowest of the year, while gasoline stocks showed a marked decrease. Accumulation went forward in the group, bringing advances of one to three points in Standard of New Jersey, Standard of New York, Sun Oil and Pierce preferred.

Reports that the motor industry would show to fair advantage in the second half year were strengthened by a consideration of the companies' statistical positions which now shows an extensive readjustment to current conditions. General Motors, Chrysler, Marmon and Nash were up 1 1-2 to more than 3 points and were joined in the half half hour by Goodrich Rubber, Goodyear Tire and United States Rubber, which rallied 2 to 3. Some of the accessories, including Electric Auto Lite, also gained strength.

The day in the money markets was enlivened by a $4,000,000 gold shipment to Paris, reflecting the recent advance in the French franc. Imports more than offset the outgoing metal, however, for $5,000,000 was received from Brazil and $1,000,000 from Uruguay.

Call funds renewed at 3 per cent, a half per cent below yesterday's rate. Accommodations were offered in the outside market as low as 1 1-2. Short term time loans hardened, giving evidence of a slightly better demand.

The weekly steel reviews were at some variance. "Iron Age" saw signs of improvement in the scrap and pig iron markets, pointing out that "the situation as a whole shows that lack of definite trend which frequently precedes a turn," however, the publication's composite prices for pig iron and finished steel went to new lows for the year. "Steel," formerly "Iron Trade Review," saw nothing to warrant expectation of decided improvement this month or next, adding that some producers had concluded that no broader commitments for raw materials would be required before September.

Commission houses were inclined to believe that much of the stock buying has been professional and that the advance so far has drawn a limited outside following, with the inference that technical movements in both directions were possible if not probable, pending a change in business.

Industrial favorites displayed a quiet strength and made the best average gains. DuPont, A. M. Byers, American Rolling Mill, Hershey, United Aircraft and Worthington Pump advanced two to three points, while General Electric and Foster Wheeler rose more than a point. U. S. Steel, after dipping nearly two points below the previous close, came back to a new high for the recovery at 164 7-8, up 7-8. Borden, Columbian Carbon, Electric Power and Light, Hershey Chocolate, Northern Pacific, United Aircraft and J. I. Case were well supported. U. S. Industrial Alcohol rose nearly 7.

Wheat was heavy, declining a cent net on forecasts of rain in the northwest, showers in Canada and hedge selling. Corn sold off fractionally. The cotton market here was quiet and irregular, closing at the small variations of a point higher to a point lower.

Foreign exchanges were firm. Sterling cables moved up nominally, while the Canadian dollar established a small premium.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)—An irregular line charted the movement of fixed income securities on the New York stock exchange today. It showed no large spread between the top and bottom but the domestic list, including some of the high grade investment issues, suffered considerably from realizing. The course of the best bonds was characteristic of the previous days of the week with a firm undertone apparent and rising tendencies perceptible in some instances.

More interest was displayed in better grade issues in the industrial group whose progress has not kept pace with standard rails and utilities. The averages reflected the buoyancy demonstrated by leaders today, as contrasted with fractional declines in the averages for rails and utilities. Many of the latter have been dormant this week.

Demand for foreign issues was substantial and some issues were strong.

Anglo-Chilean Nitrate 7s and Lautaro Nitrate 6s, were moderately strong, holding a one point gain on news that the Chilean Nitrate combine designed to stabilize the industry, was virtually assured through favorable action by the Chilean senate. There was a large turnover in Lautaro 6s.

Both South American and European issues were accumulated. Bolivian 7s, and Uruguay 8s gained a point and a half each. Columbia Agricultural Bank 6s, 3, and Chile Mortgage Bank 6s, Chile 6s of March '62, and Peru 6s, were well bought. Among European issues, British 5 1-2s sold at the year's peak. Belgian issues were active and, with French and Italian government bonds, held a firm trend. Canadian 4 1-2s reached a new high. Australian bonds were in demand. The 4 1-2 per cent issues gained one point. Austrian 7s were a soft spot in the European list, touching a new low. Brazilian issues were weak.

Stock privilege issues were irregularly lower fluctuating with stocks. American Telephone 4 1-2s, lost 1 1-2 points of its 5 point gain of yesterday. Railroad convertibles eased fractionaly. Among amusement issues, Loew's 6s, ex-rights rose 3-4 of a point, Shubert 6s gained one while Pathe warrant 7s, sagged 3 points.

Narrow fluctuations marked the movement of rail bonds, with a slightly easier tone prevailing at the close. Atchison 4s, prominent legal issue, and Union Pacific 4s both lost ground. Missouri Pacific issues were heavily traded and advanced. Reading company 4 1-2s sold at a new high for the year, as did Northern Pacific lien 4s.

Progress among industrials was apparent in the good gains made by Liggett and Myers 7s, McCrory Steel 5 1-2s, Otis Steel 6s Sinclair Pipe Line 5s, and Armour and company 5 1-2s. Several new highs were established on the day's movement. Certainteed 5 1-2s rose nearly three points. Sugar company issues sought lower ground as sugar futures were depressed.

Treasury issues yielded as much as 1-4 of a point in dull trading and all U. S. governments closed lower except Liberty fourth 4 1-2, which were firm.

Treasury Balance

WASHINGTON, July 16—(AP)—Treasury receipts for July 14 were $7,665,445.22; expenditures $13,812,704.66; balance $219,343,267.09.

The New York Federal Reserve bank today reported imports of $6,000,000 in gold, of which $5,000,000 came from Brazil, and $1,000,000 from Uruguay. Exports amounted to $4,000,000 taken for France.

THE CURB MARKET

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)— Curb stocks generally closed higher today, although trading was less active, and some irregularity cropped out, coincident to bear raids on the big board. Total sales aggregated 524,900 shares.

Some of the high price or closely held issues recorded wide gains. Duke Power moved up 14 points in a moderate turnover, and in a few odd lot transactions Great Atlantic and Pacific gained 13, and Standard Screw, 17 points. Utilities, while active, failed to make much progress, as a whole. American and Foreign Power warrants gained 2 points, but Electric Bond and Share moved in a narrow range, closing with a gain of 3-4. Associated Gas A lost a point. In the natural gas group, Duquesne gained a point and American Utilities and General Corporation moved up a fraction in active trading. Missouri-Kansas Pipe Line, however, tumbled 4 points, one of the weak features of the session.

Operations for the advance were aggressive in the inter-continental American Airlines. Aviation Corporation of the Americas sold up 4, and closed up 2 1-2. New York Rio and Buenos Aires sold up 2 then lost half its gain.

Anglo-Chilean Nitrate was a strong spot, rising more than 2 points. Another strong spot was Cord corporation which is a holding company for the Auburn Auto group. This stock sold up 2 points to 9 1-4, with a run-up of nearly 15 points in Auburn on the big board.

The financial specialty group, including investment trusts, was mixed. Fireman's Fund was a buoyant feature, gaining 7 points. Transamerica and National Investors mounted about 2 points, while Goldman Sachs and United Founders sagged fractionally.

Oils were largely dull, failing to show the strength which appeared in that group on the stock exchange. Gulf, however, closed nearly 3 higher.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

CHICAGO, July 16.—(AP)—Rain reports from Canada came in the nick of time late today to send wheat values downward after the market had averaged generally higher.

Enlarged unofficial estimates of wheat yields in Kansas and Nebraska were also an evident late advantage to believers in lower prices, Kansas being credited with 175,000,000 bushels and Nebraska 75,000,000 bushels, based on threshing returns. Earlier, the dominating influence was continued uneasiness over prolonged dearth of moisture in spring crop sections both north and south of the Canadian border.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at virtually the day's bottom level, 7-8a1 1-2c a bushel lower than yesterday's finish. Corn closed 1-8a5-8c off, oats 1-2a3-4c down, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 2c.

Despite downturns in hog values, provisions averaged higher on account of a scarcity of offerings.

WALL STREET BRIEFS

NEW YORK, July 16.—(AP)— Louis B. Nutting, president of the Foster Wheeler corporation, manufacturer of steam auxiliary machinery, said today before sailing for Europe that the trend of the company's business continues highly satisfactory and that a substantial gain over last year could be looked for, although the ratio of increase in earnings over 1929 would not be as gratifying as the 100 per cent increase shown last year over 1928.

Wall street hears that negotiations are being conducted between interests affiliated with the J. J. Newberry company and Metropolitan Chain Stores, Inc., looking to a merger of the two companies.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theatre.

Action, romance and suspense are the triple keynotes of "The Arizona Kid," an Alfred Santell all talking production for Fox Movietone which opened a three day engagement at Warner's Broadway yesterday, and which brings the popular Warner Baxter again to the speaking screen in the best performance of his sombreroed career.

From all appearances, this picture will surpass both "In Old Arizona" and "Romance of Rio Grande," the two productions which elevated Baxter to first place in outdoor romantic roles. With every bit of the film taken on the exact locale of the story, "The Arizona Kid" sets a new record in screen history.

Palace Theatre.

Today and tomorrow the Palace theatre continues to present the double feature program which pleased such a large house at its initial showing yesterday. Here is a bill that combines the light, humorous touch with the dramatic, the adventurous with the whimsical. It is an appealing program, this, which brings to this popular local playhouse at one time two such superlative pictures as "Good Intentions," starring Edmund Lowe, Marguerite Churchill and Regis Toomey, and "Children of Pleasure," with Lawrence Gray, Helen Johnson and a supporting cast drawn from the best stage talent.

Each of these pictures has played to large and appreciative audiences by itself in other cities. Together they make an attraction which Norwich theatregoers can ill afford to miss. "Good Intentions" is far and away as fine a melodrama as has been presented here for many months.

Tin Pan Alley, riotous, musical, alluring, is the central theme of "Children of Pleasure." Here is a story involving the love of a Broadway song writer for the daughter of a millionaire. Those who love the music of Irving Berlin and thrill to the story of his own real life romance cannot help but be attracted to a picture which deals with a similar theme. "Children of Pleasure" was directed by Harry Beaumont, well-remembered for "The Broadway Melody," so it just has to be good. It is a smart, tuneful, happy picture.

Beginning Saturday the Palace presents that powerful new drama, "Numbered Men," starring Conrad Nagel and a magnificent assisting cast. More will be told about this great picture very soon.

A hen on a farm at La Porte City, Ia., was missing until its owner discovered her in a high nest in the henhouse, spreading her wings over five tiny kittens and two eggs. In another nest was the mother cat, whipped in the contest for the possession of her babies. After enjoying the unique situation for some time, the owner removed the hen so that the cat might feed her kittens. The hen appeared greatly incensed and refused to "set."

PLAINFIELD

Miss Catherine T. Kirby has returned after spending a week with friends in New Haven.

Mrs. Edward Edge and son, of New Bedford, formerly of Plainfield, were registered at the Lawton Inn this week as was also Albert Levitt of Redding, Conn., yesterday.

Mr. Levitt is seeking the nomination for governor of the state of Connecticut on the Republican ticket. For the past three years he has been professor of law at St. Lawrence university, Brooklyn, N. Y.

The ball game played on the Community Home grounds are attracting large crowds. Tuesday evening a very exciting game was played with the Wauregan team. Plainfield won 3 to 2.

TULANE PLANS TO TRAIN DOCTORS FOR SMALL TOWNS

NEW ORLEANS—(AP)—The trend toward specialising in medicine will be reversed in Tulane university's new $1,250,000 medical building, to be opened next fall for advanced students.

The purpose, says Dean C. C. Bass, is to prepare physicians for small towns. The practice of relying largely on specialists works well in cities, he but handicaps medical men in smaller places.

The Chance of a Lifetime to get "plus value" in Tires

Now is the time to get YOURS

The majority of people who read this advertisement are going to need tires this season; the time to buy them is right now.

Crude rubber is cheap; as a result tire prices are the lowest in history.

You can actually buy at this time the world's best tires for no more money than you used to pay for inferior or unknown tires.

You can buy Goodyear Tires on an extreme low-cost-mileage basis, and that is exactly what smart buyers are doing.

The special advantages to be enjoyed from Goodyear Tires are due to definite Goodyear superiorities in both tread and carcass, the two main parts of a tire.

The Goodyear All-Weather Tread is superior in traction, and everybody wants sure-footedness underwheel.

The Goodyear Supertwist Carcass is superior in vitality and long life, and this means economy and freedom from trouble.

These superiorities are not imaginary; they are real.

Any Goodyear Dealer will be glad to demonstrate the facts.

And the facts unmistakably are: Goodyear Tires do give greater value.

That's why Goodyear sales are going ahead at a rate surpassing any previous record.

That's why impartial investigation shows a nation-wide preference two-and-a-half to thirty times as great for Goodyears as for any other tire.

That's why Goodyear builds annually millions more tires than any other manufacturer in the world.

That's why more people ride on Goodyear Tires than on any other kind!

The dominance enjoyed by Goodyear Tires is not temporary or new—it has flourished for fifteen years strictly on a basis of superior quality.

If you want Goodyear value at bed-rock prices: now is the time to get yours!

POETRY

The Path In The Sky

The woods were dark, and the night was black,
And only an owl could see the track;
Yet the cheery driver made his way
Through the great pine woods as if it were day.

I asked him: "How do you manage to see?
The road and the forest are one to me."
"To me as well," he replied, "and I Can only drive by the path in the sky."

I looked above, where the treetops tall
Rose from the road an ebon wall,
And lo! a beautiful starry lane
Wound as the road wound and made it plain.

And since, when the path of my life is drear
And all is blackness and doubt and fear,
When the horrors of midnight are here below
And I see not a step of the way to go,
Then, ah! then I can look on high
And walk on earth by the path in the sky.

—Amos R. Wells.

Memorabilia

My souvenirs! My souveniors!
What memories they bring
Of what I've said and thought and done
And dreamed—of everything!
Here are those seven locks of hair—
Each worthy of a niche
In memory's shrine—seven lovely girls—
I wonder which is which!

And here's this dried and faded flower—
The girl from whom it came
Was wonderful—I wish that I
Could recollect her name.
And then this scented half-worn glove—
Sweet emblem of romance—
I can't remember now from whom
I swiped it at a dance!

And all these letters—perfumed sheets—
Each bunch with ribbon tied—
Each from a maiden who became
Another fellow's bride!
My souveniors! My souvenirs!
What memories they recall!
I wonder how much I should lose
If I should dump them all!

—Somerville Journal.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

Old Zodiac says.

Absence makes the grass grow longer.

"I'm burning with love for you," he said.

"All right, she replied. "Burn away; you're not registering on my meter."—Tenney Service.

Bingo—Now that you are married I suppose you keep no secrets from your wife.

Stingo—Oh, I didn't before. She was my stenographer.—The Pathfinder.

"Bobby, I hope you didn't tell your daddie that you saw me kissing your sister Ethel last night?"

"I didn't have to. Ethel woke us all up after you'd gone, and told us herself."—Wampus.

"Here, waiter," roared the irate diner in a first-class restaurant, "this chicken soup is full of gravel!"

"Yes, sir," replied the waiter brightly, "it is made from Plymouth Rocks, sir."—N. Y. C. Magazine.

Landlady—Was your bed comfortable?

New Roomer—I think you should warn every one about the pillows.

Landlady—What do you mean?

New Roomer—Someone might get into a pillow fight and get killed.—Exchange.

A Frenchman and an Englishman were having quite an argument at the trading post in Canada.

"Well," said the Englishman, "you don't ever see any halfbreed English."

"The squaws had to draw the line somewhere," replied the Frenchman.—Kansas Sour Owl.

Jones (to his grocer)—You seem angry, Mr. Brown.

Brown—I am. The inspector of weights and measures has just been in.

Jones—Ha, ha! He caught you giving fifteen ounces to the pound, did he?

Brown—Worse than that. He said I'd been giving seventeen.—London Express.

NEW LONDON COUNCIL HEARS SOME OPINIONS ON THOMPSON PRIVILEGE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, July 16—The council committee on administration gave a hearing this evening on proposed amendments to the zoning ordinance in force in this city. By said amendments the construction of wharves and the use to be made of them was involved. Director of Law Troland, who prepared the ordinance and the amendments proposed explained the provisions and said that while the matter covered was new on law he believed that it would prove legal and that it was an attempt to provide a law that would fit the cases of New London. The amendments make two zones within which restrictions are placed. He said he had conferred with various city law officials who had to do with zoning, but that the subject matter of the amendments now proposed was new to them. He had taken every step to clear the way to the preparation of an ordinance that would meet the case of New London.

There was no voice in favor of the ordinance for no one present appeared to be interested in so far as to speak in favor of it.

Nathan Belcher, who owns property adjoining that of Clarence Thompson on Pequot avenue, where a wharf was recently built, opposed the amendments and said that to adopt them would be unfair in the extreme. He did not think the amendments were legal. He said the council discriminated against his property when it granted Thompson the privilege it accorded him and said that Mr. Thompson, on making use of the wharf was violating the zoning ordinance in more particulars tha none. Mr. Thompson was making use of the shore in a residential district for commercial purposes, that he was making the property's use objectionable to adjoining property owners on that a seaplane had been allowed to land there and take passengers, he understood, for hire. The roadway was congested on Sunday so that a traffic officer was called there to keep the street clear. Mr. Thompson had privileges denied under the law to him (Belcher) Mr. Belcher disclaimed any intention of establishing a business that woul dbe in competition with Thompson, but he held that he was entitled to the same privileges that were accorded to his next door neighbor. That was an asset to his property. Mr. Belcher declared that the establishment and use of the Thompson wharf for commercial purposes was a detriment to his property to the extent of $10,000. The city should, if necessary, purchase the Thompson wharf property or the rights to it. He believed Mr. Thompson would be willing to sell it as the reocrn from the property was not such as to make it a paying investment. The rost of the property or the rights attaching to it, would not be great, in the opinion of Mr. Belcher. He referred to the granting of an injunction obtained by the city and the dissolution of the same by Judge Simpson in the superior court, and said it was not certain that the dissolution of the injunction would have been upheld in the supreme court when all the facts were made known.

Crasy Congdon opposed the erection of wharves along the water front on Pequot avenue. He was opposed to the adoption of the amendment. He said he was the owner of property on the avenue, but it was not waterfront property. He agreed with Mr. Belcher that the use of the Thompson property as it is now is a nuisance. The noise there was offensive to neghbors and the place was not a proper one for the uses to which it is put.

Director of Law Troland suggested that the city should purchase upland property along Pequot avenue and thereby control the water front. He said such a move was worthy of consideration.

M. Patrol Officer Gourley testified that when Escuredo was discharged from the service he was given a suit of clothes and Patrol Officer Doten testified that the former service man had civilian clothing in his room at the Y. LICENSE QUESTION IS TABLED BY COUNCIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

WESTERLY, July 16—The Westerly town council, at a special meeting tonight, voted to indefinitely postpone the matter of levying licenses for Sunday openings of store and shops. The motion to table the matter was passed after a delegation of storekeepers, headed by Colonel Arthur M. Nash appeared in protest of the amounts of the proposed fees. The councilmen failed to agree as to whether or not a single license would cover sale of all articles mentioned under the new law or whether licenses for each article or combinations of articles as voted in the law should be required.

At the same time the councilmen became greatly perplexed at the fact revealed by Town Solicitor John Ferguson that a Sunday closing law had always been in effect in Rhode Island but had never been enforced in the beach summer colonies. The mix-up finally resulted in no action, as to the requirement of licenses.

At the same session a delegation of the Westerly Master Plumbers' association appeared in behalf of an amendment to the present plumbing ordinances. Their proposed amendment would require examinations and licenses for Westerly plumbers and would bar the itinerant plumbers from business. The delegation submitted a copy of their proposed amendment and Town Council President Horace E. Burdick informed the callers that the matter would be referred to the town solicitor and an answer given at the August meeting.

The accused was arrested Tuesday afternoon, after a squad of federal prohibition agents raided an alleged speakeasy at No. 166 Norwich avenue, Taftville, and seized 25 cases of home brew beer and a small quantity of alleged liquor. NEW YORK COMPANY ESTABLISHING FLYING FIELD ON COLCHESTER ROAD

Establishment of a flying field at no great distance from Norwich is under way, as a part of the so-called Browning farm on the road between here and Colchester, about a mile west of the Camp Moween road corner, has been leased by the Lenox Flying Service of New York. The deal was closed Wednesday and it is expected that planes will be on the field Saturday and that introduction of the field to the public will be accompanied by a flying circus at the field on Sunday.

The farm of about 360 acres is owned by Capt. B. B. Girden and his brother, two New York men, who have leased about 60 acres to the Lenox Flying Service for their airplane business. The field is reported to be practically ready for use at once, but some improvement is being made by taking down trees and removing stone walls, as well as rolling the ground to make as smooth a landing field as possible.

The plans are to conduct a regular passenger service between here and New York city and also to have a school for beginners. Three training planes will be in use on the field, it is understood.

SERIOUS DISEASE OF ELM TREES FOUND IN OHIO

Henry G. Gilbert of Danielson, who has done much work for the city and town on the local trees, calls attention to the discovery of a new disease of elms and points out that if people in this vicinity notice any such trouble on the elm trees they should notify the city officials or him at once in order that any infestation may be arrested.

The statement concerning the disease which has been furnished by the agricultural experiment station at Wooster, Ohio, is as follows:

A disease of elms known as the Dutch elm disease, which appeared in Holland about 10 years ago and since that time has spread over that country, destroying most of the elm trees, has been found in Ohio. This discovery was made by Curtis May of the department of botany, and plant pathology of the Ohio experiment station. The disease has been found in Cleveland and Cincinnati and at present is confined to relatively few trees. Plant pathologists had been looking for this disease in America for a number of years, but it had not previously been found.

The symptoms of Dutch elm disease are sudden wilting of the leaves of a few branches or over the entire tree, followed by yellowing and dropping of the foliage from the affected parts. The tree may be entirely killed in one summer or it may be a number of years before the disease finally kills it.

The disease is caused by a fungus which, in addition to producing the above symptoms, causes a brownish discoloration of the vascular bundles. The fungus which was cultured from the diseased specimens has been identified by Mr. May and by Dr. Christine Buisman of Holland, now in this country, as the one causing the Dutch elm disease.

No cure is now known for individual trees having the disease. However, it is hoped that the spread of the disease may be prevented or at least restricted by prompt removal and burning of effected trees.

Because of the importance of the elm both as a shade and forest tree it is essential that it be known how widely distributed the trouble may be. Any information regarding dying of elms and specimens from affected trees, if sent to Mr. May, will be greatly appreciated. If the public generally will assist by sending specimens, the work which is going forward at present will be greatly facilitated.

NORWICH COMPANIES PARTICIPATE IN COMBAT PROBLEM; CAMP ENDS SATURDAY

The two Norwich companies of the 192nd Field Artillery, Connecticut National Guard, Battery B, commanded by Lieut. Meredith Lee, and Combat Train, commanded by Capt. William R. Denison, which are in camp with the regiment at Niantic, spent Tuesday night in the field in the third and final two-day problem in which the regiment participated.

The 192nd was stationed in a defensive position along the east bank of the Connecticut river, having left camp early Tuesday morning as a war strength battalion, and made a temporary camp in the vicinity of Rogers lake in preparation for occupying its designated "war" position under cover of darkness. At daybreak Wednesday morning the battalion theoretically defended its position in a simulated attack by "enemy" forces. In these maneuvers airplanes of the 43rd division from the airport at Groton co-operated with the artillery units. Particular stress was laid upon communications between the army forces and the planes. The regiment returned to camp Wednesday morning.

In the afternoon, the various gun crews of the regiment competed for the honor of being designated as the best gun crew and the communication sections had a contest to determine which was the most efficient in that branch of the service.

The outfit will have a light program this (Thursday) morning when field pieces will be loaded on freight cars for transportation back to their respective armories.

Friday will be Governor's day at camp and the troops will be reviewed either by Governor Trumbull, who is at present out of the state on a vacation, or Lieut.-Gov. Ernest E. Rogers in the event that Governor Trumbull does not return in time.

The regiment will complete its two weeks' encampment Saturday and on that day it will break camp and return to the various cities in the state from whence the various batteries come.

Only seventy-one years have elapsed since Colonel Edwin L. Drake completed the world's first oil well, near Titusville, Pennsylvania. During that period expansion of the oil industry has been startling. So have engineering development and progress in the refining of oils.

On the site of Colonel Drake's history-making well three generations of oil men have worked tirelessly toward giving you better oil from the highest grade crude in the world. Never content with past achievement, they have discarded methods and equipment that other refiners still call modern and up-to-the-minute. Today they offer you an oil produced by a special process that is not duplicated anywhere else in the world.

Penn Drake oil is a double-mileage oil in fact as well as in name. It is distilled at low temperatures under vacuum—heated for only fifteen seconds where conventional methods subject the oil to a scorching carbon-forming temperature for thirty-six hours. It reaches you with all the life in, ready to give you many added miles of motor-saving service. Buy it where you see the sign of the first oil well.

20 EUROPEAN POWERS FAVOR PAN-AMERICAN FEDERATION

Of 26 Governments Questioned Nearly Every One Expressed General Acceptance of the Idea, With a Number of Reservations—French Official Circles Consider That No Obstacles Have Been Revealed That Could Not Be Overcome At the Conference Table—All the Major Governments Have Replied to the Questionnaire—The British Government Has Registered Many Objections to the Briand Scheme.

PARIS, July 17—(AP)—Twenty European governments by tonight had expressed to France their views on Foreign Minister Briand's proposal for a Pan-European federation.

Of the 26 governments asked in a questionnaire to discuss the feasibility of such a union, nearly every respondent had voiced general acceptance of the idea in principle but had made a number of reservations.

The twentieth reply to arrive was the British. Its contents was not made known, but press dispatches from London indicated that the British answer, while non-committal on the matter of ways and means, would at the same time express a desire to collaborate in a further study of the possibilities of such a federation.

Despite the reservations expressed by most of the governments questioned, French official circles tonight considered that no obstacles to a closer European union had been revealed that could not be overcome at the conference table.

In fact, two of the three most serious reservations, it was pointed out, had already been discounted in Briand's memorandum.

These reservations were to the effect that the proposed federation must not clash with the league of nations, and that it must not be inimical to the interests of other continents.

A third reservation, namely, the the German and Italian desire for a revision of the treaties which ended the World war, raised a problem, it was felt here, that must be solved but that must not necessarily be a bar to a European union.

Another disturbing element was the idea expressed by Italy, Germany, and several other nations that Russia and Turkey must be invited to join the proposed union.

French opinion for the moment is inclined to be sceptical of any such arrangement. But again it was felt that this is merely another problem that may be ironed out at Geneva.

The twenty governments which have replied thus far include all the major powers questioned. The six nations whose replies are still awaited are the Irish Free State, Luxembourg, Switzerland, Jugoslavia, Greece and Bulgaria.

BRITISH OBJECTIONS TO THE BRIAND SCHEME

LONDON, July 17.—(AP)—Far reaching objections to Aristide Briand's scheme of a European federal union, often referred to as the United States of Europe, were advanced in the British reply which was made public tonight.

The British government joined issue with the French scheme chiefly in connection with the methods proposed by the French government for the realization of the Pan-European idea.

The British reply was stated to be merely of a preliminary and tentative character, for the Briand scheme demands "careful, prolonged consideration." and the British government feels it its duty to undertake that consideration in consultation with the dominions.

Nevertheless, the document goes on to say, his majesty's government understands the Briand scheme as being designed to promote closer cooperation between the nations of Europe, and to strengthen the safeguards against another European war.

With this aim, the document says, the British government is in fullest sympathy, as also with the French view that such cooperation can be obtained primarily in respect to economic relations.

It is in connection with the methods proposed by the French government for the realization of its purpose that the British government differs with the Briand scheme.

The reply states that if Great Britain understood the scheme correctly, it proposes to set up "new and independent international institutions. The British government is not convinced that this course is "either necessary or desirable."

These new bodies, the reply points out, "would in no way derive their authority from the covenant of the league of nations or from part thirteen of the treaty of Versailles." and would in no way be organically connected with the league of nations.

"Since the organs of the league have already begun work on virtually the whole of the program of practical action which the memorandum puts forward." the reply continues, "it is difficult to see how these new European institutions could operate without creating confusion and perhaps also a rivalry which, however little it might be intended or desired by the European governments, could hardly fail to diminish both the efficiency and the authority of the organs of the league."

The British government, moreover, according to its reply, thinks it possible that an exclusive and independent European union of the kind proposed may emphasize or create tendencies to inter-continental rivalries. In this connection, it is pointed out, there are special considerations of which his majesty's government must take account in the united kingdom as a member of the British commonwealth of nations.

The reply concludes by expressing the belief that the purpose of the French government can be secured effectively within the framework of the league of nations. It hopes the French government will think it desirable that the memorandum be placed on the agenda of the next assembly of the league.
